PATRIOTISM
Patriotism, like Charity, should begin at home. The man who is willing at any time to protect his country against foreign foes should be willing AT ALL TIMES to protect his Family against such common foes as Poverty, Privation and Suffering.
A Life Insurance Company cannot take the place of a Husband.
BUT---
It can preserve the family from want.
It can lighten their load of care.
It can build a barrier against adversity.
It can strengthen the foundation of the home.
It can certify to a man's affectionate regard for his family.
It can place his widow beyond the need of carrying for support.
It can add to a man's years by freeing him from anxiety.
It can enhance the respect and esteem of the public and of his wife and children for him.
Complete and absolute Family protection may be had by your taking a policy in THE SUN LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY OF CANADA—The LEADING CANADIAN LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

SIX NATIONAL LEAGUE CLUBS STILL IN PENNANT FIGHT

With the season more than one-third over critics are still fighting among each other trying to select the dangerous from the weak clubs in the National League. Managers of the clubs are prone to acknowledge strength in opponents, but as to their own entry they are mighty careful to keep quiet, or, as the old saying goes, say nothing but saw wood.

Although Wilbert Robinson's comhorts are successfully evading all attacks and are well out in front few outside of Brooklyn partisans care to predict a pennant for the Superbas. Acknowledging that Robinson is in command of a likely bunch of pitchers a star first baseman and two better than average outfielders is about as far as any disinterested party cares to talk about the Dodgers.

Brooklyn has been a great spring club for several years, and as consistently has floundered and fallen by the roadside near the end of the season. The weaknesses of the club have told upon it so often that few believe these same weaknesses will not deprive the club of the finishing power necessary to stall off the rush of the opponents.

TWO TAIL END CLUBS.

Picking out the probable clubs that may possess that power is a mighty hard proposition. It seems now that Philadelphia, the Giants and the Braves are sufficiently strong to make matters decidedly interesting for C. H. Ebbets' aggregation, and many believe that soon Chicago and Cincinnati will be stringing along at a pace rapid enough to overtake the leaders. Only Pittsburg and St. Louis seem to be out of the running, with a second division berth almost a certainty.

John McGraw's helpers have baffled the best of baseball followers. For the first month of the season the club played miserably. Then, making its first trip of the season, seventeen straight victories were registered. Following this the club came home for an extended stay and dropped nine games out of thirteen played. At home the pitching, excepting in the Chicago series, was consistently good, but the fielding and hitting fell off to such an extent that the pitching was wasted.

The Giants, on paper, appear to be as strong a team as any in the league. The outfield, with urna, Kauff, and Robertson, certainly outranks any in John K. Tener's circuit. Veterans are holding down the infield positions and are playing great baseball at times. In Bill Rariden the Giants have the best catcher in the league, a man whose quick thinking and brilliant work behind the bat should bring the greatest of confidence to the pitchers.

GOOD PITCHERS ON CLUB.

The pitching staff, composed of Anderson, Perritt, Tesreau, Benton and Mathewson, seems formidable enough to stand off the attacks of any other team. Only recently the five above named were flinging a brand of baseball that excelled that of any other pitchers excepting possibly Alexander, Pfeffer and Mamaux.

With all this known strength the Giants have fallen from second place to fourth. McGraw does not know what ails his club. He admits that he has hitters enough to scare most pitchers to death. He says that his pitchers are doing splendidly, and he admits that the club just simply cannot win when victory is necessary. Miserable errors have cost the Giants many games this season, and it is a fact that the 'breaks' have favoured the opposition just at the time when such unlooked for happenings hurt the most. McGraw has not given up hope for a pennant yet and certainly will not do so for some time.

The Phillies have been playing good baseball from the start of the race, and refuse to be counted out in the running. If 'Pat' Moran had one more dependable pitcher to work with Alexander it seems improbable tha he could be kept from repeating his triumph of last year.

Boston without Evers is as a ship without a rudder. With Evers in the lineup the team seems fortified against attack and possessing enough offensive to drive past the other clubs. Right now George Stallings is getting a lot of good pitching from the youngsters on the club. Nehf, Barnes and Hughes especially doing fine work. Rudolph and Tyler are still dependable, which makes the Braves appear once more as flag contenders.

YANKEES HAVE CHANCE.

In the American League the Yankees must be rated the dark horse of the eight entered. To date the men under 'Bill' Donovan have not performed any miracles, which makes the club seem all the more to be feared. Baker, Magee, Hugh and Pipp have not hit with anything like the regularity that was expected of them and Caldwell has not pitched as he can. It is not improbable that these men will respond soon and then the club will be doubly hard to beat.

The Yankees, according to most followers of the game, have the best chance of winning the pennant in the American League that a New York team has ever had. A great pitching staff, composed of Fischr, Caldwell, Keating, Cullop, Shawkey, Mogridge, Russell and Markle, any one of whom can serve up enough baffling curves to sidetrack any hitter in the land, makes the team formidable even without counting upon the other luminaries in the club.

The reserve strength of the Yankees possibly outshines that of any other major league club. With Baumann, Mullen and Boone for the infield and Hartsell in the outfield, the Yankees need fear no disadvantage from injuries to the regulars. For that matter either Baumann or Mullen could displace some of the regulars and benefit the club.

OWNERS ARE OPTIMISTIC.

Both Colonel Jacob Ruppert and Captain T. L. Huston, owners of the club, are optimistically hoping for the best. They have been led to believe that a pennant is not impossible, and they are expecting at least a great fight before the team is finally forced to acknowledge defeat.

It is expected that 'Fritz' Maisel who fractured his collar bone six weeks ago, will be back with the club in a few days. Maisel has been at his home taking care of the injured shoulder, but reports that he is feeling too near fighting form to spend his time sitting around. Just where Donovan will find a place for Maisel is hard to tell. The little fellow is too valuable to leave on the bench, and the present outfield is doing so well Donovan will hate to break up the combination. It has been rumoured that when Maisel is finally placed again in the line-up he will be in centre field and Lee Magee will be doing the work around second base.

One of the spring pacemakers of the younger league already is showing signs of the hard work and has slipped into the second division, this being the Washington team. Four straight defeats at the hands of the Yankees practically killed the chances of Washington for this year. Cleveland, too, seems about ready to relinquish its place at the top of the clubs rated stronger.

The only teams that seem to be open for fight with the Yankees are Detroit and Boston. In the last three weeks these two great combinations have made rapid strides for the top and have gained so fast that the present leaders have been unable to hang on. Only the Yankees appear to possess enough strength to combat the Tigers and Red Sox right up to the finish line.

"YES," SHE SAID, IN DICTAGRAPH TO PROPOSAL

West Virginia Girl Answers Love's Sweet Song That Came Through a Machine.

PARKENSBURG, W. Va., June 28—Because he could not muster sufficient courage to propose to his sweetheart, Alfred B. Manning, a prosperous business man of this city, recited his proposal to a dictograph. Several records were destroyed before he finally had one couched in endearing terms and yet which not be mistaken by the recipient. When the proposal was finally completed he sent the record to his sweetheart.

The next day he received a package and found a record. Thinking it might have been his own returned he put it on the machine and heard but one word, "Yes!" Then he called around at the young woman's home and arranged for the wedding, which will be held next week.

Voice of the People

Editor Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I see that a writer in your evening contemporary rather resents me airing my views on recruiting, but I notice at the same time that he did not reply to any statement I made. It is a very old journalistic trick to put up a stuffed figure for the purpose of knocking it down, and that is what the writer in question did in last night's issue. Why does he assume that I am opposed to compulsory military service? I simply stated that there did not seem any prospect of it being passed under present circumstances. I am a firm believer in compulsion, but that does not make me blind to facts. Does the writer believe there is one responsible statesman in Canada to-day brave enough to father such a measure? And if such a measure was put to a referendum vote what would be the result? He says I am trying to raise racial prejudices and that I made special reference to a particular township, but I mentioned three townships, and they happen to be the ones I am acquainted with. That comes with good grace from a writer who in the next editorial accuses Quebec of not having done its duty in this war. I must not criticize a township, but he can censure a province. I am not a believer in the present mode of persuasion, but that happens to be the only tool we have at present, and I am not in favour of dropping it till we get a better. I hope the country is closer to compulsion than I imagine, for in that event the sons my wife have said good-bye to will not be fighting for people who at present are staying at home enjoying the benefit. I probably know as much about the form of government I am living under as the writer, and I also know that military compulsion may be compatible under democracy.

"Citizen and his class" will not oppose compulsion for the simple reason that they have had experience of voluntary military service and believe that men who enjoy the benefits of British rule should fight for them. With regard to the figures he quotes I can neither affirm nor deny that 33 per cent. of men enlisted are returned back as unfit, but I bee leave to doubt it. Our present business is to fill the 33rd, and with the reputation they have gained, both in the camp and in Kingston itself, every mother in Peterborough should be proud to see her son in it. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I remain,

Yours truly,
"CITIZEN."

REQUISITION FOR HARVEST WORKERS

HUNGARY DEMANDS SERVICES OF RESIDENTS AND PRISONERS AND IMPORTS STILL OTHERS.

BUDAPEST, via Berlin to London, June 28.—With memories of the 1915 weather fresh in mind and the freakish weather of the last three weeks as a warning that a record crop can easily be turned overnight into a partial failure, the Hungarian agricultural authorities have decided upon radical measures to harvest the 1916 crops in the speediest possible manner.

The municipal local authorities throughout the country have been empowered to requisition for harvesting purposes the services of every man woman and child at home, not serving the State in some indispensible way, at fixed wages. Prisoners of war working in non-military concerns have also been requisitioned for the harvesting. Several thousand workmen have been imported from Russian Poland, and all the troops in the interior who can be spared will be furloughed for the same purpose.

The Ministry of Agriculture has acquired all available harvesting machinery for distribution among the peasantry, and agricultural experts estimate that six weeks of sunshine after the long rains will result in the production of a record breaking crop in Hungary.

HEART DISEASE KILLS NASTURTIUM GREAT RACE HORSE

Was Purchased by W. C. Whitney for $50,000 When Three Years Old.

LEXINGTON, Ky., June 28.—Nasturtium, the noted thoroughbred race horse and sire, winner of the double event and the Flatbush stakes at Sheepshead Bay race track in 1909, died of heart disease at the stud of his owner, George J. Stroll, here.

Nasturtium as a three-year-old, was purchased by W. C. Whitney for $50,000. He was the sire of many prominent winners of the last several years.

RESULTS OF THE LAWN BOWLING

The Brightman rink won the silver trophies for the full rink games last evening.

The games were very even, sometimes on one side and sometimes favouring the opponents, the victors winning out by only one shot.

Waddell	1002000111—6
Vosden	0110111000—5
Waddell	1100001220 30—10
Brightman	0012120002 02—11

The prizes will be presented at the annual meeting in October.

Next week, on Monday, the contest will be doubles.

In the first rounds skips and leads will be drawn against their own class, and the surviving rinks will play against each other.

The games will be thirteen points. The names will be drawn and announced later.

BAR GERMANS FROM FRANCE.

Bill to Exclude Them for Ever is Before French Government.

PARIS, June 27.—A bill to exclude all Germans from France for ever has been prepared by the French Government. The measure is shortly to be submitted to Parliament, and will without doubt be passed, as, with the exception of one Socialistic organ, all the newspapers enthusiastically endorse it.

The newspapers point to the American law excluding the Chinese from the United States as an analogy. They advocate that all of the Allied countries keep the Germans, Austrians and Hungarians out of their territories in the future.

The Journal thinks that the neutral nations should be asked to close their frontiers not only against German immigration, but also against German travellers.

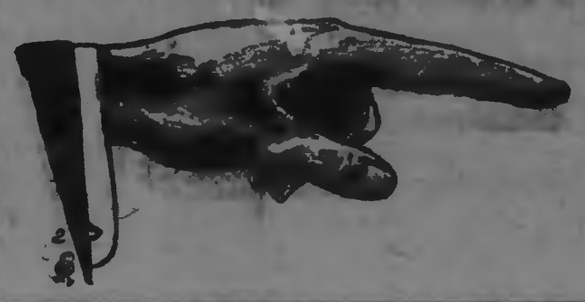
BILLY SHERRING ENLISTS.

Well Known Marathon Runner Joins Tiger Battalion.

HAMILTON, June 27.—Another noted athlete has joined the colours in the person of "Billy Sherring," the well-known marathon runner. Sherring came into prominence when he won the Olympic marathon at Athens, Greece. He also won the Boston marathon on one occasion and was a double winner of the Hamilton Herald race. He gave up his position in the Customs House to join the 235th (Tiger) Battalion. His brother is already at the front with the Army Service Corps.

TO-NIGHT - GRAND OPERA HOUSE

"BATTLE CRY OF PEACE"



THE BEST WAR PICTURE EVER SHOWN

Endorsed By Ottawa Government

This Most Thrilling and Realistic War Drama Will be Exhibited in 9 Reels

THIS PICTURE not only shows what the Huns did in Belgium, but what would positively transpire should the Germans ever get to Canada's shores or the United States.

It shows what would happen to Canadian homes, women and children should the Germans ever get to this continent. The Star Theatre, Toronto, did the largest business in the history with "The Battle Cry of Peace," and its manager expresses through the press his highest admiration for this wonderful patriotic film.

It not only shows the danger of German aggression, but displays in unmistakable words, Canada's and the Empire's necessity for preparedness and a stern resolve to defend our homes and ourselves.

The Strand ran this picture for two full weeks with crowded and delighted audiences and was compelled to play a return engagement for another week.

CANADIAN ENDORSEMENT

Lieut. Col. J. C. Might, O. C. of the 169th Battalion (O. S.), under official heading of the Dept. of Militia, strongly endorses this picture as the grandest war film, with historical and educational interest, ever produced. He tells how, by showing German atrocities in Belgium, taken right on the spot, Zeppelins in action and other real war scenes, it should greatly assist in recruiting. It, according to his statements, shows the absolute necessity for "preparedness" in Canada. Another part of his letter says: "This picture should be seen by every man not in khaki and if the women, too, could witness the awful sights so vividly depicted, it is difficult to believe that they would hold back any longer from letting their men do their duty."

Mayor Church of Toronto, over his signature, in an autograph letter, praising "The Battle Cry of Peace" and advising every man and woman to see this splendid 9-reel war picture, says that it will go down in history as an epic.

WEDDING BELLS

COLLINS—DELAIRE.

A pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Peter's cathedral yesterday morning, when Mary Agnes Delaire, daughter of Patrick Delaire, Park street was married to Thomas Joseph Collins, of Ashburnham. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Corrine Delaire, and the best man was a brother of the groom, Mr. James Collins.

During the service solos were sung by Mr. Ed. Hanrahan and Joseph Minicola. Miss Doherty played the wedding march when the bridal party entered the cathedral.

Mr. and Mrs. Collins left for a trip on the noon train for Toronto and Buffalo.

FAIR—WESTALL.

The marriage took place to-day of Helen F. Westall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Westall, 639 Water street, to Mr. Willard H. Fair, son of Mr. and Mrs. Valentine Fair, Reid street. The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride's parents at one-thirty o'clock. Rev. F. J. MacKenzie of Knox Presbyterian church, officiated.

Mr. David Morgan acted as best man, while Miss Lottie Fair performed the duties of bridesmaid.

Mr. and Mrs. Fair left on the afternoon train for Toronto and points west. They will reside in Peterborough upon their return.

Early Closing For Summer

The Cressman store announces early closing for July and August. On all week days except Thursday and Saturday the store will close at 5.30 p.m. daily while on Thursday 12.30 noon will be the closing hour. The summer schedule will be appreciated by the employees.

MOONLIGHT OUTINGS FOR TOBACCO FUND

A very enthusiastic meeting of those interested in the Overseas Tobacco Fund was held last evening in the Bank of Montreal chambers. A committee to superintend the collection of the money for the Tobacco Fund was appointed with a chairman for same. Mr. Frank Young, manager of the Stoney Lake Navigation Company, has offered his boat for moonlight excursions, which was greatly appreciated and accepted. Arrangements will be made to take advantage of Mr. Young's offer and the date announced later.

Peterborough has some 600 men at the front and the Overseas Club has only been able to supply about 240 with tobacco. Up to June 23rd, 340 lbs. has been sent to the London branch of the Overseas Club. A strenuous effort will be made to increase the amount for the Tobacco Fund so that all the men at the front will receive a regular supply.

By-law Carried By An Overwhelming Majority

The Net Majority Was Four Hundred and Eighteen Votes or More Than Four Times the Required Number---The Vote By Sub divisions

The by-law to aid the Bonner-Worth Manufacturing Company, carried yesterday, by an overwhelming majority. Four hundred and eighty-one votes were polled. Of this number, four hundred and eighteen votes were cast in favour of the by-law, and sixty-three against. Taking the negative figure as a basis, and remembering that three-fifths of the total vote polled, was required to carry the by-law, the number required to carry the by-law according to yesterday's vote, is ninety-five. The net majority was four hundred and eighteen, or more than four times the required number.

THE VOTE.

The vote by the various sub-divisions was as follows:

	For	Against	Majority
Division 1-2, M. H. Halpin's, 39 George street....	35	8	27
Division 3-5, T. J. Murray's, 111 Rubidge street..	28	6	22

Attacks Repulsed, Says Berlin Report

Examiner Special

BERLIN, June 28.—French attacks on the village of Fleury and the ridge of Froide Terre, northeast of Verdun, broke down, though preceded by intense artillery fire, the War Office announced to-day. The War Office announced the repulse of strong British attacks along the La Bassee Canal and near Somme River.

DON'T MISS YOUR CHANCE

See "The Battle Cry of Peace" at the Grand To-night

Peterborough people should not lose the last opportunity to see the "Battle Cry of Peace" which will be shown at the Grand Opera House to-night. This wonnderful picture is one that grips and entrals from the first reel and that teaches a lesson that no one should miss. No more thrilling picture has ever been shown in Peterborough. It is more interesting than "The Birth of a Nation". The spectacle of New York crumbling to pieces under the fire of hostile ships alone makes the film stand out over anything shown here a don't miss the "Battle Cry of Peace" you have your last chance to-night.

MR. FRED. L. ROY IS BEREAVED

HAMILTON, June 27. —Alderman R. M. Roy died early this afternoon. He was seized with convulsions in the night and this morning it was reported that his condition was hopeless. The end came shortly after noon. In the spring the deceased was in the city hospital suffering from severe stomach trouble, but he recovered sufficiently to be taken home. He was able to get about the house and about ten days ago he removed to Ancaster for the summer. Last Saturday he experienced a relapse and he has been lying in a serious condition ever since.

Alderman Roy was a very useful member of the city council until illness laid him low. He first gained municipal honours in 1913, when he was elected by a large majority to represent ward 3. He was returned by acclamation in 1914-15, but in January of this year he underwent a contest, and was returned by a substantial majority. In 1915 and 1916 he was chairman of the works committee.

The deceased, who was about forty-six years of age, was born in Belleville and came from Peterborough to Hamilton about eighteen years ago. During the past six years he has been manager and director of the Hamilton Bridge works.

He leaves to mourn his loss a wife, and four sons— Maitland, who is a lieutenant in the Indian army and is now in Somaliland; Stewart, at home; Jack, at home, and an infant son.

The late Mr. Roy was an enthusiastic Mason and appreciated greatly the higher qualities of Masonic doctrine. He was a 32 degree Mason of the Scottish Rite and a member of The Barton lodge.

The funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Ald. Roy was the son of the late R. M. Roy, of Peterborough, and a brother of Mr. Fred L. Roy, of the Roy studio.

TELEPHONE POLES ON DICKSON STREET

Mr. G. O. Cameron, local manager of the Bell Telephone Company waited on the Council last night with regard to certain objections that had been raised by residents of Dickson street to a line of telephone poles. He pointed out that the company had a line on Mr. Wm. Davidson's property but it had been ordered removed. Mr. Cameron outlined the local situation on the street and on Ald. Dobbin's motion the company was given power to run their poles on the east side of the street if a satisfactory right of way could not be arranged with Mr. Davidson.

TWO JUMP TO DEATH

MAN AND WOMAN DELIRIOUS FROM PNEUMONIA LEAP FROM HOSPITAL WINDOWS.

NEW YORK, June 27.—Becoming delirious while suffering from pneumonia, a man and a woman leaped to death from windows in the hospitals in which they were being treated.

Mrs. Anna O'Shea, twenty-eight years old, of No. 44 West Sixty-fourth street, jumped from a third floor window of Roosevelt Hospital. She was the wife of Stephen O'Shea, proprietor of a cafe.

James Griffin, seaman, forty-two years old, of No. 359 West Nineteenth street, threw himself from a window of the Volunteer Hospital, in Water street. As a result of the fall only his arm was broken, but physicians said he probably died of shock. He contracted pneumonia after falling into the East River.

Every third garage in Canada is a Ford sales and service station

Service is only important to you when you need it—then it is very important.

Even the best of motor cars, sometimes require attention. If you are a Ford owner, a third of Canada's garages assure you this attention when you need it—without inconvenience and at a minimum of expense.

Every one of the five hundred and fifty Ford Dealers in Canada carries a complete stock of Ford spare parts and is competent to make repairs and adjustments when occasion demands.

No matter where you go, Ford Service is never out of reach if you drive a Ford.

Like the Ford car itself—Ford Service is universal.

Must Crush Foe To A Nonentity

(By Dr. E. J. Dillon.)

PARIS, June 24.—The economic outlook after the war as a result of the Paris economic conference depends mainly on the plight to which the allied armies will reduce the Teutons. Our principal aim—to crush the enemy to a nonentity—can be attained only by a military victory which shall enable us to dictate our own terms to the central empires.

This object achieved, a campaign is required to defend ourselves against a Teuton interpretation which would necessitate fewer and less painful sacrifices on the part of the separate allies than is deemed indispensable to-day.

Any such mutual concessions as might still be judged necessary would be greatly facilitated by the existence of a mighty empire well organised and equipped with all the means to furthering the interests of his friends and realising the desire common to them all—lasting peace.

IT IS A "TIME FOR DISAPPEARING".

"So thick it could be cut with a knife" is the silence just now prevailing in the circles at Washington where but a short time ago the air was being rent by oratorical flashes of indignation over the assumption of the Entente Allies in establishing and maintaining a blockade. Even that valiant vassal of King Cotton, Hochdar Schmidt, might have been struck dumb for all that is being heard from him.

While there have been other and important factors contributing to this silence, can there be doubt that its chief incentive is realisation that if war comes with Mexico the United States will promptly proclaim and enforce a blockade of both coasts of that unfortunate republic?

And that when a blockade of Mexican ports does come it will be governed by the same "made in America" rules and principles that govern the blockade of the Allies? And that if there is any rending of the air by nations believing their commerce to be injured thereby the government of the United States will hold their claims to be a matter for adjudication by the proper tribunals after the war is over, just as France and Great Britain now hold in respect to claims arising from the blockade in force against Germany.—New York Herald.

After greeting in the street the other day, one of two friends, who was supposed to be a wit, said the other, "Say, old man, have you heard about the young lady who poured a jug of water into a straw hat?" "No," replied his friend. "Neither have I" said the wit, as he walked away; "it hasn't leaked out yet".

Italian Offensive Is Gaining Ground Despite Desperate Enemy Attacks

Occupation of Peak Facing Val Sugana Permits Entire Army to Undertake Advance Under Shelter of Great Artillery Fire---Fighting in Labaryinths of Ravines. Where Only Exits Are Cunningly Hid Traps.

THE IRON WALL

ROME, June 29.—A victory was won by the Italians on Mount Isidoro.

The first details of the new Italian offensive, which seems to be continuing its progress despite the desperate attempts of the Austrians to stem it, are as follows:

"The battle began in a torrential downpour. It was at midnight on Saturday. Our right wing felt the Austrian resistance weakening and pressed forward along the lofty Cimpione plateau. Then the Alpine infantry in a daring and complicated manoeuvre began a movement which ended in their occupying the peak of Monte Isidore, facing Val Sagana, capturing a complete battery still loaded.

"Our entire right wing under the advantage of this very strong point of support then developed the offensive. An imposing concentration of men and guns gave an irresistible strength to it, though our men were faced by truly formidable position, desperately defended by picked troops. Our progress at first was slow and painful, but it was constant.

"The fighting developed along rugged country, thickly wooded in its greatest portion and with labyrinths of ravines, the only means of egress from which hid cunning traps where many of our brave boys were literally torn to pieces. Austrian snipers hiding in the tree tops seemed to obey given orders in picking out the Italian officers. The forest trembled with echoes of the fighting.

"Day and night secondary engagements which in other wars would be termed battle occurred without respite. Every undulation of the ground had to be taken by assault; the slightest irregularities afforded the retreating Austrians a few minutes' respite wherein to try to stop our advance. Some of the thickest woods were hotly disputed. At last the right wing again advanced, reaching the enemy positions on Monte Cengio and exerting formidable pressure against its well organized defences.

"The left wing after a period in which the Italians had to exert to the utmost their magnificent powers of resistance ultimately succeeded in breaking through the enemy lines in the Asiago basin, cutting all means of retreat of the Austro-Hungarian troops. These attempted disorderly but desperate attacks in every direction. The enemy tried obstinately to break the iron wall by which he was surrounded, wel laware of his danger thanks to the efficient work of his aviators warning him of our concentrations.

"While on the northeast our infantry continued the advance several Italian batteries of enormous calibre placer at the point where the Astico Valley debouches into the plain demolished the defences on Monte Cengio and smashed the works to the north a Asiago, their combined fires dominating the whole sector.

"The enemy in the Asiago region had bue one road of retreat, that encased in the Assa Valley. When our advanced posts reached the top of Monte Mandriolo the enemy, seeing his communications seriously menaced, began a general retreat."

CHIEF INSPECTOR FINDS THE CAISSONS RESTING ON SAND

Manitoba Parliament Buildings Have No Supports—Evidence in Kelly Case

FORMER PROVINCIAL ARCHITECT ADMITS GIVING CONFLICTING EVIDENCE.

WINNIPEG, June 28. — Ten witnesses were heard in the Assize Court yesterday in the trial of Thos. Kelly.

V. W. Horwood, former provincial architect, recalled to-day, at the suggestion of Mr. Justice Pdendergast, stated, in reply to questions from his Lordship, that before the public accounts committee he had testified on material matters, and under oath, differenetly from his evidence at the present trial.

Thomas Wallace, the last witness of the day, produced bottles of silt—a mixture of water and sand—which, he said, were taken from below various caissons which help to bear the weight of the parliament buildings. Between the caissons and rock, he said, there was found, by excavation, in various cases, from fourteen to about twenty feet of boulder clay and silt.

Wallace, since last September, had been chief inspector for the Government on the parliament buildings.

Hugh B. Yyall of the Manitoba Bridge and Iron Works, swore that a reasonable price for the steel superstructure of the north wing, allowing a 10 per cent profit and providing for erection, would have been $94,944.

A contract was given Thomas Kelly for this work at $230,100.

Machu Picchu Died With Its Founders

The Incas, using the word broadly, showed an extraordinary liking for building on spots where they had an unbroken outlook over all the surrounding county, writes Harry A. Franck, in the Century. Lovers of nature, perhaps, though the apparent complete indifference of their descendants to its charms and moods, makes this debatable, they were above all practical fellows, moved less by aesthetic reasons than by an overwhelming dislike to be wakened from the afternoon siesta by a well aimed bowlder.

Yet had their only quest been unrivalled situations, that of Machu Picchu could scarcely have been improved upon. Mere words and pictures give but a faint idea of the unique charm of the place. The earth offers few such views as that from the top of the town.

The altitude of the city is put at 8,500 feet and that of the river 6,500, yet it is surprising how clearly, if hushed, the roar of the river comes unbrokenly up the two thousand sheer feet to the invulnerable city. Utterly unpeopled, the visible world is one tumbled mass of gigantic forest clad mountains rolling away to inaccessible distances, blue ranges rising afar to snow capped crests mingled with the sky; not the haggard and sterile Andes of elsewhere, but softened forms so densely wooded that nowhere is a spot of earth visible. Swing around the circle and on the other side the gaze falls as precipitously into the Urubamba.

Three great blue ranges rise one behind the other, growing from blue to purple further off, the central Cordilleras shutting off all the world beyond, seemingly near at hand, yet only a week or hard travel would attain it. In another direction the rolling ranges, faded to purple, die enticingly away one behind another, while masses of pure white clouds come majestically up out of Brazil beyond.

Dangerous, Says Selborne

WOULD MAKE NO CHANGE IN GOVERNMENT NOW BUT GUARANTEE HOME RULE AFTER THE WAR.

LONDON, June 27.—The Earl of Selborne explained in the House of Lords to-day the reasons for his retirement from the Cabinet as President of the Board of Agriculture. As had been believed, his resignation was due to dissatisfaction with the proposed settlement of the Irish question.

The Earl said his understanding of the basis of the inquiry made by David Lloyd George was that it contemplated an amendment of the Home Rule Act, whereby Ulster or a part thereof should be excluded from the operation of the act, and that the bill of exclusion should be passed during the war, but that neither the principal act nor the amending act would come into operation until the restoration of peace. In this belief he concurred in the appointment of Mr. Lloyd George to take up the negotiations.

HANDED IN RESIGNATION.

When, at Whitsuntide, he learned the basis of the inquiry had been changed, the Earl continued, and that it had become part of the proposed settlement that Home Rule, with the qualifications mentioned, should come into operation during the war, he informed Premier Asquith he could take no responsibility for such apolicy, and handed in his resignation. He said he was ready to arrange for the exclusion of Ulster now and to give every guarantee that Home Rule would come into operation after the war, but he considered it dangerous to make the change during the war, owing to the disturbed conditions in Ireland.

"I say this," he added, "while acknowledging in the fullest way the loyal and patriotic action of John Redmond during the war."

MRS. REGESTER SHOOTS SELF; CAN'T LIVE

Buffalo, June 27.—Mrs. Wendel Regester, wife of Dr. Hyatt Regester, of 615 Elmwood Avenue, is at her home in a very critical condition as the result of a gunshot wound which Police Inspector Girvin is satisfied she inflicted on herself. Part of her skull and right eye are blown away. Mrs. Regester was sinking at 10 o'clock, and Dr. Monroe Manges said that there was very little hope for her recovery. The shooting occurred on Saturday morning.

Dr. Regester found his wife lying on the attic floor. He says she told him she did not known why she shot herself. Medical Examiner Stocker, who was summoned, heard her say, "It is all right." He said that he was satisfied that Mrs. Regester shot herself, and so reported to Inspector Girvin.

Mrs. Regester during the past two weeks had been staying at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Farnsworth, in Bryant street, following a disagreement with her husband. On Friday she left there and according to the police, returned to her home, where she and Dr. Regester talked over their affairs and decided to take them out of the hands of the lawyers. Mrs. Regester was not able to sleep during the night, and early in the day, Dr. Regester told the authorities, he found her in the attic fitting the barrel to the stock of a shot gun. Nothing was made of the incident as Mrs. Regester is experienced in the use of hunting weapons. About nine o'clock in the morning according to the information gathered by the police, when the doctor thought that she was in the kitchen preparing breakfast he heard a fall upstairs. Rushing up he found Mrs. Regester lying on the floor, wounded.

HEAD HUNTERS ENJOY FREEDOM

Sydney, N.S.W., June 26.—At first sight there does not seem to be a very close connection between the war in Europe and head hunting in the Solomon Islands. Nevertheless, the one arises from the other.

Previous to the outbreak of the war British and occasionally German warships patrolled the islands and endeavored to keep down cannibalism amongst the natives, who are largely of Papuan or Malaysian stock. However, the requirements of the Commonwealth Government for the transport troops led to the recall of the British warships—the Germans having left of their own accord—and the happy head-hunter has been free to follow his own devious ways.

OPEN SEASON FOR HEADS.

The result has been an enormous increase in murder amongst the natives. So many whites have enlisted for active service that no regular force could be collected to suppress the criminal practices. Consequently the natives get the impression that they could do as they pleased.

They are doing so. In one raid made by a mountain tribe upon a small village near the coast, no less than twenty-six heads were secured. No punishment followed because the whites were unable to organize in time. As a consequence the raids are growing more and more dangerous and although, as yet, no Europeans have been attacked, planters have constantly to keep on their guard.

VERY TREACHEROUS.

The natives are born to be very treacherous and in former times when there were only a few whites residents on the island trading in copra, pearls and ivory, as well as cultivating cocoa and coffee, murders of Europeans were quite common.

DRINK A GLASS OF REAL HOT WATER BEFORE BREAKFAST.

Says we will both look and feel clean, sweet and fresh and avoid illness.

Sanitary science has of late made rapid strides with results that are of untold blessings to humanity. The latest application of its unsparing research is the recommendation that it is as necessary to attend to internal sanitation of the drainage system of the human body as it is to the drains of the house.

Those of us who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when we arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the phosphated hot water is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble, rheumatic stiffness, others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

PATRIOTIC FUND MONEY.

Guelph Manufacturer's Letter on Its Effect on Women.

D. M. Sanson, president of Dominion Linens, Ltd., Guelph, claims that one result of Patriotic Fund grants to wives of soldiers is that they are afraid to take working positions lest their allowance be cut off. He says that conditions in his own city are the same in other Canadian centres, and the matter is a serious one for Canada, as it means the women are not responding to the call for workers as are the women of France and England. President Sanson sets forth the matter in a letter to Sir Herbert Ames, chairman of the Canadian Patriotic Fund, as follows:

Guelph, June 20, 1916.

Sir Herbert Ames,
Montreal, Que.

Canadian working women receiving Patriotic Fund allowance have retired so far as work is concerned. I refer particularly to the class who have always worked. These women are now nonproducers, and the matter is becoming very serious for Canadian manufacturers. Our imports, largely from the United States, the first four months of this year increased ninety-two million dollars, compared with 1915. Apparently women will not work for fear the patriotic money be cut off. Why not pay them if they work or pay one-half the present allowance on condition they work? I believe the matter calls for serious consideration.

COMPULSORY HARVESTING.

Hungary to Make Men, Women, and Children Assist in Fields.

BUDAPEST, June 27. — With memories of the 1915 weather fresh in mind and the freakish weather of the past three weeks as a warning that a record crop can easily be turned over right into a partial failure, the Hungarian agricultural authorities have decided upon unusual and radical measures to harvest the 1916 crops in the speediest possible manner.

The municipal local authorities throughout the country have been empowered to requisition for harvesting purposes the services of every man, woman and child at home, not serving the state in some indispensable way, at fixed wages. Prisoners of war working in non-military concerns have also been requisitioned for the harvesting; several thousand workmen have been imported from Russian Poland and all the troops in the interior who can be spared will be furloughed for the same purpose.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Doll's House

By ELINOR MARSH

Train robberies, which had quieted down during the early part of 19—, broke out with renewed vigor in the autumn of that year. One of these attacks was not only well planned, so far as getting treasure was concerned, but in getting away with it.

Jim Charnley was the leader of the band that made the attack and chose the field of enterprise by personally investigating different points on the railroad he proposed to operate on. He discovered a cave concealed by thick undergrowth where a party of men might hide. So far as he could learn, no one knew of it. He proposed to rob a train as it passed within a few hundred yards of this cave. A part of the force would make off on horseback while another part with the plunder hid in the cave. A posse would follow those who had ridden away while the men in the cave waited till the excitement had died out and then make off.

The robbery was eminently successful. The train was stopped and the plunder taken from the express car. The robbers made off through a wood, dropping the treasure into the hands of four men who made their way to the cave unseen. Those who had ridden away were followed but not captured.

A surprise awaited those who had gone to the cave, among whom was Jim Charnley, the leader of the gang. He had not been to the cave since he had discovered it several weeks before. On entering it he saw a doll in a little bed and several articles of doll furniture beside it.

The presence of this inanimate combination of china and sawdust caused a commotion on the part of the robbers. Some of them, fearing that their presence there might be discovered, were for moving at once. But Charnley argued that the region of the robbery would be filled with persons moved by curiosity, if nothing more, and that any move for the present would be dangerous. If the child came to play in the cave she could be taken in and held from giving information of their presence.

Little Margy Bickford, who lived on the other side of the rise from the mouth of the cave, was the child who had made the place a playhouse. On the afternoon of the robbery she started to go there to get her doll and bring it home. Coming to the rise, she passed over the roof of the cave, where there was a break in the rock that formed it, not sufficient to let in light, but through which sound might pass. The robbers had closed up the mouth of the cave and supposed that they might talk with freedom. At the time Margy was passing over the break in the roof they were discussing whether they should get out or remain where they were. The question was a matter of life or death with them, and their arguments were by no means subdued. Margy, hearing voices in the bowels of the earth beneath her, turned and ran back home as fast as her little legs would carry her. Her mother, seeing that the child had been frightened, questioned her and was told that some men were in her playhouse and would take her dolly away with them.

Mrs. Bickford had heard of the train robbery, and it was not long before she began to suspect the truth concerning the voices her daughter had heard in the cave. She went at once to a neighbor and reported the case. Unfortunately most of the men there-about had gone off after the robbers who had ridden away, and not enough men could be got together to warrant attacking an unknown number of desperadoes ensconced in a cave, so nothing was done except to station a boy of sixteen to watch the hiding place.

Charnley decided to remain where the robbers were only till midnight, then to walk to the nearest station two miles distant and board a train that would stop there at a few minutes after 1 o'clock.

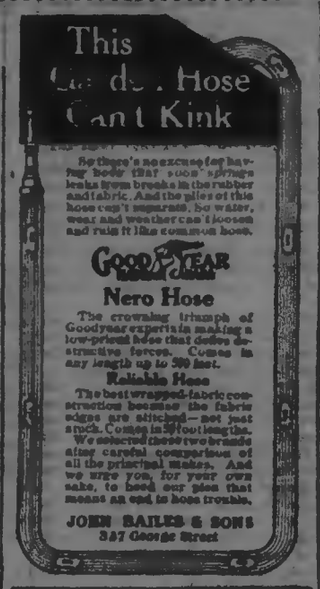
Billy Simpson, who was on watch, saw them leave the cave. He followed them to the station, near which they waited till they heard the train coming, and then went up on to the platform. Billy went to the rear car unseen by them and got aboard at the same time they did. There were four men in the gang, but they took separate seats. They paid the conductor their fare, and he passed on to the rear car, where Billy informed him as to the nature of the passengers who had just got on the train.

The conductor wrote a telegram, which he gave to Billy, instructing him to get off at the next station, five miles distant, and send it, believing that his own motions would be watched by the robbers. On reaching the station Billy stepped off on the dark side of the car unseen, and the train went on. The agent was in bed, but Billy routed him out, and the telegram was sent to a sizable town ten miles distant.

Meanwhile the conductor directed the engineer to slack speed that sufficient time might be given for preparation for a capture.

But few men could be got together in so short a time, and they were disguised, having boarded the train and went on with it. The robbers began to leave it one by one, thinking they were unsuspected. This rendered their capture easy, and they were all seized without a fight.

Little Margy, who had saved $40,000, was adopted by the express company. Billy was given a handsome reward and later a position on the railroad.



THE BURDEN OF AGE.

The kidneys seem to be about the first organs to wear out and fail to properly perform their work. The result is weak, lame, aching back, rheumatic pains and failing eyesight. Many people of advanced years have recovered health and comfort by using Dr. Chase's Kidney Liver Pills. They ensure the healthful action of liver, kidneys and bowels.

HOW TO BECOME A WEATHER PROPHET

If you want fine weather look for fine weather signs. Here are some of the most reliable, for they are based upon scientific facts.

When the sun sets in a sea of glory, that is when the sunset sky is red, you may expect clear weather on the following day.

At night when the moon is clear, and shows clean edges, with no halo or ring of mist surrounding it, there is little danger of rain.

When the wind blows steadily from the west the weather will continue fair. It very rarely rains in our eastern states with the wind in the west.

Watch the smoke from a chimney or from your campfire—it is a good barometer. If the smoke rises high it means clear weather. The smoke will also show you from which direction the wind is blowing; so will a flag on an upright flagstaff.

A gray early morning, not a heavy, cloudy one, promises a fair day.

A heavy dew at night is seldom followed by rain the next day. Think of it this way, and you will remember: Wet feet, dry head.

If there are no clouds in the western horizon you need not worry about the others.

Animals are said often to show by their actions what the weather will be, and there is reason in this. Some of them certainly have a knowledge of coming storms. We are told that spiders are especially sensitive to weather changes, and when they make new webs the weather will be fair; if they continue spinning during a shower it will soon clear off.

Sincere sympathy is extended to the bereaved family.

TROOPS' STEADY MOVEMENT.

Large Number of the Fourth Division Have Already Left England for the Firing Line.

OTTAWA, June 27. — The heavy losses which were sustained by the Canadians at the battle of Hooge and the engagements which came after it have necessitated a steady movement of reinforcements across the Channel.

The Fourth Canadian Division, under General David Watson, has not gone over yet as a body, but 7,500 men out of the total of 25,000 have gone, and their places have been filled by troops from Canada, recently arriving in England and stationed at Shorncliffe or Bramshott. The division is still headquartered at the latter camp.

The activity along the western front ensures the Canadians reaching the firing line more expeditiously than formerly and, in turn, calls for a quicker movement from Canada. Incidentally, the overplus of qualified officers is being absorbed.

Krumbles

The New Whole Wheat Food with the Delicious Flavor originated by the Kellogg Toasted Corn Flake Co.

BATTLE CREEK, MICH. and TORONTO, CANADA

THE youngsters of today are far luckier than father and mother when they were young. For breakfast it used to be mush and milk and then milk and mush. Today the youngsters ask for KRUMBLES—and get it, too.

This new whole Wheat food with its delicious flavor is just what active minds and bodies need—rich in protein, the food that builds brain and muscle—rich in starch, the great energy-food—rich in phosphates and mineral salts—rich in bran, with its valuable laxative properties.

All the wheat, cooked, "krumbled," and delicately toasted by the Kellogg special process that brings out the full, rich flavor of the wheat.

ACTION BY THURSDAY.

President Wilson Will Not Allow Carranza to Temporize.

WASHINGTON, June 27.—There were clear indications to-day that if American cavalrymen captured by Mexican troops at Carrizal were not released within forty-eight hours action would be taken by the United States.

The impression prevailed in official circles that President Wilson would not wait beyond Thursday at the latest, and possibly not beyond to-morrow afternoon, for a definite reply from the Carranza Government to the note demanding the immediate release of the prisoners and a declaration of intentions.

KEEP ON MAKING SHELLS.

Arrangements to Continue the Industry in Canada.

OTTAWA, June 27.—The last payments of the $78,000,000, advanced by the Canadian Bankers' Association towards the financing of shell orders in Canada have been made, the arrangements which had made possible the placing of millions of dollars worth of further shell orders in the Dominion will be continued, everything having worked very satisfactorily. There is no reason to expect other than that the shell business to-day, Canada's largest industry, will be kept going in this country as long as the war lasts.

Nerves Were So Upset Could Not Endure Noise

Neuralgic Headaches and Extreme Nervousness Caused Keenest Suffering—Lasting Cure by Use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Once the nervous system gets run down everything seems to tend to make it worse. You worry over your condition, are unable to get the required rest and sleep, noises excite and irritate you and the future is most discouraging.

The nervous system does not get the proper nourishment from the food you eat, so you must have something also to lift you out of the run-down condition. You may find that your experience coincides with the writer of this letter and be encouraged to put Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to the test.

You will make no mistake in employing this food cure, for, acting as it does hand in hand with Nature, it is bound to do you good.

Mrs. Jas. Jensen, Gwynne, Alta., writes: "About ten years ago I was troubled with severe attacks of neuralgia and nervousness, and was for several months so bad that I could not get a night's rest. I used several medicines recommended by the druggist. My doctor also prescribed but nothing he gave me brought any relief. Instead I got worse and worse until I could scarcely do anything or bear the least bit of noise. My nerves were all upset.

"My husband read about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and got me some. Although I had no faith in it, I began its use, and after a few doses began to sleep well and the neuralgia left me entirely. I used six more boxes and have never had any trouble from neuralgia or the nerves since.

"This is to certify that I know Mrs. Jensen and believe this statement to be true and correct. Fred Freeman, J.P."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S APRON.

By Anabel Worthington.

The surplice closing is largely responsible for the suggestion of house dress that is brought to us when we glance at this apron—so dainty that it looks like a dress for practical wear, and may be worn in place of one. Contrasting goods contributes the collar, revers and pocket tops; it brightens up, and of course gives "style" to the garment, which may have its closing at the right or left side of the front. The short sleeves are finished with a stitched cuff of the material and the belt, which is stitched to the skirt where it joins the waist, buttons to one side. A tuck in each shoulder edge gives a better shape to the waist portion; this may be cut surplice, without the sewer effect and even without a collar, if you prefer. The smaller sketch shows how the apron will look if made this way.

The pattern is cut in sizes 36 to 44 inch measure. To copy the design in size 36 will require 4½ yards 36 inch material, with ½ yard of contrasting goods.

To obtain the pattern send [illegible] to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Address—The Examiner Pattern Service, The Examiner, Peterborough. Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

HERE'S A SECRET

If you want to cure that skin disease of yours, you can only do so by using an ointment so refined as to be capable of penetrating to the root of the disease. Zam-Buk is capable of doing this, whereas ordinary ointments remain on the surface skin.

Besides its wonderful power of penetration, Zam-Buk is such a strong germicide that germs cannot live where Zam-Buk is applied. Thus, all germs, both on the surface and in the underlying tissues, are destroyed. Then the herbal essences, of which Zam-Buk is composed, promote the growth of new tissue, and a complete and permanent cure is the result.

Prove it for yourself. All druggists, 50c. box, or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

BAN IS NOW PLACED ON BICYCLES.

As the result of an order issued on May 26 by General von Kessel, commander of the military district embracing Berlin and the Province of Brandenburg, bicycles may only be used for business purposes from that date to the end of the war. An exception is made in the case of solid-tired racing wheels, which may be used on the tracks until the tires with which they are equipped are worn out.

In reporting the new order the German press makes little comment, but the reason for this regulation is supposed to be the shortage of rubber, which seems to indicate that the "ersatz" product mentioned in reports from Germany some time ago, is hardly coming up to the expectations of its inventors. Violations of the new order may be punished with fines up to $367 or imprisonment up to a year.

Assails Luxuries Of Rich Germans

Munich, June 27—Baron von Grundherr, Munich's police president, who recently attracted wide attention by his orders to policemen to arrest women whose clothing was not consonant with the spirit of war times, has just made a flaming attack in an address at a public meeting here on the speculators in foodstuffs, selfishly luxurious livers, vain and over dressed women, and trashy war literature. He quoted the remark of a furloughed soldier, who declared: "I can't stand it here any longer. When I think of all the sacrifices we have to make out at the front I can't endure this lazy dissipation."

"This verdict of the soldier sounds hard," said Baron von Grundherr, but his feelings can be comprehended. The troops feel that they are fighting for high things, for refinement and culture. They are painfully affected when they see the opposite of all this at home. One suffers hunger gladly for friends of plainness and moderation; one dies gladly for German simplicity and German idealism. But it is hard to make sacrifices for speculators and seekers after pleasure, for selfish, superficial rounders and hoarders of food-stuffs, for vain, coquettish women, because they are not worthy of these sacrifices."

Baron von Grundherr contrasted "concerts in cafes, where rouged and bepowdered women, girls and children, paired off with the thoughtless men about town," squander money for luxuries with the spectacle of thousands of women of the working classes waiting from one o'clock in the morning for six or seven hours in storm and rain to get a small piece of meat from the municipal meat halls at a price which they can with difficulty pay. He commented on the manner of life of many rich people for whom the war appears not to exist and who give their usual entertainments and feed their guests "with the help of shameless tradesmen who secretly supply them."

The police president spoke also of certain men about town who after getting certificates exempting them from military service on the ground that they were indispensable at home, "devoted their time to enjoying themselves—to hunting and other recreations." The Baron remarked grimly that it had been found possible to transfer the seat of these men's activities to the trenches.

Baron von Grundherr was especially severe in his arraignment of those women who in his opinion do not dress or conduct themselves in a manner befitting the times. Many, he declared, could think of nothing better to do than to invent new modes or discover new perfumes. He referred to "flopping, cloth squandering, clumsy skirts, with high top boots like stilts under them," to "real female Apaches," and "hats stuck on the side of the head as if blown there by the wind." In this connection he took occasion to defend his order to the policemen to arrest women too conspicuously dressed, and declared that in all the attacks that had been made on him in this matter, it would not "disturb his calm" or move him to withdraw his order. On the contrary he had repeated the order and made it sharper.

The police president referred scornfully to one young woman who, he said, had requested the issuance of an extra milk card for her cat. Another woman had grown indignant at a dealer who refused to sell her nine pounds of oatmeal for her lapdog. The Baron also doubted whether the theatres were showing themselves worthy of the problems confronting them.

PARALYZED LIMBS.

To-day it is sleeplessness, headaches, digestive trouble, and irritability. Next thing you know some form of paralysis has developed. Mr. Alex. Hershberger, 30 Moore Street, St. Catharines, Ont., writes: "Nervous trouble developed into paralysis of the limbs so that I became helpless. Doctors failed me, but after using ten boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I resumed work and now feel better than I did for twenty years."

Talking with a farmer in Northern China Mary Gaunt, an Australian journalist, says The Rural New Yorker, asked him how much money he made, as a rule. He answered that his annual profit, in a good year, was about $12, but that, of course, he did not always have a good year.

Tobacco Heart

CURED BY

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Tobacco does not seem to affect all alike. Many men enjoy their smoke, live to a good old age, and apparently suffer no ill effects from the use of the weed.

There are others, though, on whose heart and nervous system tobacco produces the most serious results.

It causes palpitation, pain in the heart and irregularity of its beat, makes the hands tremble, sets the nerves on edge, and the breath becomes short.

To counteract this demoralizing influence on the heart and nerves there is no remedy that equals Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

They make the heart beat strong and steady, restore tone and vigor to the nerves, and remove all the evil results caused by the tobacco.

Mr. Nelson Young, Brampton, Ont., writes: "I have had, up to about a month ago, a very weak heart, which I suppose came from smoking cigarettes. When I heard of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills as a cure, I immediately gave up smoking, and started using them. It does you justice to be the founder of such a great remedy. They made me feel like a new man."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

MILK BY THE YARD

An Irishman passed a shop where a notice was displayed saying that everything was sold by the yard. Thinking to play a joke on the shopman he entered and asked for a yard of milk.

The shopman, not in the least taken aback, dipped his finger in a bowl of milk and drew a line a yard long on the counter.

The Irishman, not wishing to be caught in his own trap, asked the price.

"Five cents," said the shopman.

"All right. Roll it up; I'll take it."

ITALY APPEALED TO CZAR.

Berlin Version to Explain the Present Offensive.

NEW YORK, June 27. A news agency despatch from Berlin says: The Russian offensive against Austria was begun only after Italy had made repeated requests on the Czar to relieve the pressure on the Italian front by attacking the Austrians. The Italian Cabinet pointed out that Italy's entrance into the war had diverted Austrian armies from the Russian front at a critical moment.

More Prisoners Are Captured By The Victorious Russians

Advance in Galicia and Volhynia Yesterday Netted Them 221 Officers and 10,285 Men--Total Prisoners Since First of June Consist of 4,252 Officers and 205,226 Men---British Attacks Increasing in Violence Says Berlin.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

PETROGRAD, June 29.—(Official).—The Russians, in advancing in Galicia and Volhynia yesterday, took 221 officers and 10,285 men. This makes the total Austrians taken in the offensive since June 2nd, 4,252 officers and 205,226 men.

British Attacks Becoming Numerous

Examiner Special:

BERLIN, June 29.—The repulse of British infantry attacks, which are becoming more numerous, was announced by the War Office this afternoon.

In several instances the attacks were preceded by gas attacks against the German lines.

The French artillery was lively last night in the Alone region around Auberive, in the Champagne, and in the Argonne. Weak French infantry attacks were repulsed.

CANADIAN POSITIONS HEAVILY BOMBARDED

Special Morning Cable:

OTTAWA, June 29.—Despatches arriving here say that the Germans have violently bombarded the Canadian positions at Sorrel Ridge and Observatory Hill. The Canadians have carried out several successful raids of German positions recently, bringing back many prisoners.

French Troops On The Offensive

Examiner Special:

PARIS, June 29.—(French Official Communique).—French troops took the offensive in the Champagne region last night, and after cleaning out the German first line trenches west of Lemesnil, penetrated the enemy's second line, blowing up several shelters, the War Office announced to-day.

81 German Subs. Have Been Bagged

Examiner Special:

MONTE VIDEO, June 29.—Up to May 1 the British Navy had destroyed or captured 81 German submarines.

This information was received here to-day from a source close to the British Admiralty.

Nets dragged between two trawlers were the most effective weapons against the submarines.

High explosives, trailed at a great depth behind ships engaged in submarine hunting, accounted for several U boats.

LONDON, June 29.—Premier Asquith denied in the House of Commons this afternoon that the Government had consented to grant an amnesty to all Irish rebels participating in the Dublin outbreaks as a condition of settlement of the Irish problem.

Russians Capture Three Lines of Trenches

Examiner Special:

PETROGRAD, June 29.—(Official).—The Russians have captured three lines of Austrian trenches between the Dniester and the Pruth.

MORE SUCCESSES FOR ITALIAN TROOPS

ROME, June 29.—Italian troops have stormed Fort Mattasone, in the Trentino zone, and have captured the tower of Pedescala, five miles north of Arsiero, and the ridge of Monte Trappola, it was officially announced this afternoon.

PTE. CORNELIUS ORFORD, Mounted Rifles, officially reported missing.

SAID HE HAD NEVER HEARD OF WELLAND CANAL

Capt. Tauscher on Trial in New York Admitted Buying Munitions, but Did Not Know What They Were to Be Used For.

CASE TO END SOON

Special to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, June 29.—Captain Hans Tauscher, husband of Mme. Gadski, agent of Krupps in this country, took the stand in his own defense today in his trial for complicity in plot to blow up Welland canal.

"I never knew or heard of the Welland Canal until I read of it in the newspapers" Tauscher declared.

He emphatically denied any connection with the plot to destroy the famous waterway. He admitted having conferred with Captain Von Papen, former German military attache but he told Von Papen he would do nothing "against laws of this country".

Tauscher admitted he had purchased munitions, but said he did not know they were intended for purposes of violence.

The defense will rest its case this afternoon and it is expected to be in hands of Jury late to-day.

Death For Casement

Knight is Found Guilty of Treason and is Sentenced by the Court to Meet Death For the Crime

FAMOUS CASE ENDS

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, June 29.—Sir Roger Casement was this afternoon found guilty of high treason in connection with the Irish rebellion and his attempt to induce Irish prisoners in Germany to desert the British colours. The jury deliberated less than one hour. The crime is punishable by death.

The death sentence was pronounced after Casement, in a scarcely audible voice, had addressed the court briefly.

Before being sentenced, Casement stood up and tremblingly protested that as he was an Irishman, he was not subject to the jurisdiction of an English court. Owing to his knighthood Casement may demand that he be hanged with a silken cord or be beheaded. One report says his Philadelphia lawyer, Doyle, declared that Casement said he would prefer beheading to hanging.

In England alone in the twentieth century, said Casement, with impassioned gestures, loyalty to one's country is held to be a crime. I am proud to be a rebel under such circumstances. Bailey, Casement's soldier confederate, who gave the Crown evidence, was discharged..

Casement's hopes for acquittal were dealt a body blow by Lord Justice Baron Reading.

F. E. Jones of the counsel for the defence, who finished summing up because of the illness of Alexander Sullivan, chief counsel for Casement, argued that Sir Roger was a loyal, patriotic Irishman. He contended that he was recruiting an Irish regiment among prisoners in Germany because the Ulsterites threatened civil war in Ireland.

"The jury," interposed the Lord Chief Justice, "will be instructed that any act tending to weaken the country's power of resistance was aiding and comforting the King's enemies."

Casement was plainly depressed by this ruling. He turned an appealing look toward his counsel, who hastily concluded his argument.

"If only one of the six overt acts is proved, the defendant is guilty of treason," the Lord Chief Justice instructed the jury. "If he knew what he did would assist the enemy, though he had another ulterior motive, he is guilty."

Casement's lawyers have announced their intention to appeal to the higher courts. They may demand a hearing before the Bar of the House of Commons and the House of Lords.

TWENTY-TWO PETERBOROUGH BOYS IN MOUNTED RIFLES ARE MISSING

93RD BATTALION TO TAKE PART IN BIG FIELD DAY

Peterboro Soldiers will be Well Represented in Athletic Events on Monday---Soccer Team will Clash with 154th Battalion---139th of Cobourg Leave for Valcartier ---To-day's General Military News.

BARRIEFIELD, WAR CAMP, Wednesday, June 28.—The heavy rain of yesterday brought back the old condition of mud and water all over the camp grounds, and made it unpleasant to the men who were just beginning to enjoy the sunshine which had been their lot for one brief day. To-day, however, the sun is shining again on the heights, and the faces of all are wreathed in smiles.

It is published for the information of all concerned that the first athletic meeting will be held on Monday, July 3rd, beginning at 1.30 p.m. Track and field sports, baseball football and lacrosse will comprise the programme.

The track and field sports will take place on the 136th battalion parade grounds. The football, baseball and lacrosse games to be held concurrently on the 146th and 154th parade grounds.

Each battalion is requested to enter in three best sprinters and runners in the dashes and runs, its two best broad jumpers, two best high jumpers and two best weight throwers in these events.

Battalion competition during the week will uncover the entries for July 3rd. Suitable prizes will be awarded to winners.

The following is the programme:
100 yard, 3 heats.
220 yards, 3 heats.
1 mile.
High jump.
Running broad jump.
Obstacle race.
1-2 mile walk.
Relay race, battalion 4 man teams.
16 lb. shot put.
12 lb. hammer.
Football, 93rd vs. 154th.
Baseball, 109th vs. 155th.
Lacrosse, 154th vs. 136th.
Tug-of-war, 8 men.

BARRIEFIELD, June 28.—The 139th battalion from Cobourg in command of Lieut.-Col. Floyd left camp this morning for Valcartier. Two camp bands in addition to the regular battalion band played the battalion to the station and all the units in camp lined the roadside to cheer the parting troops on their way.

Before marching out the boys were addressed briefly by Col. Hemming, Camp Commandant and at the close of his remarks Lieut.-Col Floyd called on his men for three cheers for the Commandant and for Barriefield camp. They were given with a will.

The officers and men of this popular unit will be much missed from both camp and city.

BARRIE, June 28.—The 157th Simcoe Battalion leaves for Borden Camp next Sunday at 3 p.m. going by train, and the 177th Battalion on Tuesday at 3 p.m. Two days later the Muskoka Battalion, 122nd, will reach the camp, also the 166th from Parry Sound. These four will probably constitute the second brigade under Lieut.-Col. J. A. Currie, M.P., as brigadier.

COLOURS FOR THE 155TH.

BELLEVILLE, June 28.—Arrangements are being made to have the 155th Battalion, which is in training at Barriefield, come to Belleville about the middle of July to be presented with a set of colouds by the ladies of the Daughters of the Empire of this city.

BOMBING SCHOOL OPENED

KINGSTON, June 28.—The 93rd and 109th Battalions are each detailing five officers, five sergeants, five corporals and forty men who have been specially selected to attend the school of bombing and grenade work which opened to-day at Barriefield Camp under the general staff officers. Capt. Anderson, D. S. O. is in charge and is assisted by Capt. Sharpe, 21st Battalion; Lieut. Mingey, 8th C.M.R. and Lieut. Macnee, 21st Battalion, all of whom have been overseas.

Lieut. J. H. Hannaford, formerly of the 2nd Battalion, who is home from the front, has been appointed to the 93rd Battalion.

Kingston Standard: This morning Lt.-Colonel Brown started the school of trenching and bombing. Men from the 93rd and the 109th will be the first to receive instruction.

Kingston Standard: There are 64 Indians in the 93rd Battalion, and they all belong to the one company, making a complete Indian platoon. They Peterborough is plunged into gloom to-day as the result of the largest casualty list that has hit the city since the terrible war began. In the messages sent out from Ottawa late last night, there were no less than twenty-four affecting Peterborough citizens, and sorrow has entered many homes. In a few cases the word had

QUESTIONABLE TACTICS.

There is a tendency to strong disapproval of the French air-raid on Karlsruhe, Germany, and the disastrous bombing of non-combatants, though it was in reprisal for a similar air raid on French territory. Reprisal, under the circumstances, was human; but at the same time it was inhuman; and the allies, who are fighting for humanity and high ideals must not lower themselves to the level of the Huns. The reported employment of gas by the British, comes within the same classification of questionable war methods from civilized combatants. We must not "wrongly win" by "playing foley" to high ideals.

CANADA'S CONDITION.

This war has sharply demonstrated Canada's capacity for accomplishment. In military matters we have in the way of contributing to the fighting forces of the empire, done what the most hopeful minds three years ago would have considered impossible. In the matter of industrial development, in the provision of munitions, we have done similarly well. At the same time we have kept the normal machinery of life in motion and showed in the every day affairs of the nation, that we have been apparently undisturbed by the storm that has been raging about us. The proof of this consists in our popular financial condition, which shows marked improvement, though the demands upon the purse of the people have been many and exacting. In the month of May, 1914, before the war broke out, the deposits in the banks amounted to 1,004 millions of dollars. In May of 1916, after nearly two years of war, the deposits in the banks composed most largely of savings, had grown to the big figures of 1,178 millions, an increase of 117 millions. Of course we have accumulated large liabilities to be subsequently liquidated, but with substantial evidence of the resource of our people and the quality and extent of our natural resources, we can contemplate the task of financial readjustment with confidence. We must have big faith in, and deep love for, our country, when we are prepared to sacrifice so much for it, and if to faith we add action, we cannot fail in the future, as we have done in the past, to achieve continuous progress.

SOURCE OF EXPLANATION.

Captain T. H. Burnham "wonders" why recruits to put the 93rd Battalion on a basis of full strength are not coming from Peterborough to Barriefield. He would not "wonder" if he were in Peterborough and heard the opinions of his Conservative supporters upon the conditions that may easily have given a black eye to recruiting—lack of confidence in the methods of, and ways and manipulations of, his trust by the man of all men who should help recruiting and foster the recruiting spirit, the Minister of Militia. A Minister of the Crown who makes his high office and the need of stranded relatives the occasion for the practice of nepotism, does not inspire the confidence in the administration of his department, in the interest of the recruited soldier, and does not inspire popular eagerness to join the colours. Sir Sam has carried things with a high hand; he has charmed and the evidence of wrong doing in connection with munitions manipulation as "piffle." But in the face of recent revelations in Peterborough—of ocular demonstration khaki-clad—whose everybody knows the circumstances, he can't dismiss serious matters as "piffle." His own party friends, whose party loyalty has been strained in standing by Sir Sam, through evil report, express the general feeling when they declare that th last evidence of "nepotism" and flagrant disregard of the decencies of responsible administration are more than they can stand. It these things cannot be swallowed by the most hide-bound of partisans, can it be expected that they will evoke enthusiasm for recruiting? Capt. Burnham might apply to his brother officer, honorary Captain and Superintendent of Camp Borden, and to his creator, Sir Sam Hughes, and to Sir Robert Borden, who permits these things, for explanation of his wonderment at the slow recruiting in Peterborough—and elsewhere in the country.

SAFE SEATS, NOT ALWAYS SAFE.

In spite of the inadvisibility of elections in war time, the Ontario government has precipitated war-time by-elections in Ontario. The North Perth by-election scheduled for July 19th, was brought on by the operation of the spirit of graft, the sitting Conservative member resigning his seat to accept a well paid government position. The government apparently feels that it is taking no risks in opening a safe seat—a seat that in the government elections of 1914 gave the Conservative candidate a majority of 1102. But the seat, judged by the precedent of recent by-elections, or by conditions that have developed and are developing since the seat was open, it is not as safe perhaps, as it seemed a little while ago. The Hearst government is, naturally, warranted in its feeling of uneasiness over the possible outcome of a contest. There is not much encouragement in the results of contested by-elections since the government was returned by an overwhelming majority in 1914. For instance in Hamilton West the by-election of November, 1914, resulted in cutting down the Conservative majority at the general election of the preceding year, from 1411 to 36.

In Dundas county the by-election of December, 1914, reduced the Conservative majority at the preceding election from 673 to 68.

In Peel the Conservative majority of 497 in the general elections of 1914 was, in the by-election, converted into a Liberal majority of 306.

A little analysis of these results shows, not only how the wind blows, but how the adverse gale is raging. In Hamilton west the government majority was cut down by 1375; in Dundas the drop was 611, and in Peel the government lost the seat with a drop of 992. In these three by-elections the adverse election changes in the government's majority totalled 2,978, or an average of nearly 1,000 per seat. It is no wonder that the government will have to revise its estimate and definition of a "safe seat," and it may well regard with concern the outcome or outgo of the North Pert by-election. There is evidence that the standing of the Liberal party in the province is stronger to-day than it was when it contributed to the shaking of two safe seats and the loss of a third to the government party. There is reason to believe that the popular distrust of the government will again be emphasized at the coming contest. The Liberal candidate, Mr. Wellington Hay, a disappointment to the hope that the seat would go by acclamation, is a most representative man in the riding. He has supported Mr. Rowell's programme of reform, which is steadily gaining in popular favour, and he has, during the war, been a leader in all the patriotic activities of Perth county and stands an excellent chance of again revising the Hearst government's definition and estimation of a "safe seat."

WILL NEWFOUNDLAND JOIN?

With the evidence of fifty years' success of Confederation before them the Newfoundlanders are contemplating the possibility of uniting their fortunes with the Dominion. The St. Johns (Newfoundland) correspondent of the Journal of Commerce, says that the question of union with Canada is engaging the attention of high authorities in the island, a probable preface to the submission of a proposal, for union, to the Dominion Government. It is easily possible that on the approach of the fiftieth anniversary of Confederation the Newfoundlanders are impressed with the lesson of its successful application. This success has cut from under their feet the ground of objection they had to entering the Confederation in 1867, as is seen by the following phrases of a resolution passed by the Legislature of the Island nearly fifty years ago:

"Firm in their adhesion to the fortunes of the Mother Country, the people of Newfoundland shrink from the idea of linking their destinies with a Dominion in the future of which they can at present see nothing to inspire hope, but much to create apprehension."

While Newfoundland sees reason to revise its estimate and forecast of Confederation, it is still firm in its "adhesion to the fortunes of the Mother Country." The Island, in this war, has come gallantly to the support of the Mother Country; and the crisis has developed an intensified spirit in imperialism and created an imperial rapprochement that will probably overbear material considerations—considerations of a financial nature—that have heretofore operated to keep the two countries apart. The virtual achievement of the union of all the British possessions on this continent would be a splendid way to mark the anniversary of the first half century of Confederation.

The Call of The People Comes To Premier Borden

Is the Prime Minister of Canada asleep? Are his Cabinet Ministers away from home? or are they helpless? or are they merely stupid? Is there no one about Ottawa who will arouse Sir Robert Borden and his colleagues to a sense of conditions in military affairs that are rapidly converging to a crisis? Are they all so dull, or so self-satisfied, as not to see that all over Canada, and especially in Ontario, the people who know at firsthand the recruiting situation, and particularly know it is handicapped by the Militia Department from the Minister down, are becoming almost rebellious in their indignation? Cannot Premier Borden be made to understand that this is no time for merely "holding down a job"? and that he must either tackle the Militia administration himself or appoint a Recruiting Director with brains enough to understand the problem, authority enough to do the essential things, and power enough to prevent or to repair the damage done by Sir Sam Hughes and his arrogant insults to men who are sacrificing their all, both in money and in service, for the good of the regiments?

In the regular and ordinary administration of the affairs of the Militia, the Department at Ottawa has failed and fallen down at every point—yes, at every point. In the arduous work of recruiting, the officers in charge have been hindered instead of helped by the officials in the Department. Wherever he goes the Minister, by his cheap affectation of contempt for law and precedent, and, as at London last week, by his unpardonable and offensive rebukes to the officers in the presence and hearing of their regiments, makes the task of recruiting and of discipline needlessly difficult.

Not only are officers of the highest equipment and of unblemished personal charcter insulted by the lawless and undisciplined Minister of Militia, but other officers, whose characters are openly scandalous and whose conduct has been condemned, are retained in high command in defiance of all the interests involved, both moral and military. A notorious case of this sort reveloped in Toronto, crammed with all the elements of a public scandal. A battalion was sent overseas a fortnight ago, and a large number of both officers and men were in a mutinous mood against their Colonel, whose conduct had been the subject of secret investigation by a Court of Inquiry. The facts, as known to many friends of the officers and men of the battalion, were laid before the Prime Minister. He promised much, but did nothing.

It is high time this boasting by the Premier and by the Minister of Militia about what has been done in raising Canada's army utterly ceased. The fact is, the raising of the regiments, in nearly every instance, was retarded by the Government's negligence, rather than promoted by the Government's aid. It was the officers and local friends who did the work and provided most of the necessary funds. The point has now been reached when there is threatening an outbreak of public indignation unless the Premier plays the Premier part, and rids the country of the obstacles which the Department of Militia puts in the way. The People call the Premier.—The Globe.

make the best of soldiers, and are among the most orderly in the camp.

The Kingston Standard says: As for the Peterboro and Lindsay regiments it does not seem to be generally known but it is a fact nevertheless that they will be sent overseas in a relatively few days now and for this reason it was decided not to be worth while to move them to Valcartier, which would have necessitated another removal a few days later, and would have meant a loss of ten days in their training.

Kingston Standard: The band of the 93rd Battalion was duty band for yesterday and gave an excellent programme at the dinner of headquarters last night. The following programme was carried out: March, "Soldiers of the King," overture, "Poet and Peasant," cornet solo, "Perfect Day," by Bandsman Walne; waltz, "September;" selection, "Faust;" selection, "Maritana," mazurka. "La Czarine;" march, "Dragoon Guards;" finale, "O Canada."

For the Army Medical Corps Training Depot No. 2 an energetic campaign has been started with the object of getting 500 recruits as soon as possible, the men being needed for service at Niagara, Camp Borden, for the new Toronto Base Hospital, and for overseas service. Men joining have the option of enlisting for home service or for overseas, and the latter are not kept waiting if they desire to get away, as drafts for England, France, Salonica, and Egypt are leaving every month. The Army Medical Corps is unique in attracting to its strength men of all classes and occupations, all of whom enter as privates. With the numerous drafts constantly leaving, promotion in the ranks is rapid, and at all times men are assured of congenial companionship. The A.M.C. also provides the older man with an opportunity of serving, and the less arduous duties with the comfortable quarters provided, and the interesting and humane work under the Red Cross, makes it a particularly suitable work for the man who desires to do his duty but who is not fitted for the life of the trenches. Men are wanted to act as stenographers and clerks, as well as those with knowledge of St. John's Ambulance work, and others who desire to engage in hospital work, field stretcher drill annd first aid. Intending recruits should apply either at the Exhibition camp hospital or by mail to Sergeant McCrea, when all information and transportation will be furnished.

Mrs. George Coons, Rogers street has had her anxiety somewhat removed by the receipt of a letter from her son, Douglas, written since the big scrap. He says that the sausage-eaters want to get at the Canucks awful bad, but they know its hell let loose when the Canadians start in their direction. Driver Coon's advice to the East City boys is that they should all get into the game as soon as possible and not wait till compelled to serve in the War Babies Battalion. A box has been received by the warrior and as the label was considerably removed he does not know to whom he should send thanks.

TWENTY-TWO PETERBORO' BOYS IN MOUNTED RIFLES MISSING

been received unofficially, but the majority of the messages were the first news received since the big battle of June 2. The blow has fallen almost altogether on B Squadron, 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles, to-day's list officially announcing twenty-two of the squadron as missing. It is evident that the men of the Peterborough squadron were in the thickest of the fighting in the third battle of Ypres. Many of the 8th men had been transferred to the 4th C.M.R., and it was on this battalion that the first brunt of the terrific bombardment and subsequent infantry fighting fell. Since the first of June no fewer than 80 Peterborough names have appeared on the casualty list, shewing the glorious part that the gallant lads from this city have been playing at the front.

PTE. GEO. BUTCHER.

Mr. John Butcher, 301 Burnham street, has received a wire from Ottawa that his son, Pte. Geo. R. Butcher, Mounted Rifles, is officially reported missing from June 2. The official announcement followed closely on a letter from Pte. Butcher's chum, which gave the information that it was feared the young soldier had been killed, as he had been seen to drop. Pte. Butcher was born in Peterborough and is widely known throughout the city. He was a member of the Bugle Band of the 57th Regiment and enlisted with B squadron, 8th C.M.R., in January, 1915, having to undergo a surgical operation in order to fit himself for overseas service. Before enlisting he was employed with the Colonial Weaving Co. Pte. Butcher was prominent in sporting circles, having played goal for the champion St. Luke's Church Hockey League team. His brother, Gunner Alex. Butcher who went overseas last year with the 33rd Battery, was reported wounded a few weeks ago.

CORP. FRED STANLEY.

The shock of the official message that Corp. Fred Stanley, Mounted Rifles, is missing, was lessend by the fact that his relatives had already been informed of the fact in a letter from his brother. Corp. Stanley is son of Sergt. Wm. Stanley, 130th Battalion, formerly assistant caretaker of the armouries, and a brother of Trooper Horace Stanley of the C.M.R., who came through the battle safely and of Sergt. Albert Stanley of the 93rd battalion, Barriefield. Corp. Stanley who was born in England, but who had been a resident of Peterborough for eight or nine years, enlisted with B squadron when the recruiting for the Mounted Rifles began. His wife at the present time is under quarantine as the result of a case of diphtheria in the family.

PTE. ALFRED BLACK.

One of two brothers of Scotch descent who enlisted here with B squadron, 8th C.M.R. early last year. Pte. Alfred Black is to-day officially reported missing. Pte. Black with his brother, Pte. Archie Black, were among the first to join the Mounted Rifles here. Another brother, Pte. James Black, is a member of the 93rd Battalion at Barriefield camp. Pte. Alfred Black was employed at the C. G.E. before enlisting. His relatives live on Chamberlain street west.

PRIVATE TOM CASEY.

To-day's list of missing includes Private Thomas Casey, son of Mr. David Casey of Otonabee, who enlisted here with the Mounted Rifles. He was born in Peterborough and attended the Lake street school. At that time his father was a section man on the C.P.R. between Peterborough and Kendry siding. He resided on Chamberlen street and is well known in the city, particularly by residents of the south end. Pte. Casey moved with his family to Otonabee when the father forsook railroad work for farming. He was about twenty years of age and would doubtless be listed as a farmer in so far as his occupation was concerned. Pte. Casey had no previous military training, merely answering the call when enlistment for the Mounted Rifels was under way.

PTE. LEONARD BLAKE.

The fact that Pte. Leonard Blake, 151 Rubidge street, a member of the Mounted Rifles, is missing, was known to the family for several days, as his twin brother, Pte. Arthur Blake, had written home to that effect. The official news came this morning. The two boys enlisted here in August last with the last draft that left Peterborough to join B squadron at Barriefield. Pte. Leonard Blake was a baker by trade and was employed by Mr. T. H. Hooper.

PTE. ERNEST H. CROFTS.

Another member of the band of recruits who left Peterborough last summer to join the Peterborough squadron of the 8th C.M.R. at Barriefield, and who is today officially reported missing, is Pte. Ernest H. Crofts, of 309 Burnham street. Pte. Crofts before enlisting was employed at the Quaker Oats Company.

PTE. JOS. M. McGRATH.

Pte. Jos. M. McGrath, 191 Reid street, who enlisted here with B squadron, 8th C.M.R. last year, is today reported missing. Pte. McGrath was born in the United States, but had lived in Peterborough for some time. His mother, Mrs. Margaret McGrath, resides on Perry street. A brother, Pte. Christopher McGrath, is with the 93rd Battalion at Barriefield camp.

PTE. HAROLD LAWRENCE.

A few days ago Mr. Ernie Lawrence, 472 Elm street, was unofficially notified that his son, Pte. Harold Lawrence, a young Peterborough member of the 8th C.M.R., had been killed in action. To-day he is officially reported missing. Pte. Lawrence, who was only eighteen, enlisted with B squadron here last summer, joining the 8th at Barriefield.

PTE. CORNELIUS ORFORD.

Mrs. Mary Orford, corner of Edinburgh and Union street, received official news this morning that her husband, Pte. Cornelius Orford, who enlisted here last summer with B squadron, 8th C.M.R., is missing. The news had already come unofficially in the way of a letter from Pte. Orford's brother-in-law.

PTE. ROBERT SMITH.

Official news that Pte. Robert V. Smith, a Peterborough member of the Canadian Mounted Rifles, was missing, was received in a wire from Ottawa this morning for his mother, Mrs. Wm. Smith. Pte. Smith enlisted here last year in B squadron.

PTE. CLIFTON KIDD.

Official news that Pte. Clifton Kidd, 5th Battalion, C.E.F., is suffering from shell shock, was received by Mr. R. J. Kidd this morning. Mr. Kidd had already received the information in a letter from his son, which appeared in last night's Examiner.

PTE. HUNTER GODFREY.

Pte. Hunter Godfrey, son of Mr. Wm. H. Godfrey, 217 Mark street, who enlisted here last year with B squadron, 8th C.M.R., is to-day officially reported wounded. Pte. Godfrey was a Canadian born member of the 8th. Before enlisting he was employed as a chauffeur.

PTE. IRA BRADLEY.

Mrs. Jane Bradley, 478 Elm street, received official word this morning that her son Pte. Ira Bradley, B squadron 8th C.M.R., is reported missing since June 2. Pte. Bradley was one of the original members of the Peterborough squadron of the 8th, enlisting here early in 1915. He was well known throughout the city.

PTE. GEO. HUTCHISON, Mounted Rifles, 188 Wescott street, missing.

PTE. HARLAND MARTIN.

Only a short time ago Pte. Harland Martin, son of Mr. Harvey Martin, 30 Ware street and a member of the Mounted Rifles was reported wounded and suffering from shell shock. To-day he is officially reported missing since June 2nd. He had just recovered from his injuries in time to get back with his battalion for the big fight in the third battle of Ypres. Pte. Martin was born in Canada and was a member of the 57th Regiment for some time. Before that he belonged to the 15th Regiment at Belleville.

PTE. HAROLD DEVINS

Pte. Harold Devins, Mounted Rifles is eighteen years old to-day, but it was a sad birthday for his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Devins, 298 Murray street, as this morning a wire was received from Ottawa stating that Pte. Devins is officially reported missing from June 2. The young soldier who is Canadian born enlisted last summer with B. Squadron in the draft of 45 which left here in August to join the 8th at Barriefield. Although only seventeen he pleaded so hard to be allowed to go that his parents consented. He has been in the trenches for some time. Only a short time ago his mother sent him a big birthday parcel. His father, Mr. W. J. Devins is on the staff of the Grafton store.

PTE. ARNOLD PARRINGTON

Only last night the Examiner published a photograph of Pte. Arnold Parrington, 889 Aylmer street a member of the Mounted Rifles. This morning his parents received word that he is officially reported missing. Pte. Parrington is one of four Canadian born sons of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Parrington, to enlist for overseas service and is the third to appear on the casualty list. Trooper Percy Parrington of the Strathcona Horse and Pte. Tom Parrington of the 2nd Battalion who went over with the first contingent have already been invalided home while another brother, Pte. Ralph Parrington is a member of the 93rd Battalion at Barriefield camp. Pte. Arnold Parrington was employed at the C.G.E. before enlisting.

PTE. A. E. BARTLEY.

Pte. Albert E. Bartley, 337 Aylmer street a local member of the Mounted Rifles had just got back to the trenches after suffering from shell shock when the big fight commenced. Now he is officially reported missing. Pte. Bartley was born in Canada and is a son of Mr. George Bartley while his wife and children reside on Aylmer street. Pte. Bartley enlisted with B Squadron early in 1915.

PTE. C. M. DRUMMOND

One of three Peterborough brothers to join for overseas service. Pte. Charlton M. Drummond, Barnardo Avenue is to-day reported missing. His mother Mrs. Emma Drummond having received an official message from Ottawa. Pte. Drummond had lived practically all his life in Peterborough and was well known here. Two other brothers are in the Canadian Field Artillery. Pte. Drummond enlisted first after the departure of B squadron from the city and joined them at Ottawa.

PTE. THOS PERRY.

Another on the long list of missing among the ranks of B squadron, 8th C.M.R. is Pte. Thos. Perry, whose relatives live on Chamberlain street and formerly resided at 22 Park street. Pte. Perry enlisted with B. Squadron here in January, 1915. He was born in England and was thirty-seven years of age.

PRIVATE B. F. CASSON.

The missing list contains the name of Private B. F. Casson of the 8th Mounted Rifles. Prior to enlisting he resided at 440 Reid street. He was born in Stirling, and was seventeen years of age on the sixth day of this month. Private Casson has resided in the city since he was six years of age. A widowed mother, one sister, Thelma, and two brothers survive. The brothers are Arthur and Harold of this city.

PTE. ALEXANDER McFARLANE.

Three weeks ago the wife and two children of Private Alexander McFarlane left Peterborough for England. To-day's official list of casualties numbers Private McFarlane, of the Mounted Rifles among the missing. He formerly resided at 683 1-2 Stewart Street.

PTE. FREDERICK PEACE.

The list of missing contains the name of Private Frederick Peace who formerly resided at 145 Stewart street. Since enlisting Private Peace's widowed mother has removed to Toronto. He was about 23 years of age. He leaves one sister. He was a member of the Mounted Rifles.

PRIVATE GEORGE HUTCHINSON.

Private George Hutchinson is officially reported missing. His wife and four children reside at 163 Wescott street. Private Hutchinson enlisted in the 8th Mounted Rifles, and afterwards transferred to the 4th Mounted Rifles. He was born in England, but has resided in Peterborough for about twelve years. He was employed at the Canadian Canoe Company.

PTE. WM. FLEMING.

Private Wm. Fleming of the 39th Battalion, C.E.F., is officially reported killed in action. He leaves a father, one brother, Mr. Brydon Fleming, 226 Perry Street, and three sisters, namely, Mrs. R. H. Sharpe, 261 McDonnel street, Mrs. William Smith, 246 Smith street, and Miss Jessie Fleming, at home. Private Fleming was a carpenter by trade. Prior to enlisting, he resided at 261 McDonnel Street. He was born in Centreville, and was twenty-seven years of age. Private Fleming was a member of St. Andrew's Church.

Mayor McLean May Resign

Lindsay's Chief Magistrate Will Remove to Galt

LINDSAY, June 29.—It is expected that Mayor D. J. McLean will tender his resignation to his colleagues in the Town Council at the regular monthly meeting to be held next Monday night. It is understood that he has decided to move with his family to Galt, Ont., where he has been successful in allying himself to one of the biggest manufacturing concerns in Western Ontario.

GARDEN PARTY AT HOME OF MRS. RYERSON RITCHIE

A very successful Garden Party and Musicale was held yesterday afternoon under the auspices of the Peterborough Progressive Club at the home of Mrs. Ryerson Ritchie, 600 Stewart street. The fine day brought out a large number of people who enjoyed to the utmost the splendid musical programme provided by the thoughtful and gracious hostess, whose beautiful and artistic home was lavishly decorated with flowers.

The guests were received by Miss Peck and Mrs. Arthur Stevenson, President and Vice President of the society and were ushered into the refreshment room by Mrs. Mowath. The dining table which was presided over by Mrs. Ritchie had for centre red roses and shaded candles.

The programme consisted of vocal solos by:

Mrs. Ida V. Kinley, Mrs. Eleanor Lock, Miss Dorothy Allen, Mrs. H. McLaren; Violin solo Mr. Frank Whitehouse; Pianoforte solo Mr. Cyril Devey.

The sum realized was $36.00.

OVER THE LIFT LOCK ON DOMINION DAY

Among the several pleasant outlets for excursionists on Dominion Day, no more pleasant and comfortable trips can be enjoyed than the one over the Lift Lock, with the smart going steamer "Manita" of the Stoney Lake Navigation line. She is billed to leave the George Street Wharf at eight o'clock on Saturday morning, returning to Peterborough about 6.30. The sail up the Trent Canal to Lakefield, and from there on to Young's Point, Clear Lake, and Stoney Lake gives one fully ten hours on the water through scenery and sights nowhere excelled.

Prospects For The Holiday

Fair Weather Is Promised For July 1st

Fair weather is in prospect for the first of July. At least that is the prediction made by some of the local weather sharps. If this is the case there will likely be a large exodus from the city. A large contingent is booked for the lakes, while a number of others will journey to Toronto and Kingston.

CLUB BAG GIFT TO SCHOOL TEACHER

The parents, their friends and the pupils of the section assembled on the school grounds of S. S. No. 13 Otonabee on Wednesday, June 28th, where a picnic was held, it being the last day of school.

The afternoon was pleasantly spent in races, games, etc., and refreshments were served during the afternoon the pupils presented their teacher Miss G. M. Clarke with a handsome club bag, accompanied by an address read by Elva Jackson while the presentation was made by Helen Slattery.

INFLAMMATORY RHEUMATISM PERMANENTLY CURED

NEW BRUNSWICK LADY GIVES FULL PARTICULARS OF HER RECOVERY.

There are many types of rheumatism, but none worse than inflammatory.

It was this kind that almost killed Mrs. Edw. Warman, of Kent Jct., N.B.

Every known remedy she tried; different doctors gave their advice, but the disease increased.

Weak and despairing, she was at her wits' end when the remarkable cure of Thos. Cullen was published. This gentleman was cured of rheumatism by "Ferrozone." Consequently Mrs. Warman used the same remedy. Here is her statement:

"For five years I have been rheumatic. I tried various forms of relief without success. The disease increased, settled in my joints, and muscles; these swelled, caused excruciating pain and kept me from sleeping. My limbs and arms stiffened, my shoulders were lame and prevented me from working. Week by week I was losing strength and despaired of finding a cure. It was a happy day I heard of Ferrozone. Every day I took Ferrozone I felt better; it eased the painful joints, gave me energy and a feeling of new life.

Ferrozone has power to destroy Uric Acid, neutralize and enrich the blood, and therefore does cure the worst cases. Mrs. Warman's statement proves this.

By removing the cause of the disease and building up a reserve of energy, Ferrozone is certain to cure. Sufferer, isn't it about time to stop experimenting? Ferrozone is a CURE, order to-day. 50c. per box, or six for $2.50, sold by all dealers or direct from The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

When putting away a silver teapot or one that is not in everyday use, place a little stick across the top under the cover. This allows fresh air to get in and prevents any musty odor.

A noble steed of uncertain gender is mentioned by the Jimtown Herald which reports that Mr. George Burke has had the misfortune to lose the valuable bay horse that has long been a familiar sight on the streets of the village. He died last Friday night and the Buker family was very sorry to lose her, as they had become very fond of it.

Peterboro' Boy Is The Youngest Officer In The Canadian Army

Lieut. Herbert McClellan, Son of Captain J. Harris McClellan, Has Been at Detention Camp Since Outbreak of War.

IN ARMY SERVICE CORPS NOW

OTTAWA, June 28.—Lieut. Herbert McClellan of Peterboro, Ont., who has been at the detention camp at Pettawawa almost since the war began, is only 18 years old and is probably the youngest officer on active service in the Canadian Army.

He had the rank of sergeant in the local battalion at Peterboro, but when he became secretary to the O. C. he asked to be made a private in order that he might do fatigue duty—picket guard, sentry—and understand soldiering from the bottom.

He has been promoted on merit, which is presumably open to every boy who enlists at any recruiting station. Lieut. McClellan has been transferred recently to the Army Service Corps at Quebec. He is the scion of honoured pioneer ancestors, who settled in Upper Canada in the Durham district in the early days and is the youngest son of J. H. McClellan of Peterborough who is well known throughout the province of Ontario.

Casement's Counsel Collapses At Trial

Casement Says That He Did Not Recruit for the Kaiser—Never Sold Himself to Any Man or Any Government.

CLAIMS MIS-STATEMENTS

LONDON, June 28.—To-day's session of the Casement trial was brought to a sudden and dramatic close. While summing up for the defence, Counsel Sullivan collapsed as he was in the midst of an impassioned appeal, and the court adjourned until to-morrow morning. At that time the defence will continue with its plea.

Sir Roger Casement, in his statement to the court said:—

"My Lords and Gentlemen of the Jury,—I desire to say a few words only with reference to some allusions made by the prosecution.

"As to my pension and honour of knighthood conferred upon me, I shall say one word only. The pension I have earned by service rendered, and it was assigned by law. The knighthood, it was not in my power to refuse.

FOUR MIS-STATEMENTS.

"But there are in special four misstatements, given in the evidence against me, which I must refute. First, I never at any time advised Irishmen to fight with the Turks against the Russians, or to fight with the Germans on the western front. Second, I never asked an Irishman to fight for Germany. I have always claimed that he has no right to fight for any land but Ireland. Third, the horrible insinuations that I got my own people's rations reduced to the starvation point because they did not join the Irish brigade is an abominable falsehood. The rations were necessarily reduced throughout Germany, owing to the blockade, and they were reduced for the Irish prisoners at exactly the same time and to the same extent as for the German soldiers and the entire population of Germany. The other suggestion that men were sent to punishment camps at my instance for not joining the Irish brigade is one that I need hardly pause to refute. It is devoid of all foundation.

NAILING A LIE.

"Fourth, gentlemen, there is the widespread imputation of German gold. I owe it to those in Ireland who are assailed with men on this very ground to nail the lie once and for all. It as published by newspapers in America, I think originating in this country, and I cabled to America instructing my American lawyer, Mr. Doyle, to proceed against those papers for libel. Those who know me know the incredibility of this malicious invention, for they know from all my past records that I have never sold myself to any man or any Government and have never allowed any Government to use me.

TOOK NO MONEY.

"From the first moment that I landed on the continent until I came home again to Ireland I never asked or accepted a single penny of foreign money, either for myself or for any Irish cause, or for any purpose whatsoever.'"

Fell From Buggy Broke His Leg

LINDSAY, June 29.—Mr. Elmer Skuce, of Mount Horeb, suffered a very serious and painful accident on Saturday, June 24th, when he fell from a buggy and broke his left leg in two places betwen the knee and ankle. Dr. Clark, of Lindsay, was called to attend the injured man. Mr. Skuce was employed at Mr. J. O'Leary's blacksmith shop, William street, last winter.

Largest Lamb In Victoria County

Mr. Wm. Fox, of South Ops, holds the record for the biggest lamb of its age that was ever sold in the Town of Lindsay. Its breeding was not any more than ordinary, probably Leicester and Cotswold as near as could be judged. However, that cut no ice in the weight of the lamb, which was about 12 weeks old and weighed 93 lbs. It was bought by Mr. W. S. Braund, of the Adams Bros'. meat store, who paid 12c per pound for the animal. The price paid Mr. Fox was $11.16.

It is stated that this is the largest lamb of its age ever hard of in Ontario.

Recruiting Methods Are Aired In Court An Interesting Case

TORONTO, June 28.—Present recruiting methods came into question in the Police Court this morning, when W. E. Caine, a young man charged Sergt. R. J. Egan, of the 208th Irish Battalion, with aggravated assault. The sergeant was defended by his commanding officer, Lieut.-Col. T. H. Lennox, and had Captain D'Arcy Hinds on hand as a witness.

"I had just come out of Eaton's store on Albert street when a lieutenant of the Irish Battalion came up to me and asked me if I wasn't thinking of putting on the uniform, and I told him not that day," said Caine. "He said to me: 'Haven't you made your mind up yet?' and I replied that I had not. He then wanted to know whether I had any reasons for not enlisting and I said that I had good ones, but it would be no good telling him then as he wouldn't understand them.

"Then he asked me if I had tried to enlist, and I told him I had when the first call come, and that I had been turned down. It was just then that Sergt. Egan stepped up to me and asked me the same questions over again. He said to me, 'Are you ever going to enlist?' and I told him I didn't know. He said he wished conscription would come, and that he had a platoon of conscripted men to drill, and he would show them something. I said that I had reasons for not enlisting now. I told him that I had two brothers enlisted, and that one was home wounded. He said he had two brothers in graves in France, an I said that was too bad.

HAD TRIED TO ENLIST.

"I told him that I had tried for the first contingent, and told him that if he had done the same thing he would be over in France now.

"He said to me, 'Don't you think I have done enough? I have put twelve years in the British army.' I replied he had done nothing in this war.

"Then he turned to a man who was wearing an "A.R." button and asked him about enlisting. The man showed him the button, and he wanted to know why the man didn't wear it where it could be seen. He said that it made no difference, as many recruiting officers just laughed at it.

"Then he grabbed me by the lapel of my coat and punched me in the face. I walked away. I went down the street a little and a man on a waggon asked me why he punched me, and I told him. Then I got a second punch in the face."

DENIED BAD LANGUAGE.

Cross-examined by Mr. Lennox, witness denied that he had said "To hell with the King," or that he used had language in any way, shape or form.

J. M. Vanatter, the man who wore the "A.R." button, was the next witness called. He told the same story as Caine and said he heard nothing of the language complained of. He saw the lad struck a couple of times and he told the sergeant that there was no reason for that. A young boy named Clarence Hall also saw the complainant struck, but heard no language to cause it.

Sergt. Egan was then called for the defence. He declared that Caine had said he wouldn't fight for the King or the Kaiser.

"I said to him 'Who will you fight for?' and he refused to answer?" said the soldier. "I asked him why he wouldn't enlist and he said to me 'To hell with you, king, country and all.' Then I punched him and afterwards slapped his face for him.

Sergt. Montesole also swore that he had heard the same remarks used.

Capt. D'Arcy Hinds said he saw the meeting was disturbed by some one, but it was not by the complainant. He didn't hear the words.

"BENEFIT OF THE DOUBT"

"I must give the defendant the benefit of the doubt, said Magistrate Kingsford when he found that was all the evidence. "There is considerable doubt in the matter, and I can't say the assault was not justified. I am not saying that the sergeant has any right, though to punch people.

"The sooner the Government enforces the Militia Act the better, and then this trouble will cease. The prisoner is discharged."

MARK STREET CHURCH MEETING

The Women's Missionary Society of Mark street church held their regular monthly meeting in the church. Miss Whattam, delegate to the branch meeting gave a splendid and helpful report of the convention. A vocal duet was rendered by Miss Howden and Elva McIntyre which was enjoyed by all. The year's work was discussed and plans were made for the coming year. The President Mrs. Mitchett was in the chair.

The annual outing of the W.M.S. and Mission Band will be held at Mrs. Robert's, Beaver Farm on Concession street, Thursday, July 13th.

Goods Were Not Same As Sample

LINDSAY, June 29.—At a session of the County Court on Tuesday the case of Appelbaum vs D. Florennce & Sons, Peterborough came up for hearing. This was a case which centred around a promissory note for $210 in connection with the sale of rubber goods to the Florence firm, doing business at Peterborough. The defendants claimed that the goods shipped them was not the same as the sample forwarded. The action was dismissed.

Mr. S. M. Scott of the firm of Stewart & Scott, for plaintiffs: R. R Hall, Peterborough, for defendant.

THIRD OF FRENCH SERVE.

Seven Out of Twenty Males Engaged in War Duty.

The Bulletin of the Armies of the Republic, which is sent to all French soldiers at the front, published recently a page of statistics showing how the whole of the French nation actually takes part in the war.

Out of every twenty Frenchmen six or seven are actually under arms or engaged in manufacturing munitions. The unit of twenty is composed of the following: One aged or infirm, two small children, two boys at school, two young men under military age either studying or working, four to five soldiers mobilized, one or two men working in munition factories, three engaged in agriculture, three uncalled working men or clerks.

There is only one man in France out of every forty in governmental positions, such as functionaries, judges and teachers.

MUNITIONS CREDIT PLAN APPROVED

OTTAWA, June 28.—A deputation representing the Canadian Bankers' Association had a conference with Sir Thomas White at noon today in regard to an extension of credit for the Imperial Munitions Board. No official statement was given out at the close but it is understood that the bankers will extend another seventy-five to one hundred million dollars credit for the manufacture of war munitions in Canada. Last winter a credit of $76,000,000 was extended and as a result heavy war orders were placed in this country. The last of this credit was paid out this month. The new credit will permit heavy further orders to be placed by Great Britain in Canada which would otherwise go to the United States.

Among those present at to-day's conference were George Burns, Bank of Ottawa, president of the Bankers' Association; John Aird, Bank of Commerce, and H. V. Meredith, Bank of Montreal.

WHEN THE KITES ARE DANGEROUS

A Scotch Highlander, in the Walker Hospital, Fraserburgh, states that at the battle of Loos his regiment and several others of the Scottish Division, advanced to the attack with practically nothing on them except their shirts. The reason for so doing was that in getting to the Germans' wire entanglements, their kilts were torn to pieces, and impeded their progress.

Another military patient at the hospital was one of 12 men blown into a dug-out by a shell explosion. The roof collapsed and entombed them, and they lay there unconscious for seven hours before their comrades could effect their rescue.

QUEBEC SUBMISSIVE TO CONSCRIPTION

Will Not Fill The Vacancies On Fire And Police Force

MONTREAL, June 29.—The special sub-committee of the Board of Control which is engaged at present in making recommendations for a heavy cut in the expenses of the civic administration next year, decided yesterday afternoon that it would not be in the interests of the city not to fill existing vacancies, or vacancies about to occur on the police and fire departments.

Chief Campeau, the head of the police department, appeared before the committee and submitted his plans for reducing expenses in his department. There recommendations do not include any reduction of men in number as the department is under-manned now.

There are at present about sixty vacancies in the police and fire departments, the majority being in the police department. The committee's division will make a reduction of about $60,000 in the budget salary lists.

The sub-committee has some eight or ten more departments to examine yet, the most important being that of the public works, which will probably be dealt with to-day. A retrenchment of about $200,000 will be recommended in this one department. When the committee has completed its labours the members will lay their recommendations before the full Board of Control for ratification or amendment as the case may be.

Auburn Mills Khaki Of Good Quality

Government Got "Good Value for Every Yard."

CAME UP TO STANDARD

Chief Inspector Chas. Burns Says Dr. Hersey's Test Was Unreliable — Manufacturers Giving Best Value Possible Under Circumstances.

OTTAWA, June 28.—The Davidson Commission cleaned the slate this afternoon of all the investigations into war purchases so far referred to the Commission by the Government. The last bit of evidence taken was in regard to the allegation that the Auburn Woollen Mills of Peterborough had supplied khaki to the Department of Militia in which there was a cheapening mixture of shoddy. The concluding evidence on this branch of the Commissioner's inquiries went to exonerate the company.

All that now remains for Sir Charles Davidson to do is to submit to the Government his findings on the evidence taken in the score or so of cases investigated from coast to coast since May of last year. No report on any of the subjects inquired into has yet been made.

REBUTTAL OF HERSEY'S EVIDENCE.

The evidence taken at this afternoon's sitting of the Commission mainly concerned evidence rebuttal of the evidence given at a previous sitting by Dr. Milton Hersey, a Montreal analyst, to the effect that the cloth for uniforms manufactured by the Auburn Mills fell below Militia Department specifications in that it had too large a proportion of short fibres.

Charles Burns, Chief Inspector for the department, testified that the conditions of Dr. Hersey's test were impracticable and unreliable under the circumstances. It was unfair, he said, to gauge all the cloth by an analysis of the square inch. Mr. Burns stad that the inspectors under him had carefully examined all the product of the Auburn Mills for weight, finish, colour and texture, and it had come up to requirements. No pressure had ever been put on him to accept goodns not up to specifications, and he considered that the department had got good value for every bit of khaki purchased.

MANUFACTURERS GIVING GOOD VALUE.

At any rate there had not been a single complaint received as to the wearing qualities of the uniforms furnished to the troops. Considering the difficulties of getting wool, which now had to be imported from Australia, New Zealand or India, Mr. Burns thought the Canadian manufacturers were giving the best possible value, and the Auburn Company was no exception.

Charles Ferril, one of the inspectors, swore that the Auburn Mills product had all been carefully inspected, and came up to requirements in every respect.

NEVER HEARD OF SUCH A TEST.

James Kendry, ex-M. P., of Peterborough, President of the Company, said tthat as a manufacturer of many years' experience he had never heard of a test being applied such as the one Dr. Hersey had applied to determine the practical value of the cloth. In regard to the porous nature of the cloth he had supplied to the department, he declared, after examining samples, that the output of his mills was less porous than the department's standard sample.

VERMONT MAN'S ENDORSATION.

Raymond S. Bartlett, Superintendent of a large woollen mill in Vermont, gave similar evidence. He declared that an admixture of fifty per cent. shoddy and fifty per cent. new wool might give friese of high quality, and that the presence of the short fibre found by Dr. Hersey would not mean to any practical man that the Auburn Mills product was of inferior character.

The Commission adjourned sine die.

Application of the Cat On Youthful Offenders

When all other influences fail, the electric persuasion of the tawse, strap, cat, or whatever the rod of correction is most familiarly termed, will be applied in future on boys who are not amenable to advice and warning. Mr. C. A. G. Spence, local agent for the Children's Aid Society is inclined to the belief that corporal punishment, as a last resort, may be employed efficaciously. One boy, guilty of stealing bicycles, was given a whipping by the police, with his father's consent, and in another week twelve more stings will be laid on as an additional reminder. This may be taken as a warning to boys who are stepping here and there off the path of youthful rectitude.

OFFICERS ELECTED BY WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

At the annual meeting of the Warsaw Womens' Institute the new officers elected were:—

President—Mrs. Arthur Edwards.
Vice Pres.—Mrs. D. Taylor.
Secretary Tres.—Mrs. Geo. G. Taylor.
Librarian—Miss Olive Clements.
Directors—Mrs. H. Clements, Mrs. T. Cooper, Mrs. A. Calder, Mrs. R. Batten.

Mrs. David Miller who has been president for nine years was made Honourary President. At the summer series meetings which will be held on Monday afternoon, July 3rd. Mrs. Woelard will give talks on Tempting Salads for hot days and Patriotism.

This meeting was to have been on Wednesday, but the date had to be changed. The Institute meet regularly 2nd Thursday of every month, and they work for the Red Cross every other Tuesday afternoon. On Monday evening last The Warsaw Methodist Sunday School ("under the auspices of the Willing Workers Bible Class") held a very successful social clearing $60.50

The concert given by the Choral Class, conducted by Professor Treneer was not well attended. It is unfortunate that such good things missed so many. There was a mistake made about the date and the weather was unfavorable. The Choral Class held a very enjoyable picnic in Mr. Tucker's grove on Tuesday afternoon. Baseball, football, swinging, singing, etc. After lunch before leaving the grounds all joined in singing, "We'll Never Let the Old Flag Fall.

The class thanked Prof. Treneer for his instruction, kindness and patience during the term. Wishing him pleasant holidays. The class will meet again the first Tuesday in September and continue the work, hoping to have a large number join for the Winter term.

Come along and join you will be sure to enjoy it.

Several of our soldier boys were home for the week end.

Bees And Bullets For Lancashires

Recent despatches from East Africa give us a clear conception of the many difficulties confronting the British fighting forces there. We now read of an ingenious German ruse which enabled them to trap our soldiers. The natives have a device whereby they place hollow logs up in the trees to enable the bees to construct their hives and from these the natives collect the honey.

In one place the Germans tied a whole lot of these logs together, and attached them to a wire in the long grass. They also invented a device which caused a white flag to jump up above the grass when anyone came in contact with the wire, this being the signal to them to turn a machine gun on to that spot.

A party of Lancashires had the illluck to stumble over that wire, with the result that dozens of the bee hives fell to the ground, and up sprang the white flag, revealing their whereabouts to the enemy. The poor Lancashires immediately had bees and bullets to contend with, and between the two they had a hot time.

Forget the Weather And Keep Busy

Half the discomfort of hot weather is due to mental suggestion. People talk each other into misery.

Summer doesn't worry sensible folks. Of course, it is hot, and you perspire and all that. But that's no reason you should make yourself and other persons uncomfortable.

Wear low, light clothing, eat good food and plenty of it, drink lots of water and lemonade and that sort of thing, let liquor alone and peg away at your work without thinking about the thermometer.

You'll find the Summer isn't bad at all, and you will be in first-class physical trim by Fall time.

PTE. HEBER ROGERS' ADDRESS CHANGED

A letter received from Heber Rogers says he is well and receiving all the parcels that have been sent to him. He is longing for the war to end. He has again been moved and as there is no barrack number on the address it looks as though he might have been sent out to some farmer or outside place to work. His new address is:

Prisoner of War.
Pte. Heber S. Rogers, No. 7676.
2nd Battalion Canadians.
Heestenmoor Post Gamsen Kastorf.
Hanover, Germany.

ELECTED TO OFFICIAL BOARD OF TRINITY

The following members of Trinity Methodist church were appointed society representatives to the official Board last night. Dr. F. C. Neal, J. Kennett, A. F. Bookhout, W. T. Aamson, Norman Moncrief, Andrew Brown, A. W. Pratten, Wm. Lewis.

VACATION BEGINS TO-DAY FOR SCHOLARS

School's out for the long recess of the summer holidays. This morning the children trooped home with burdens of books and kaleidoscopic visions of endless days of play and fun. Farewells to the "hardwood bench" were doubtless paid in many cases with little flashing pangs of regret. Next year, a new room, new seats, new arrangements of associates, inexorable change toying with the children in the shifting currents of progress in which they float serenely and unheeding until the turmoil of the turbulent whirls and falls ahead strikes their ears, at first strange and unfamiliar, but insistent and impelling, awakening new concepts, arousing new action, and efforts in the struggle of life.

Children, this year, have two supervised playgrounds, at the Central and King Edward schools. The latter has been recently equipped and should attract the young people of the south end with the special features it provides. With these facilities and the natural delights of the "swimming hole," the baseball lot, and farmers' orchards, the boys will find their fun even in such trayic times as these. Such is the carefree period of youth that every generation enjoys despite the troubled conditions in which the world may move.

If a hot water bottle is cracked and leaks, instead of throwing it away, fill it with sand, and put in the oven till thoroughly hot, and it will answer the purpose as well as a new one filled with water.

Shortage of Labour Prevents Engineer From Attending To Notices of Alderman

City Engineer Parsons explained to the Board of Works last night that he was prevented from speeding up certain work on the streets by the dearth of labour. Nine men who were to have reported yesterday morning for work on sewer connections, failed to appear, and employees of the street cleaning had to be called in. The serious illness of Mr. T. A. S. Hay has resulted in the accumulation of work in the office and the aldermanic notes requesting repairs here and there, simply could not be attended to at once. Mr. Parsons and Chairman McIntyre were authorized to obtain necessary office assistance.

Following Ald. Duncan's suggestion, Water Commissioner Evans will be asked to attend future meetings of the Board.

Another Car of Oil.

It was decided to purchase another car of road oil from the British-American Co. The purchase of a storage tank for this oil was shelved for the present. The Toronto Iron Works submitted the lowest tender of $585.00 for an 8,000 gal. tank.

The City Engineer was asked to report on a guy wire which J. Robinson, 505 King street, complained was damaging his trees.

Ald. Stratton stated that the sidewalk on Park street in front of T. Walker's home, was badly in need of repairs, and was ordered to be fixed up.

The boundary road to the golf links will be put into condition under an arrangement with the municipality of Douro.

Another effort will be made to induce the G.T.R. to move their engine house from its present location at the corner of King and Bethune streets.

Mr. William Davidson of Dickson street, expressed his willingness to give the Bell Telephone a right of way over his property and an agreement will be arranged with Mr. G. O. Cunningham, thus keeping the poles off the street.

Mr. Parsons was interpoted by the Board of Works last night to place a catch basin in the lane on St. Joseph street, and connect it with the Edison drain. He was also empowered to have grates placed in the sidewalk at Lake street and Aylmer streets and at Concession and Carlisle streets, so that the surplus water could be carried off.

The Board of Education forwarded a communication to the Board asking that the streets in the neighbourhood of the Queen Mary and King George schools be improved. City Engineer Parsons was asked to report on the request. He will also report on W. C. Austin's petition for sewer connection on Sheridan street.

MASONS MOTORED TO COBOURG FOR DINNER

A party of twenty-six Royal Arch Masons motored to Cobourg last night for their annual outing and dinner. They set out from Peterborough at 4 o'clock and were home again by 11 o'clock, after quite an enjoyable evening.

Alcohol will dissolve medicine stains. Rely on your boys and let them know that you do so.

MILITARY NEWS

KINGSTON, June 29.—Alphonse Robbiard, Provincial constable of Vaudreuil, Quebec, was at Barriefield camp yesterday, armed with some kind of authority from the mayor and a few citizens of his home town, with which he expected to take a number of Frenchmen from one of the eastern battalions now in camp.

The commanding officer was in no mood to discharge men to accommodate any little of big town in Quebec, and the Provincial policeman packed up his wrath and authority and returned to Vaudreuil to tell the story of how he was treated in Ontario.

"Wouldn't that jar you" was the amazed comment of an officer.

The Kingston Standard Says:

Lt.-Col. Johnston, O.C., of the 93rd battalion is back in camp after spending a few days in Peterborough.

The 93rd battalion will enter a tug-of-war team for the silver trophy on Thursday afternoon.

Each night the men of the 93rd have an impromptu concert programme in their big central meeting tent.

Yesterday, the School of Cookery fed 300 men of the 93rd battalion, using the tin canteens, camp kettles, and the field kitchen. The men were given one of the best meals they have had in camp.

MORE CHANGES ARE ANNOUNCED

MONTREAL, Que. June 29.—Further changes and promotions in the general passenger department of the Canadian Pacific Railway are announced by Mr. C. B. Foster, assistant passenger traffic manager. Mr. Robert Johnston, who has been attending to detail of excursion work and military movements in the general passenger department, is appointed, effective July 1st, to the position of excursion agent. Mr. Johnston has been in the employ of the company for seventeen years. Mr. Herbert R. Matheson, formerly chief clerk in the district passenger department, Toronto, is being brought into the general passenger department, Montreal, for the purpose of obtaining head office experience and will, effective July 1st, be located in the general passenger department, Montreal.

HOSPITAL SUPPLIES DESTROYED

LONDON, Ont., June 29.—A cable to the local Daughters of the Empire states that eleven reserve hospital supplies at Shorncliffe have been destroyed by fire. A general call has been sent out to the women of the district for fresh supplies.

CONSERVATORY EXAMS. ARE HELD HERE TO-DAY

The annual examinations under the direction of the Toronto Conservatory of Music are being held here to-day, with Dr. Ham presiding, and to-morrow, Mr. Wells. The candidates in piano, organ, and vocal work are heard at the Conservatory of Music, for its pupils, and at the Y.M.C.A. for the others in the city.

GRAMPIAN IS DUE SATURDAY

The Allan Line steamship "Grampian" is due in Quebec at 8 p.m. Saturday; Montreal Sunday.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

SIX CLUBS HAVE CHANCE IN NATIONAL

NEW YORK, June 27.—The issue in the National League race continues in doubt. The season is nearly half over yet none of the teams has a decided advantage. Four are considerably in the race, with two others close enough up to cause their supporters to be slightly hopeful.

The Dodgers have the edge, so far The Brooklynite hurlers, , following the pace of Jeff Pfeffer, have been whirling onward at a terrific clip The team, as a whole has been hitting. Such a combination will furnish a fight in any league all the time.

The Phillies refuse to do any cracking. They have demonstrated to date that their achievement of a year ago was not a fluke. Other teams went into the race considerably strengthened. The Phillie line up of 1916 is almost intact. Yet the squad of Moran "misfits" continue to hang around first place with a grimness that is surprising.

GIANTS AND BRAVES.

The Giants—heaven only knows what they will do. They have been so erratic this season that no one can forecast from one day to another what they are likely to achieve. First they started by losing thirteen out of fifteen games, burying themselves as it seemed, in last place. Then they turned right around, and won seventeen straight following that they have played it and out baseball, displaying flashes of brilliancy one day; performing like dubs the next. The Giants are a dangerous team, and they seem to have sufficient power to lift themselves to the top But will they use that power?

The Braves have been somewhat of a disappointment. They have never actually started. All season long the brand of baseball they have displayed has been spotted. On paper, the Braves loom up as a pennant combination. They have the hitters the fielders and the pitchers. They don't seem to lack anything necessary to keep a club right in the pennant fight. Yet they have been floundering along. Fred Marshall Stallings, however, is hopeful. His club, he feels, is a warm weather outfit, one that really doesn't begin speeding up until heat is in our midst. The torrid spell is about due, and now comes the Bostonian test. Will the Braves move upward and onward-or won't they?

REDS SHOULD COME.

The Cubs, after a poor start, have been doing nicely. But they still are quite a jump from first place. Josephus Tinker is optimistic. He should be. His club is strong in every department. If the breaks begin to come the Cubian way, instead of going against the mas in the past Chicago will have its long delayed chance to exude cheers.

The pepperiest club in the Tener circuit is that headed by Charles Lincoln Herzog. Those Redlegs look so good that it occasions surprises to find them imbedded in second division. Herzog explains this by saying that his pitchers—especially Toney, the star, have rounded to slowly this season.

"The team as a whole is going along nicely now," said Herzog. "In the past we were beaten frequently because my pitchers weren't delivering and because we had some hard luck. Now we're ready. If we don't show up well from now on it won't be because of tough luck, but because we have faced better teams.

THE CELLAR OCCUPANTS.

The Pirates have played better baseball than was expected, but they are in seventh place. The chances are that they won't rise higher-not more than one notch at best. The team is too mediocre to figure in a pennant fight. The Cardinals also have been going poorly but probably they have done the best they could. They are imbedded in the cellar, and when one gazes upon the make-up of the club, no surprise results. The Cards are the worst looking team in the league, and they are in the proper element—last place

Right now, Brooklyn looks like the best club in the league with the Phillies as dangerous rivals. The Giants may cause trouble for both, and they may not. They are impossible to "dope". The Braves have the punch, but will they deliver it? And the Cubs and Reds are the "dark horses", with the Reds so dusky of tinge that the betting is about 100 to 1 against them.

The National League is drawing well this season, and no wonder. With only about 150 pounds or so separating the first and sixth place teams, and the season less than half over, it still is anybody's race that can sprint and then maintain it.

Important Part Is Played By Subterranean Warfare

General de Lacroix has an interesting article in the Paris Temps on the part played in the combats at the front by subterranean warfare and on the work of the sappers and miners, so important and yet so little known which requiries qualities of energy and patience to so great a degree.

"Subterranean warfare," says this well-known military critic, "is one of the most ancient operations known to military art. In former centuries it provided the assailant with the means of advancing secretly through a tunnel to the interior of the besieged place into which he sought to break. The besieged opposed such attacks by filling the tunnels with smoke or burning material.

"After the invention of gunpowder the tunnels were further used to deposit at designated places charges of explosive works. Subterranean warfare then became an art singularly attractive to military engineers. Mining operations had a great development in certain famous sieges, among which may be mentioned that of Boulogne in the sixteenth century, of Arras in the seventeenth, of Turin in the eighteenth and more recently of Saragossa and of Sebastopol.

LESSON IN RECENT SIEGE.

"Then, armies having become larger and armaments more and more powerful, with swifter and swifter action, the operations of subterranean warfare, necessarily slow, lost their importance and gave way to manoeuvres and more rapid movements. From that time subterranean warfare was relegated to the condition of an obsolete process. The siege of Port Arthur, however, showed that it had been abandoned too soon.

"When the present war took on the character of trench fighting subterranean operations were begun, at first hesitatingly at certain points of the front, and finally entered into the scheme wherever immediate contact of the two opponents rendered it possible. Then the art was born again in the technical experience of our engineer officers, as well as in the determined work of the sappers.

"It is at the end of the tunnels or flues that the explosive charges are placed. The hollows at the surface caused by the explosions are called in French 'entonnoirs' — 'funnels'. The chambers containing the charges are called ordinary, surcharged or undercharged, according to whether the object is to obtain 'funnels' with a radius equal, superior or inferior to the depth the charge is placed below the surface. The 'camouflets' are chambers undercharged, so that their action is confined locally and no funnel is produced.

'LISTENERS' GIVE INFORMATION

Subterranean warfare draws its technique from ordinary warfare. It has its service of safety and of reconnoitring by its 'listeners,' to whom is assigned the duty of gathering information about the enemy's works through what they can hear. It may attempt a frontal attack or an enveloping scheme by shearing off on the opponents' flanks. It has guards for its own flanks in the shape of galleries or flues branching from the tunnel of direct attack. It has its offensives and its counter attacks, its successive lines of defence and its reducts.

"The most simple method of mine-work is when the destruction of an important element of the enemy's front is intended, such as a post of mitrailleuses, an armored shelter, a communication centre or any other installation in which the enemy has concentrated his resistance. Of course he opposes to these methods a system of counter mines. As the effects of the explosive charges are generally more powerful from bottom to top than in width, each side seeks to get beneath the works of his opponent. Each seeks to stop his opponent's subterranean progress by blowing up his tunnels as far as possible from his own main works. When circumstances force one side to be on the defensive a stop is made, certain points are charged and then there is nothing to do but wait until the enemy arrives within range.

UNDERGROUND REPRISAL.

"Thanks to improved apparatus that science has enabled us to discover the information gathered by the 'listeners' can direct the engineering tactics with great efficiency. It is for the engineer, taking into account the information of the 'listeners,' to determine what can be done in the circumstances, considering the terrain and the time required to accomplish the object desired by the commander and to surprise the enemy without letting him surprise you.

"Often certain elements of the counter-mine system penetrate one's own system of mines. I have been told that several times during the present war our sappers have come out in the enemy's tunnels and blown up his charges or seized his powders to use it later against him.

"It is superfluous to explain what coolness is necessary to those directing such operations and what morale these men have who despising danger and death, work in vitiated air fifty or sixty feet from the entrance of their tunnels and twenty or thirty feet below ground within a few yards of the hostile miner, who is ready perhaps to blow them up. This coolness, this morale, this contempt of danger and death furnish the best eulogy of our engineering corps."

American Colony In Russia Touches Hearts of Peasants

Petrograd, June 29.—The following excerpts from letters written by Russian soldiers to the American hospital in Petrograd not only form a quaint testimonial to the work done by members of the American colony in caring for the wounded but at the same time provide an interesting study of the intimate feelings, the childlike simplicity and naive impulses which govern the millions of soldiers who make up the Russian army. The little reading done by the Russian peasants is confined to the Bible and fairy tales and their natural mode of expression is a quaint religious style, touched with the elemental poetry of primitive peoples.

One letter reads:

"Charitable Committee, now we see that it was you taught us the thirteenth chapter of the gospels. And truly every one ought to know this chapter. In us is contained love of God and to one's neighbor. Although we are Christians, yet the teaching of Christ in us is like a clouded glass we see little through it, and a man does not see the light of Christ's teaching and gropes in the dark. Charitable committee, all your kind hearts and well wishing thoughts and all the gifts that come from you, and in addition your warm love to us, all these gathered together in me make a stout ship amidst the waters which have already swallowed up many, and in which are struggling others, drowning in the waves of this difficult time which has fallen to the lot of nearly the whole world. You go about your ship and gather up us drowning ones and take us to yourselves and cheer us and make us again like new, ready for fresh deeds. For me there has never been such a happiness from my birth as at this time, this gift which has flowed from your good hearts. It is an unheard of thing, such a great sum. I cannot imagine how I can ever repay you for such a great thing I have no means Only in one way can I repay you, committee of well-doing. Eternally I and my unfortunate will pray to God for you and sister P Eternally we will remember that your strong ship came up in time to save me in my little boat which had already begun to sink under the water. Now I see that Providence watched over me and sent the sister who interceded for me, and you with your warm love to your neighbor fulfilled the preaching of Christ and saved me and my family by your gift. Once again I beg of you to write our names and send them to my family, and they will pray God for you day and night.

"Excuse me, my benefactors, if I trouble you with my letters."

Another letter reads:

FOR THE FOUR RUBLES.

"Greetings, my dear sister, as the duty of my letter I hasten to assure you of my deepest respect and with great love I bow low to you and I wish you from God good health for many years. In inform you, my dear sister, that I received the money which you sent to me—four rubles the 28th of April, and for which I express my deepest gratitude to you and to the whole committee of the American colony. I was surprised and deeply touched by these four rubles, for the things I had made were very few, and I did not ask to have money sent me for them. For this reason I am surprised and deeply touched, not only I, but all of my family, that amongst us Russians there are also foreigners who enter so into the needs of our dear defenders of the fatherland What can I write; how can I express my thanks to you and to the whole colony? If I only had wings I would fly to you and kiss you all for your interest and kind heartedness, for your gentle and wise talk. When I feel homesick for you, then I look at the picture, and it brings back to me again our dear Lazaret, and, closing my eyes, I see one sister, and another, and the third moving about; I see the ventilator buzzing, the aeroplane turning from side to side, and it seems as if I were back in our dear Lazaret, and this comes very often to my mind.

"Now, I hasten to tell you about my health. It is not yet very good; often my legs ache and my loins pain me all the time. My stomach also troubles me. I can do a little work at home but not very much.

"Further, I announce that I have a new daughter, Maria, born about the first of April. The godmother received her from the font on the dear blanket, and at hearing where this came from the public in the church was much surprised."

WARM THANKS FROM IVAN.

A third reads:

"A great gratitude to the kindhearted committee of the American colony form the wounded and sick Ivan Pavoff Gossief, formerly under your care. Greeting, charitable committee, I send you my sincere greeting, and I bow to you all, and I thank you with tears for the gifts which we receive from you. These kind deeds of your will remain ineffaceable with us all our lives, and when we no longer live our children, who are always praying for you will continue to pray for all who founded this committee, and the happy day when you gave help. Truly now we have left our aged parents and our little helpless children. This we have done from love of our native country, for our Mother Russia, and for the Tsar, we are always ready ot lay down our lives. We and our dear allies have sworn by friendly agreement among ourselves to fight with the tempter, who is dreaming of becoming the Tsar of the whole world. God in His mercy and His wisdom is still waiting, but the hour is already near when as the Lord cast our Satan into the infernal regions, so He will overthrow this man who takes upon himself the authority over the people; because our blood and the tears of our parents and children have filled to overflowing the earthly cup.

"In these difficult moments for us you appear like angels, comforting our hearts and renewing our spiritual and physical strength. Your kind hearts and the warm love given to you by God you do not keep to yourself, but you pass it all out to helpless people who are in great need; first, bodily help for our nourishment and up-building, and secondly you teach us to love God and our neighbor, and your Lesson, charitable committee, will help us in all the days of our life and to the end of the age.

"I make my excuses before you that I have thanked you so badly, Committee of Good Deeds and Sister Prince, who interceded for me. I confess that I have shed tears of joy and I am not able to thank you as your good deeds deserve. But that my family may know from whom has come this merciful help, I beg to write your names, and send them to my family. They will pray to God for you day and night. Address Government of Penza, etc., to Varvara Romanovna Gossieva.

"Thank you, thank you, thank you, kind committee, and you Sister Prince for all that you have done for me and my family."

ORANGEMEN PREPARING FOR BIG DAY HERE ON THE 12TH

Patriotic Speeches to Be Delivered in Central Park After The Parade

The Orangemen of the city and district are making great preparations for the reception of a very large crowd of members and friends here on Wednesday, the 12th of July. Excursions are being arranged from North, South, East and West.

Enquiries from the other side of Orillia point to the incoming of two special trains from that point.

A monster parade of Orangemen, True Blues and Ladies' Orange Lodges will take place at 11 o'clock, and will be followed by patriotic addresses, some of the speakers being R. W. Bro. E. H. McLean, Grand Master of Ontario East, Rev. Riddiford, of London, (formerly of this city), J. H. Burnham, M.P., G. A. Gillespie, M. P.P., R. J. Soden, and resident clergymen of the city.

It is expected that this will be the largest demonstration ever held in the city.

Collector Pays $900 For Jersey Penny

A New Jersey penny coined by the State in 1786 and recently offered to coin collectors throughout the country by Howard P. Lewis, executor of the estate of his father, Senator Griffith W. Lewis, has been sold for $900 the record price for a one-cent American coin. The purchaser, who paid 90,000 times the face value of the penny, is Hilliard Rider, of Elmira.

The big copper cent has the seal of New Jersey on the face, with the date under the beam. The only other penny of this mintage known is in the James Ten Eyck collection, which several years ago was presented to the city of Albany.

Releasing of Prisoners is a Big Step

Examiner Special:

WASHINGTON, June 29.—Danger of immediate hostilities between the United States and Mexico has been averted. With the release by Gen. Carranza of the American prisoners at Chihuahua, a big step has been taken in avoiding 'the gravest consequences' there is yet much to be done, however.

NEW SERBIAN ARMY.

Coming Liberation of Southern Slavs —Avenging Advance Awaited.

SALONIKA, June 27.—In the arena of the world-war an important force has made its appearance. Serbia is on the scene once more.

These days are seeing the arrival in Macedonia of the completing elements of the Serbian army—an army reconstituted and reorganized, an army re-born. The arrival of the Serbian army at the Macedonian theatre of war adds to the army under General Sarrail as fine a force as any general could wish to see under his command.

The Serbian army of liberation is going to liberate something more than Serbia. It is going to carry freedom not only to the Serb, but to the Croat and Slovene as well, and to sweep oppression from wider lands than those watered by the Drina, Vardar and Morava.

WEDDING BELLS

SULLIVAN—DOHERTY.
A very pretty wedding was solemnized in St. Joseph's church, Douro, by the Rev. Father McGuire, when Mr. John Sullivan and Miss Regina Doherty, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony. The bride who looked charming in pink silk over Georgette crepe, with pink tulle hat, was assisted by her cousin, Miss Mary Doherty, and the groom was assisted by his brother, Mr. Frank Sullivan. After the marriage ceremony, the wedding party drove to the home of the bride's parents, where a dainty breakfast was served. The happy couple left on a short honeymoon to Toronto, and on their return will reside in Peterborough.

NICHOLS—CRAPP.
The marriage took place on Wednesday, June 21, at 3 o'clock, of Miss Phoebe A. Crapp to Mr. Willford Nichols, both of Smith Township.

The ceremony was performed in the parsonage at Lakefield by the Rev. Mr. Barrett.

In the evening, at the home of the bride, was the scene of a very interesting event, when a reception was held in honour of the newly-married couple. After lunch was served the happy couple left for their future home in Smith through showers of confetti, rice, and good wishes.

The bride was the recipient of many useful and beautiful presents.

OBITUARY

MARY HELEN ORR.
Bobcaygeon, June 29.—The village was shocked Saturday evening when it became known that Miss Mary H Orr, for over fifty years a central figure in the village, had passed away in Toronto that afternoon. Miss Orr was born in Keene, the daughter of Mr. Alexander Orr of that place. At an early age Miss Orr moved to Bobcaygeon with her parents. Mr. Orr engaged in the mercantile business, carrying on the business of a general merchant. He built the present stone structure on the corner of Fulton and King streets, which for years was known as the Temperance House, in which was the store on the south side. After Mr. Orr's death Miss Orr managed and carried on the business in his name for some time and afterwards in her own name. She was one of the busiest and shrewdest of merchants. Her hours were early and late. She ran the store with one or two clerks, kept her own books and carried on her correspondence, which grew and multiplied with the years, herself. During these years she became known as the money king of Bobcaygeon. Not only at home either, for her name was known in financial circles both in Ontario as well as in border cities of the union.

Special to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, June 27.—Responding to favorable Mexican developments, the Stock Exchange opened with a bang to-day, and prices jumped from one to four points. Stocks which have been driven down during the past several days, made the greatest gains.

Butte and Superior were up 3 1-2, at 70; American Smelting gained 3 1-8; Studebaker, 2 1-2; Chandler Motor, 3 3-4; Crucible, 3 1-4; and Marine, Pref., 3 3-4; U. S. Steel sold up 1 1-8 to 88.

READY TO EXTEND THE CHARLOTTE ST. LINE

The extension of the Charlotte Street car line to the west end of Patterson Street via Monaghan Road, awaits the city's preliminary preparation of the roadway. This was the notification to the Board of Works from the Utilities Commission last night.

Engineer Parsons reported that he had arranged with North Monaghan Council to repair the boundary road, Charlotte to Sherbrooke. Weller to Smith, and Chamberlen to C.P.R. tracks, and it was left with Mayor Duffus and him to carry out the suggested improvements.

AUTOMOBILE STRUCK BOY CROSSING ROAD

A son of Mr. Thos. H. Bacon, 19 Westcott street, was hit by the Peterborough Creamery's delivery wagon this morning on Rubidge street, escaping fortunately with only a shaking up. He was on a milk waggon, which was approaching the automobile, and had jumped down to deliver a bottle without one of those safety first thoughts to look up the street before crossing. As it was he stepped directly in front of the auto delivery, was knocked down and under the car which passed over him without the wheels touching him. The driver of the car conveyed him home, apparently uninjured.

Must Not Display Coffins in the Windows

MONTREAL, June 30. — At their meeting, which is expected to be the last for two or three weeks, the City Council will be asked to give the third reading to and adopt a new by-law designed to prohibit exhibitions of coffins, shrouds and other reminders of the next life in the windows of the undertakers.

The new by-law, printed copies of which were received at the City Hall this morning, is chiefly remarkable for its severity in that, any person who persists in infractions of the ordinance after having been once convicted, is liable to a fine of $40 and imprisonment for a period not exceeding two months for every day that the by-law is broken.

The by-law, which has been drafted and brought before the Council by Ald. Georges Vandelac, himself an undertaker, and who recently colored the growing exhibition for commercial purposes, of the appendages of death reads:

"The exhibition or display, for commercial or advertising purposes, of coffins or of funeral ornaments or hangings, in windows or at any other places where the same can be seen by persons passing on the streets or public places, is expressly prohibited in the city of Montreal.

Large Forces Will Be Added To Italian Armies Austrians Resist Advance

Enemy is Making a Most Stubborn Resistance to the Italian Advance in the Trentino--New Ministry Fulfills Its Promise for a More Vigorous Prosecution of War--Germans Attempt to Divert the Russian Offensive in Galicia.

CROWN PRINCE HURLED BACK

ROME, June 30.—Fulfilling its promise for a more vigorous prosecution of the war, the new ministry to-day called to the colours several new classes of men.

The call adds large forces to the Italian armies, though the exact number cannot be made public.

The Austrians are now making a most stubborn resistance to the Italian advance in the Trentino.

NEW SERIES OF ATTACKS.

PETROGRAD, June 30.—The Germans have begun a series of sudden and violent attacks against General Kuropatkin's entire front from the Riga through Jacobstadt to the Dvinsk. It is believed that Field Marshal Von Hindenburg is launching a new offensive in an effort to divert Russian troops from the Galician and Volhynian campign.

EARTH IS NOT YET OVERPOPULATED

EVERY PERSON UNDER THE SUN COULD STAND ON LAKE CHAMPLAIN WHEN FROZEN OVER.

Thoughtless thinkers and careless talkers, says the Pittsburg Leader, were given a friendly rebuke by Dr. Baekeland, of the United States Naval Consulting Board, in an address at the annual banquet of the University of Pittsburg. He spoke of the reckless way people talk about the overpopulation of the world and in a few minutes showed how far they were from the truth and how far they have penetrated into the land of the ridiculous.

Dr. Baekeland said that every inhabitant of the globe could find standing room on the surface of Lake Champlain when it is frozen over, and if the elder and the younger people should considerately stand close together close to the shore the more youthful and robust could make a skating ground on the lake's surface and crowd it less than the skating pond in Central Park in New York is congested on an ordinary winter day in the skating season. Dr. Baekeland allows each person big or little, old and young, about a square yard of room, but the overpopulation fanatics are probably still unconvinced.

A few years ago some men with a taste for fantastic statistics figured out that every man, woman and child in the United States could have a lot of liberal size in Texas and then have left more ground for parks and playgrounds than any state in the American Union possesses. This was to meet the talkative souls who are never satisfied unless they explain everything from a rainy summer to a new earth place ball team by a diagram of how much the world is overpopulated. Figures are never convincing to a man with a bug enthusiastically supported by an active imagination.

WHY BAILEY WAS FREED.

Germans Fail To Stem The Russian Advance

Teutons are in Full Retreat at All Points South of Kovel--- French Troops Gain Two Important Points Near Verdun--- Germans Offer Little Resistance.

LATE WAR DESPATCHES

LONDON, June 30.—Strong forces of Germans have joined the Austrians but failed to stop the Russian drive in Galicia. The Teutons are in full retreat at all points south of Kovel.

PARIS, June 30.—French assaults late yesterday gained two important points near Thiaumont. The Germans offered little resistance.

BOMBARDMENT CONTINUES.

LONDON June 30.—Entire village used by the Germans as a billet was wiped out by British artillery.

British guns continue the bombardment over a broad front which was begun yesterday. A correspondent, riding seventy miles behind the lines, found the same regular pounding of positions on both days, whether in the Somme region or along the Vimy ridge.

Going to a point on high ground which allowed a broad sweep of vision in a rolling country, or forward to observation posts in the trenches, the correspondent found the horizon always bounded by shell bursts. There might be a lull at one point for a while, but soon the inferno in that direction was renewed.

NORTH MONAGHAN COUNCIL HOLDS REGULAR SESSION

The North Monaghan Council met in the County Council Chambers on June 28 with all the members present and Reeve McIntosh presiding. The minutes of the last two meetings were read and confirmed.

It was moved by Mr. Bell and seconded by Mr. Rye that the Road Commissioner for Road Division No. 6 be authorised to notify private individuals who have erected fences on public high ways to remove the same at once and that if they do not comply with his order in a reasonable time the Road Commissioner be authorized to move the fences back off the road. Carried.

City Engineer R. H. Parsons was present and addressed the council in regard to the Boundary Road. A Communication was also read from Mr. Parsons stating that he had received a letter from the Radial Railway Co., to the effect that the company would go ahead with the proposed extension from Charlotte street to Patterson street, provided that the municipal authorities leave a nine foot space in the centre of the road and sufficient ballast to complete the road if the track was not there.

The City Engineer will arrange a meeting between the company and the city and township authorities in regard to the matter.

The following bills were presented for payment.

On motion of Messrs. Robson and Rye the following salaries and session al allowances were ordered to be paid:

Bert Sanderson (assessor)	$62.50
John McIntosh	20.00
Wm. Robson	15.00
H. B. Rye	15.00
R. A. Dobbin	15.00
Clerk (1-2 year's salary)	137.50
Treasurer (year's work)	62.50

Mr. Bell moved seconded by Mr. Rye that by-law No. 706 amending by-law No. 674 and reducing the rate of commutation of statute labour from $1.00 to 80c per day be and is hereby rescinded and by-law No. 706 is hereby declared nul and void. That by-law No. 674 is in full force and that the commutation of statute labour be levied and collected according to the same at the rate of $1.00 per day. Carried.

Moved by Mr. Bell, seconded by Mr. Dobbin that Mr. F. H. O'Connor be asked to tender for pulling gravel to the stone crusher and that the Reeve and Road Commissioner for Division No. 6 be authorized to make arrangements for the same.

On motion of Messrs. Dobbin and Rye the Council adjourned and went into Court of Revision with Deputy Reeve Robson in the chair.

The appeal and declaration of Samuel Whatley that he had been amused for a dog which had been poisoned and was now no more, was heard and on motion of Messrs. Bell and Rye this particular dog tax was struck off the assessment.

Mr. McIntosh moved, seconded by Mr. Rye that the appeal of James Drain regarding F. A. O'Connor be granted and that he be voted as a Separate School supporter.

On motion of Messrs. McIntosh and Dobbin the school assessment of $25.00 over the fixed assessment of $30.00 on the Sandstone Buck Co. will be struck off and the assessment will be $30.00 for all purposes.

H. T. Millard appealed that his assessment was too high and James Drain made a similar appeal on behalf of James and John McGuire. No action was taken on either appeal.

On motion of Messrs. Bell and Rye the assessment roll was accepted and confirmed.

ROBIN CARRIES OFF PROOF OF TALE

NEWTON, N. J., June 30.—A particularly level headed robin flew into the office of Dr. Whitfield Gray, veterinary surgeon, and submitted to an operation on his throat. Then he flew away again with a pained little chirp of thanks and was seen no more. It was such a well turned and unbirdlike prank that it is unfortunate hardly any one in town believes the story.

According to two young men, one of whom is James Smith, assistant to Dr. Gray, they were seated in the office in the early evening when the robin flew to the window sill. He looked about for a moment and then flew in an irregular course to Mr Smith. A glance showed Mr. Smith that the bird was in agony and was gasping for breath.

An examination showed that the little warbler had an abscess in his throat, and Mr. Smith straightway operated on the little patient. The bird flew away in a few minutes, apparently quite recovered. Persons here who have been told of the incident whistle through their teeth, whatever that may mean.

AID TO SHIPBUILDING.

It Will Likely Take the Form of Subsidies.

OTTAWA, June 30.—The form of aid to the Canadian shipbuilding industry is under consideration by a sub-committee of the Cabinet. Information is being secured, but no policy arrived at. There are two proposals—bond guarantees to companies, and subsidies, making up the difference of construction cost between Great Britain and Canada. The latter will likely be adopted. Special provision is probable for Atlantic services in conjunction with the transcontinental railway. Hon. J. D. Hazen is chairman of the sub-committee.

VICTORY NEXT YEAR.

LONDON, June 30.—Professor Pollard thinks that the utmost which the Allies can reasonably look forward to is that the final defeat of Germany will come some time next year, after a winter of discontent such as Germany has never known, and after a naval battle which even the enemy will not be able to claim as a victory.

Professor Pollard spoke at University College, London, on the progress of the war. As Russia, he said, had benefited by the Austrian mistake of sending troops to meet the Italians, one hoped that the Allies would be able to benefit by the Germans' mistake in sending so large a proportion of their forces to Verdun.

It seemed probable that the Russian offensive would be directed mainly towards Austria, with considerable prospects of success.

There were grounds for the belief that we should not have to wait very long for an offensive on the western front.

RUNNING NOSE COLDS CURED SNEEZING STOPPED INSTANTLY

The worst of a cold is how suddenly it comes. No time to hurry to the drug store, croup develops, the lungs are affected with pneumonia or tuberculosis and it's too late. Keep Catarrhozone on hand — it kills colds instantly. Something magical about the way it cures catarrh and bronchitis. Catarrhozone is the best remedy because it cures in nature's way; it heals, soothes and restores permanently. Carry a Catarrhozone inhaler in your pocket, use it occasionally and you'll never catch cold —that's worth remembering.

Beware of dangerous substitutes, meant to deceive you for genuine Catarrhozone, which is sold everywhere, large size containing two months' treatment costs $1.00; small size, 50c.; sample size, 25c.

BELGIAN WOMEN BADGERED BY TRICKERY OF GERMANS

"I've lost my pocket book," cries a person seated in a railway train arriving at Charleroi.

Immediately there is great commotion. The anxiety of the German officials to find that pocket-book is wonderful. The station is closed and each person is searched.

Incidentally every letter and document found in possession of any of the travellers is seized.

This is only one of the means employed by the Germans to prevent communication between the unfortunate Belgian people and the outside world. The service of the post office is very regular for the occupied territory, but no letters are allowed from abroad, even from Switzerland. There are private couriers who for large sums and at great risks undertake to bring in letters that have been handed to them at the frontier. The Germans, however, as shown, are very ingenious in discovering these couriers. Then imprisonment or a heavy fine, or perhaps death, is the penalty.

Following the seizure of such letters the Germans have a peculiar means of mental torture for the persons addressed. A police official with an air of mystery takes a letter to its destination. If it is accepted arrest and punishment follows:

TORTURING A MOTHER.

One woman who had been waiting for months for news from her son, a soldier at the front, finally received a letter from a police official, who handed a letter to her.

"I am not expecting a letter from any one," she said.

"But it is from your son," said the policeman.

"I have no son."

"But, see," said the man opening the envelope; "you will easily recognize the writing."

Yes, she recognized it, but she had the strength to say "No."

"Then," said the inquisitor, "we will burn it," and he proceeded in her presence to set fire to the precious letter, and waited until it was consumed. "It was like burning my heart out," said the poor mother relating the incident to a woman who managed to escape by some means not revealed, and told the Paris Figaro of life in Belgium under German rule.

Once in a while the residents get the better of their torturers, this woman said, and related the following incident:

Mme. M. had received a letter from her husband. An officer who was billeted in her apartment saw that she seemed very happy, and said:

"You seem very gay, madam; you have doubtless received good news from Mr. M."

"Why, yes," she replied, deceived by this appearance of interest; "he has written to me. He is very well."

"Ah, so much the better," answered the officer.

REVENGE ON OFFICER.

Two hours later the wife was taken before the kommandantur, and fined 20 marks ($5.00.)

"Is that all?" she cried laughing.

"You think that isn't enough?" said the official.

"Why, I've been told that there was so much need of money in Germany that the people are dying of hunger."

"Who told you that?"

"The officer who is staying at my house, Lieutenant 8th"——

That evening the Lieutenant was arrested and sent to prison for a month, so that the woman had her revenge.

"At first sight," said the refugee interviewed by the Figaro, "everything seems normal; the street cars run, the stores are open, the schools, too; the courts are sitting with the ordinary magistrates of the country; the coal mines are worked and the gas and electrical establishments are in operation. But in other concerns there is only here and there a workman employed to take care of motive power. The inhabitants can go about the streets freely but for the shortest journey they must have permission of the kommandantur.

"Everything is at exorbitant prices. Cloth is rare; rubber has absolutely disappeared. The Germans have confiscated all that they could find. Beef, pork or lard costs 75c a pound; butter, 76c; fat, which is very hard to get, has reached 91c a lb; nut oil, which is the only kind allowed, is $2.25 to $2.75 a quart; an ordinary herring costs 12 or 14c. Potatoes cannot be had for their weight in gold. The chief food is rice boiled in water, for the milk allowed is so depleted of cream and so watered that it is useless. The rice is sweetened with brown sugar, at $1.60 a pound.

THE COST OF BREAD.

"The bread is black and given out by rations. The bread cards give the right to 11 ounces a day. If you want more you have to go to the pastry cooks, who bake it secretly, only they make you pay about 12c a pound. And you must not get caught or you will be heavily fined.

"Ordinary soap only exists as a legend. There is left only a little soft soap at 60c a pound.

"The American committee supplies Charleroi and many other Belgian cities. The arrival of provisions is announced 15 days in advance and everybody tries to get as much as possible.

"The inhabitants of Belgium are waiting and hoping. The German officers are wearing velvet gloves, but the claws are stuck out for almost nothing. To hear them talk, everything hateful that they do is the fault of the inhabitants. That is their system.

"With the German soldiers it is a different story. Charleroi is occupied by Landstrum troops. There are many men with gray hairs who are complaining, saying that they would like to return to their wives and children, and that they are not to blame for the excesses committed.

TROOPERS FEAR ONE ANOTHER.

"Sometimes active troops are sent there for a rest of a week or two. At first they were lodged with the inhabitants, and one could talk to them. The greater part had an unsatisfied air. They are all persuaded that England began the war and that France only followed her. So they are for death to the English.

"No one dares to undecieve them, for he would be severely punished. It was noticed that when a soldier was alone he would listen better and talk more willingly. When there were two they would be suspicious of each other. One of them said in a confidential mood, 'We would be glad to refuse to march, but if a thousand men should refuse one man with a mitrailleuse would be sufficient to put them all out.' They reason like this:

"'To march to battle one has three chances out of four of not being killed. One may be unhurt, be a prisoner, or be wounded. If he refuses, one is sure of being shot.'"

Suffered No End of Pain FROM BACKACHES.

If a pain attacks you in the back you should stop and think what it is and what causes it.

If the kidneys are at fault—and in nine cases out of every ten they are—you should attend to them at once, as it is impossible to have a well, strong back unless the kidneys are performing their functions in a proper manner.

Anyone with a bad back should appreciate how to get a good one. It is a very simple matter. Use Doan's Kidney Pills. They regulate the kidneys, and there is no further excuse for any kidney trouble to exist.

Mrs. E. J. Graves, Oshawa, Ont., writes: "My complaint lies with my kidneys. I have suffered no end of pain with them, and with backaches. I had tried everything, so I thought, until a friend advised me to try a box of Doan's Kidney Pills. I did try them, and one box helped me fine, so I got another, and now feel that I cannot recommend them too highly to anyone suffering with kidney trouble."

Doan's Kidney Pills are the original kidney pills. Do not accept any substitutes put up under similar names. Always see that our trade mark "The Maple Leaf" appears on the table and wrapper.

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

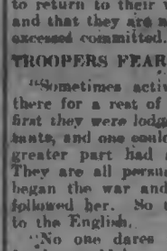
DYSPEPSIA OF WOMEN

Special Treatment Required.

Many women suffer from a form of indigestion or dyspepsia which does not yield to ordinary treatment. While the symptoms are similar to those of ordinary indigestion, yet the medicines usually prescribed do not restore the patient's normal condition.

There seems to be a kind of dyspepsia caused by derangement of the female organism. While this appears to be the same as ordinary indigestion it can be relieved only by a medicine which, besides acting as a stomach tonic, is good for female ailments. Read what such a medicine did for Mrs. Williams:—

She says:—"Before I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was troubled with dyspepsia and bearing down pains in my back and sides, and after my meals my stomach would bloat up till I could scarcely get my breath. At times I was so weak I could hardly stand on my feet and I looked hollow-eyed and my skin was yellow. Now I have a good color, have gained in every way and can do my work without any pains. I think it is the best medicine on earth for stomach troubles of women."—Mrs. Nellie Williams, 21 West 3d Street, New Albany, Ind.



ROVING AMONG BURSTING SHELLS

London, June 27.—A Canadian colonel took a party of correspondents and their guardian official to see one of Belgium's ruined towns.

It must have been once quite a good sized city, handsomely and substantially built, but the German guns had battered it completely to pieces.

Some tottering wall still stood, but there was not a whole building in the place.

"And they're still shelling it," said the colonel, "so don't linger, and when you cross the grand square keep close to what is left of the walls. If a shot should fall in the square while we are in it the walls are some shelter.

"Doesn't look as if it would do much good to keep on shelling this place," commented a correspondent.

"It does as good," said the colonel, for it wastes the Boches' ammunition."

In this town is an emergency hospital in a cellar under a building which has not been quite so badly smashed up as the others. To get to it you go down through a kind of outdoor cellar stairway with a bomb proof cover.

While the party stood talking with the surgeon in charge, a German aeroplane appeared overhead.

"Quick!" cried the colonel, "Get cover!"

The tourists dove down into the cellar like chipmunks and for about 30 minutes the aeroplane kept them cooped up there.

"The other day a group of Irish guards stood gawping at an aeroplane just like that," said the colonel, "and in less than two minutes a shell dropped near them. The aviator had wireless. The rice is sweetened with brown sugar, at $1.60 a pound.

ESCAPED FROM MERCER.

Louisa Markesfeldt, Who Posed as a Spy, at Liberty.

TORONTO, June 29.—Obtaining a duplicate key, Louisa Markesfeldt, the young German girl who was sent to the Mercer last June, escaped from that institution last week. A number of sheets, tied together and used as a rope, showed how she escaped from the building. With the key she gained freedom from her room.

This isn't the first time that the girl has escaped from custody. While in Court Street station she jumped out of a window, but was caught on the street. Louisa Markesfeldt, when first arrested, was believed to be a German spy, but later it was found she was only romancing and was sent to the Mercer as a vagrant.

ATTACK ON INDICTMENT.

Counsel for Casement Seeks Favourable Verdict on Technical Point.

LONDON, June 27.—As Mr Sullivan proceeded with his address in behalf of Sir Roger Casement this afternoon it became increasingly evident that the defence attached the greatest importance to the attempt to show the indictment was faulty, inasmuch as it charged Sir Roger committed treason "by adhering to the King's enemies elsewhere than in the King's realms.

"For more than two hours Mr. Sullivan argued the matter from every angle, citing numerous cases, some of which were very ancient, which he declared tended to show no man could be tried for treason committed outside the King's realm.

At many points the three justices entered into dissertations on the questions raised. When the court adjourned Mr. Sullivan had not completed his argument.

WHAT ONTARIO FOLKS SAY.

Hamilton, Ont.—"This is to state that I have received great benefit from the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Some time ago I was run down and weak, suffered loss of appetite and was miserable. Four bottles of the 'Prescription' cured me up in fine shape; it did wonders for me and I can recommend it very highly to women who are ailing."—Miss Mabel Miller, 127 Hess St., Hamilton, Ont.

Brantford, Ont.—"Some few years ago I got in a very much run-down condition. Was very weak; could not do anything; had no strength at all. I began taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription; I only took five bottles and it put me in splendid condition. I felt better than I had for years. Other members of my family have used this medicine and found it equally as beneficial. I can highly recommend it to weak women."—Mrs. A. Gilmour, 71 Brighton Row, Brantford, Ont.

The use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription makes women happy by making them healthy. There are no more crying spells. "Favorite Prescription" makes weak women strong, sick women well.

Like an open book, our faces tell the tale of health or disease. Hollow cheeks and sunken eyes, listless steps, sleepless nights—tell of wasting debilitating disease some place in the body. It may be one place or another, the cause is generally traceable to a common source.

Get the "Prescription" to-day—either in liquid or tablet form—if you want to better your physical condition speedily.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Keep the body clean inside as well as outside.

The Racking Pains of Sciatic Rheumatism

Were Well-nigh Unbearable—After Five Years of Suffering Cure Was Effected by Dr. Chase's Medicines

For downright excruciating pain few ailments can be compared to sciatic rheumatism. Since this condition of the sciatic nerve denotes exhaustion of the nervous system, the logical cure is found in the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to nourish the starved nerves back to health and vigor.

Reports are continually coming in to us regarding the splendid results obtained in the treatment of sciatic rheumatism by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food after each meal and Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills occasionally as a means of arousing the action of the liver, kidneys and bowels and thereby keeping the system freed of pain causing poisonous impurities.

Mr. W. J. Talbot, Edenwold, Sask., writes: "It is a great pleasure for me to recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and Nerve Food as a cure for Sciatic Rheumatism. The pain I have suffered has been well-nigh unbearable. It would start in the hips and run down the legs to the toes, gradually getting worse. The nerves contract until one is practically useless. My doctor tried many different treatments, but could only afford relief for a time.

"For about five years I was subject to this trouble with severe attacks which would last about two months. The last attack I had was shortened to two weeks by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and Nerve Food. This treatment was continued until I was satisfied that the cure was lasting."

This statement is endorsed by Mr. H. E. Wooley, J.P.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, six for $2.50. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Limited, Toronto.

PATRIOTISM

Patriotism, like Charity, should begin at home. The man who is willing at any time to protect his country against foreign foes should be willing AT ALL TIMES to protect his Family against such common foes as Poverty, Privation and Suffering.

A Life Insurance Company cannot take the place of a Husband.

BUT---

It can preserve the family from want.
It can lighten their load of care.
It can build a barrier against adversity.
It can strengthen the foundation of the home.
It can certify to a man's affectionate regard for his family.
It can place his widow beyond the need of carrying for support.
It can add to a man's years by freeing him from anxiety.
It can enhance the respect and esteem of the public and of his wife and children for him.

HOME HEALTH CLUB

By DR. DAVID H. KEEDER

Twenty-five years on one job, and the result: When the Home Health Club started its work of reform in methods of living there were all kinds of knockers ready with a hammer and they surely did use them. It is truly said, however, that nothing succeeds like success and that the work I have been doing has borne abundant fruit is attested by such articles as the following which is taken from the little magazine published by the Children's National Tuberculosis Society, under the name of Our Tubercular Children.

"The practice of medicine is undergoing at the present time almost a revolution, caused largely by wider experience and closer observation. Far less dependence is placed to-day upon the medicines than upon hygienic measures and proper diet. The best physicians everywhere are realizing that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. Instead of treating diseases, they are bending their efforts to prevent them.

The old notion that children must have measles, whooping cough, even diphtheria and other diseases, has been proven foolish and entirely contrary to modern science. We know now that a person should not be sick at all, and we know that if we would live right, eat right, work under healthful conditions and sleep in pure air, there is absolutely no reason barring accidents why we should not be well and happy every day of our lives.

This is the gospel of health to-day—a gospel that will take time to spread, but when once known will add immensely to the happiness of the nation. At any rate this new health movement is spreading; the time is fast approaching when people who do not have an intelligent idea of their body functions will be considered very illiterate.'"

Another article in the same issue asks Will Medical Science Do It? That medical science has exercised a most profound influence on nearly all questions affecting the welfare of individuals and the nation, must be obvious to every student of events. In peace and in war; whether we wish to dig a Panama canal; rid the country of hookworm and malaria; keep armies from dying of the fevers; remedy the many occupational diseases; handle the alcohol question intelligently; decrease infant mortality; prevent the immense losses from animal, grain, tree and plant diseases—in all these medical science has or is doing the work.

Will medical science help to settle the question of individual wealth? The writer thinks it will—in fact, has started already, and the reason why the wealthy will give up hoarding immense fortune will be less a moral than a selfish one.

Stronger than any other desire in the human breast is the desire to live. Life is appreciated even more by the rich because as a general rule, they are more educated, and have more to live for. But medical science comes along and says in a most cold blooded and positive manner: If you want to reach old age, you must discard. You must discard high living and all forms of dissipation; you must walk, not ride and get rid of worry; in short, lead the simple life, and live like the poor. The joker is the injunction against worry, and what great worry is there than how to hold on to a lot of money. Only one—to get enough.

When men of wealth realize — and many are commencing to—that excess money is not only of no value, but an actual hindrance to life, they will treat it in the same way as superfluous fat. Medical science has been largely instrumental in showing that idleness begets dissipation; immorality, disease, vice, crime and degeneracy. By doing this it has given labor the place of honor, so that it has become "the thing" to do something.

Will not the proposition of longer life, better health, with greater enjoyment of living and increased development of mind, heart and body, look good to the man who simply accumulates?

CLUB NOTES.

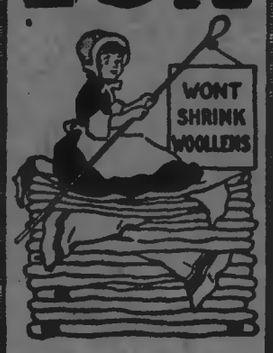
I will gladly answer all inquiries for information on health subjects from readers of this publication if same are addressed to Home Health Club, 5089 Cottage Grove Ave., Chicago, Ill. Send full name and address with four cents postage.

Dear Doctor: My nerves are not strong, am easily startled, irritated, and have fits of the "blues." My stomach is not very strong, have great distress about two hours after eating in the pit of the stomach, and feel very hungry. I eat toast, soft boiled eggs, fish and cooked fruits. Let me know what I should do.

Answer: Nervousness as well as other symptoms of that nature is caused, according to my opinion, entirely from poor digestion, of which the pain at the pit of the stomach and intense hunger are infallible indications. Almost all such conditions come from the same cause. It is the same old story of the food remaining too long in the stomach before digesting. Either you have eaten too much or you have persistently eaten of such foods as have been very hard to digest and could not be assimilated by the system. If people understood the importance of adopting a good diet when they are still well, they would not be obliged to exclude from their diet so many foods as afterwards becomes necessary. It is therefore in this case as in all others, better to "stem the tide in the brook than in the river," and you are wise to begin at once on the treatment of your condition. The diet is of vast importance in all stomach disorders. In Vol. I you will find careful instructions on food values, etc., which will enable you to select a diet which be easily assimilated. Vol. II contains besides a number of other lectures all of those on the subject of Dynamic Magnetism, which would be of especial value in overcoming the nervousness.

The diet you are now using is all right so far as it goes, except that you should substitute fresh fruits for the cooked fruits. The raw vegetables, such as cabbage, lettuce, etc., would be of value. Above all, chew everything thoroughly until it is a liquid in the mouth, and drink nothing while eating, but drink plenty of water between meals. You would also find the Compound Gentian and Charcoal-Magnesia Tablets of great value in your case, formulas of which I have given in these columns.

LUX



BLANKETS are luxuriously clean, soft and fleecy when washed with LUX. Every housewife knows that blankets are very liable to shrink in the wash and become hard and thick. LUX is the ideal preparation for washing blankets, all woollen things, fine laces, etc., because it cannot shrink them.

LUX is the economical cleanser — it dissolves readily in hot water—makes a foamy, cream-like lather which coaxes rather than forces the dirt out of clothes.

WHAT IS REALLY "JUNK"?

HOUSEHOLD HELPS By ISOBEL BRANDS

It is a difficult matter sometimes to make a quick decision as to what is "junk," and what is worth saving.

There is one over-economical housewife in a city flat who has made it a life long policy never to "throw out" anything. To throw away the oldest little dress or bit of furniture or useless gimcrack is, to her, sinful waste, and she counts it a virtue to always save everything regardless. As a consequence, part of the high rental of her modern apartment goes for storage space to accommodate old articles which she intends to donate to some worthy person some day, but most of which will never be used by anyone.

On the other hand it is a characteristic of the younger housekeepers to throw away everything immediately the particular article is partly out of fashion, or "slightly worn so that it almost seems shabby."

Before deciding the fate of any object that has passed its first era of usefulness, apply these three tests:

Can I use this for anything else?

Can anyone else find a practical use for it?

Will it cost anything to save it for possible later use?

Sometimes there seems no immediate use for some object, and we are torn between the conflicting temptation to get it out of the way quickly, and the desire to "save it" because some day we may need it. The point to consider then is, will it cost anything to save it?

If you have space in some storage garret or cellar where the articles will not be spoiled, you run no risk by saving it for possible use. On the other hand if you are in an apartment where space is at a premium you are likely to pay part of a substantial rent in order to accommodate a few articles which are not paying anything for their keep in the way of immediate service!

But if you have decided that the article is past its day of usefulness, that nobody else can use it and that it is unnecessary to keep it, don't just throw it away so that it will be burned up and utterly wasted. So much that we consider "junk" to be burned up has some possible use of which we don't know. For example a bundle of old clothes that are in rags should never be burned up or thrown out carelessly, for these have many possible good uses. Rags make some necessary cheap carpets, and fine roofing material, and most important of all—paper.

I say most important, because we are told this country is threatened with a serious shortage of paper. In fact we have been compelled to import a considerable quantity of the rags that are needed to manufacture paper. It's getting to be almost a patriotic duty to save your old clothes and rags for the ragman, who will see that they are turned again into the useful channels of industry.

Quantities of paper, too, should not wantonly be burned. Old newspapers can be used over again by the paper manufacturers, and in some neighborhoods hundreds of pounds of paper are burned and so wasted each month.

Whatever you decide about your "old junk," don't throw it away utterly. It may be useless to you, and useless to anyone else in its present form. But if you remember to start it with the old clothes man it will surely get a new lease of life somewhere, and perhaps emerge butterfly fashion out of its worn-out old caterpillared coat!

The Vacation Girl's Wardrobe

Suggestions For the Sport Shirt and Skirt

Russing Blouses and Middys Favoured

NEW YORK, June 23. —For true sport, the vacation girl must dress the part, whether her outing be a tramping tour, a camping trip, a mountain climb, or just the conventional round of tennis, golf, and boating. This annual week or two of freedom, open air and sunshine must carry us through another year, so let us make the most of our outing.

Sport Shirts and Sport Skirts.

Perhaps the most comfortable general outfit for the girl who likes a long cross-country tramp, is the short skirt of corduroy, with heavy tan boots, not too high, well oiled to prevent wetting through, a soft tan flannel skirt, made on the order of a man's, with pockets, and soft roll collar, and a soft felt or Panama hat, which is light of weight and wide enough of brim to keep the face from burning. Dogskin or wash chamois gloves may be worn if one has the patience for them, and desires to keep the hands smooth and white. These sport shirts are being used generally for even the most conventional sports purposes. They are developed in many suitable materials, ranging from flannel to the elaborately coloured, checked and striped silk shirtings and taffetas; and may be purchased from about one dollar and twenty-five cents to fifteen dollars and beyond. The comfortable and practical sport skirts are fashioned of the coloured cotton velours and corduroys, the vividly striped linens and canvas weaves, smart mixtures of Scotch and English cheviots and tweeds, soft wool plaids and checks, and for real hard usage the regulation corduroys, and khaki. These skirts are cut short, full enough for comfort, and well supplied with pockets. They usually fit trimly around waist and hips, and, combined with a natty sport blouse or shirt, form a smart, becoming costume.

Slip-On Blouse and Linen Skirt.

Coats and Sweaters.

Sweaters, or sweater coats, are decidedly comfortable and practical articles to complete the sport costume. These sweater coats are made of the new striped and plain jersey cloths in wool or silk; of corduroy, in the bright, pretty colourings favoured for this purpose; of broadcloth, flannel tweed, and similar fabrics. They are, as a rule, unlined and may be fashioned at home to be as effective as those purchased, and much less expensive. The striped linen suit, with plain coat, illustrated here, is a perfectly appropriate suit for the beach, boardwalk, or general daytime wear. The blouse is one of the new middys, effectively trimmed with collar, cuffs, and wide, roomy pockets of the striped material used for the skirt.

A smart little sport coat of one of the striped silk, glove or jersey, may be appropriately worn with various frocks and on various occasions. For instance it is not out of place to slip on one of these soft silken coats over the dance or afternoon frock, if one is chilly, and there is no danger of crushing the frock; and they are quite the usual thing to wear over the lingerie dress, either for daytime or evening.

FRECKLES

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots.

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as the prescription othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of othine—double strength—from any druggist and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than an ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength othine as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

Choice Recipes

HAM CANAPES.

One-half cup minced ham, 2 tablespoons of butter, 1 teaspoon chopped parsley. Mix the ham, butter and seasonings to a smooth paste, cut the bread into circles. Dry brown and spread with the ham mixture.

RHUBARB CONSERVE.

Allow 1 lemon, 1 pound of figs, 4 pounds of sugar, 2 pounds of nut meats to each 5 pounds of rhubarb. Cut the rhubarb into inch lengths, cut up the figs and grate the peel from the lemon. Pour the lemon juice over the ingredients and stand away over night. In the morning simmer for one hour, and when thick, turn into jelly glasses. When cool, cover with paraffine.

MAPLE FUDGE

Break a pound of maple sugar into small pieces. Fill a cup three-quarters full of cream, then fill too the brim with boiling water. Pour over the sugar and cook until a little dropped in cold water can be rolled into a soft ball. This requires a little longer boiling than for the usual thread stage.

Do not stir while cooking. Take from the fire, beat until creamy, pour into a buttered pan and when nearly cold mark into squares.

CORNED BEEF HASH BALLS

Prepare hash by mincing meat and potatoes very finely. Make into flat cakes; heat griddle, using butter to fry cakes; brown on both sides. These tastes much better if potatoes have been boiled with the corned beef. A very good supper dish.

BAKED HALIBUT

Put in baking pan 3 thin slices of fat salt pork about 2 inches square, 3 slices of onion and a bit of bay leaf. On top of these lay a 2-pound slice of halibut, spread over it 1 tablespoon each of butter and flour, creamed together, cover with buttered cracker crumbs and small strips of salt pork and bake 20 minutes. Cooked this way it is delicious, moist inside, with a crisp brown crust so nicely flavored it needs no sauce. Garnish with lemon and parsley.

SCOTCH COOKIES

Beat one egg well, add one-half cup of sugar, two level teaspoons of softened butter, one and one-quarter cups of rolled oats, using any of the steamed cooked varieties, a saltspoon of salt and as much vanilla or almond. Drop in teaspoonfuls onto a buttered pan and bake in a moderate oven.

MOCK ANGEL CAKE.

Sift one cup of flour and one cup of sugar together and 3 heaping teaspoons of baking powder, a pinch of salt, and sift 3 times. Add one cup of hot milk very slowly, beating all the time. When milk is all in, beat well and fold in the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs. Bake in an angel cake tin in a very slow oven. Wet the tin and do not grease it. Be sure to fold whites in carefully.

Please try it and report.

One of the finest things in the world is just plain truth.

Courtship is a ship all women are ready to embark on without any question as to life preservers.

Reducing Expenses

THE war has increased the cost of living. The housewife must, therefore, make her money go farther. By using a tea, like Red Rose, which is largely composed of Assam Indian teas, she can reduce her tea bills considerably. The rich Indian strength requires less tea in the tea pot.

BUGS ON YOUR FLOWERS

First, to get rid of ants, find the nest, which will be somewhere not far from the house. Having found it, set to work as follows: Place an inverted garden pot over the nest, and the ants will work into it.

Plunge the pot with its contents into boiling water and repeat the process if necessary. Another way to keep them from getting into a house is to sprinkle sulphur just outside to prevent them from entering. They dislike sulphur so much that they will not come near it.

Slugs are soft-bodied creatures frequently covered with a shell. They attack many species of plants, like violets, etc. They live in moist places. They are trapped with cabbage leaves, sweetened bran, poisoned powdered lime sprinkled over the soil about the plants.

Caterpillars, sometimes called leaf rollers, affect plants and trees, being very destructive to roses and apples. They wrap themselves in the leaves by making cocoons and spray with Paris green.

Rosebugs burrow into the heart of the rose blooms, spoiling them. There is no remedy for them which will not also destroy the rose. Pick them by hand, as they are easily caught.

"Just a simple little thing will make us think." Even a house dress, if put before us at the right time, will make its appeal successfully. This is the time to think about and plan upon freshening up the supply of house dresses to have something cool and comfortable for later on, and No. 7,796 is an ideal style because of its plain but graceful lines. It is a trim, neat design that will find favor for morning or afternoon wear. A tuck at each shoulder edge in front, back yoke, the becoming open style neck and front closing of the blouse, are all features of interest in a dress for practical wear. The skirt has three gores and a plait at each side in the back to give the panel effect. High or regulation waistline is used and long or three-quarter sleeves.

The pattern may be had in sizes 34 to 44 inches bust measure. To copy the design in size 36 will require 5½ yards of 36 inch material.

You may obtain the pattern by sending [illegible] to the office of this publication.

THE BRITISH GRAND FLEET RETURNING TO IT'S BASE.

Coffin, the well known marine artist, pictures above the return of the British Grand Fleet to its naval base after the battle off the Jutland coast with the German fleet. Whether the British or the German squadron returned victorious is still a question in the minds of many. Germany claims a decisive victory for her sea fighters, while England in her official reports is equally positive that the laurels of the big naval engagement were won by her.

Says British Are Proud of Opposing Bavarians

German Writer Declares They Are Pleased That They Can Hold Artois Front Alone—In Observation Balloon Above Positions from Hulluch to Souchez.

(Special Dispatch.)

BERLIN, Saturday.

German newspapers print an interesting account of conditions along the western front in the vicinity of Lens, written by Kurt Freiherr von Reden, who has passed considerable time there.

"The English are very proud," he says, "that for some time they alone have opposed the army of the Crown Prince of Bavaria. Since the attack on Verdun many of the British divisions which had been so peacefully situated in the rear were brought forward in order to replace the French. In this entire section, of which the manufacturing city of Lens is the centre, the conflict has been a bitter one from the beginning, and it has raged particularly around the towns of Hulluch, Loos, Souchez, Givenchy, Vimy and Neuville—all within the radius of two German miles. In his desire to recover the valuable coal lands in this vicinity the enemy has attacked day after day again and again, only to be repulsed with tremendous losses. Our front, which was established here in October, 1914, never has been pierced—on the contrary, we have gained considerable ground. If the lull between attacks we have not been idle, but have built up such a strongly fortified position around the coal region that it will be practically impossible for the enemy to break though.

"The most stirring experience recently was our capture of Hill No. 119, between the towns of Givenchy and Souchez. This height had to be taken by us, as it was the only hill near the German front from the top of which the battle line could be carefully observed. The English and the French have a number of excellent heights behind their front, which gives them a fine view of our positions. A few days ago we stormed and captured Hessian Hill, another good observation point.

"However, aside from these heights, the Germans have their balloons, from which observations are made daily. There are a large number of balloons for this purpose. Recently I had the good fortune to be invited to go up in one of them. It was a beautiful, sunshiny day—ideal weather for a balloon ascension.

"I climbed into a large basket, shaped very much like a gondola, and this contained everything necessary for making observations. When the order was given to start we ascended slowly and smoothly without the slightest jar. In a few seconds the soldiers and the houses that dotted the landscape looked like the toys with which children play. We soon reached an altitude of two miles and in such a manner that even those persons most sensitive to sea-sickness would have nothing to complain of. From this height there was a wonderful view of the surrounding country, upon which I turned my eyes with interest. Photographs and observations were made, and I was able to learn for the first time how important geometry, trigonometry and logarithms are in warfare. For all these mathematical calculations would amount to very little but for the aid of the wonderful optical instruments—the finest in the world—which are now possessed by the Germans.

"As I looked below I saw village after village, innumerable roads and railways, with smoke ascending here and there or flying dust clouds from passing automobiles or trains. Otherwise I could see no sign of life. There was a wonderful soothing sensation of peace and quiet at that height—a sensation that must be experienced in order to be appreciated. The landscape stretches below like a map or big chessboard, and yet this is only a small corner of the vast territory in which the horrible game of war is being played."

GERMANY-TURKEY TREATY DESCRIBED

(Special Dispatch.)

BERLIN, Saturday.

Some facts regarding the treaty between Germany and Turkey, which is about to be signed, are given in an interview with Halil Bai, Turkish Minister of Foreign Affairs, published in the Wiener Tageblatt:—

"The Entente Powers approached us," says Halil Bai, "and offered to guarantee the integrity of Turkey, but, as we knew through sad experience that this guarantee system, which was made a part of the Treaty of Paris, could not be depended upon, we certainly could not entertain any such proposition. At the same time, Germany suggested to us an alliance bestowing equal rights and privileges for many years to come, one to protect our interests and we to protect hers.

"And we, therefore, decided to throw our destiny with those of the Central Powers and thus save our empire from the debacle threatened by the European conflagration. Our sublime ruler was in full accord with his ministers on this question and we entered upon the negotiations with his authorization. Germany offered plenty of time for us to consider the matter and was so open and frank in her dealings that we felt keenly secure in making an alliance and thus escaping the danger of a protectorate or guardianship of Europe over us.

"We have studied every word of the treaty carefully, but can find not even the faintest shadow therein of a line which would in any way operate against Turkey. We sent delegates to Berlin and for four months the details of the treaty have been discussed from all points of view. I have the honor to inform you that with the exception of just one question perfect agreement has been arrived at, and within a short time the treaty will be ratified by both governments.

"I cannot very well go into all the details of the matter, but I can assure you that by the terms of the treaty German consuls in Turkey will have the same rights and privileges that the Consuls of our empire will have in Germany. In a word, the two governments are in perfect accord and will both safeguard their rights and the rights of each other against any outside influence."

ITALY IS CONFIDENT OF ABILITY TO WITHSTAND ALL TEUTONIC ATTACKS

Construction of Fortified Works Along Swiss Frontier Leads to Sharp Discussion in Newspapers, but General Cadorna Regards It Necessary to Guard Against Invasion Through Neutral State.

(Special Dispatch.)

ROME, Saturday.

That the Germans have been making ready a series of last desperate blows, in the hope of forcing a decision in the favor, is the opinion expressed by leading writers in the Italian newspapers. An attempt to land an invading force of some fifteen divisions in England; a sudden swoop down through Italy, and an attack on France from the south, are among the efforts believed to be intended.

The dash through Italy on France might be through the Tyrol and the Trentino, the present Austrian operations being an advance movement for it or, in order to be more rapid and more effective, the experts suggest, it probably would be through Switzerland.

Italy has been hastily erecting fortifications on the Swiss border to forestall such a move. Swiss newspapers criticise this action as an implied doubt of Switzerland's intention or ability to preserve her neutrality in case the Germans attempt to break through. The Italians, however, reply that their country cannot afford to take any chances in a matter of such gravity.

As the operations in which most of General Cadorna's men have been engaged for a year lie in the northeast corner of the peninsula, from Lake Garda through the Cadore and Carnia fronts and down the Isonzo River to the Adriatic, the chief military purpose of the Austrian operations north of Vicenza is believed to be a menacing manoeuvre against the important trunk line westward, through Verona and Milan, to the French border, in order to threaten an attempt at any large movement of Italian troops westward. A quick and successful descent of the Germans and Austrians into north Italy might be expected by them to have consequences of the most beneficial character for the Central Empires.

Must Act Quickly.

The military critic of the Tribuna, of Rome, doubts that Germany at this moment would be willing lightheartedly to add to her list of enemies by violating Swiss neutrality, but observes that the position of Germany is such that she must act and act quickly with constant offensive movements, all delays being injurious to her. The battle of Verdun may be regarded as decided against her, he says, and Field Marshal von Hindenburg is calling for the divisions which were borrowed from him for the Verdun enterprise, as it is imperative for him to be ready to meet the Russians on the offensive. Turkey is seriously threatened and may be forced to capitulate, and Bulgaria then would not hold out very long. Great Britain has a measure of conscription and a great army nearly ready. The Belgian army has been reconstituted and Italy is constantly strengthening her positions on the Isonzo. The hour calls for desperate measures, and Germany has shown that in case of need no measures are too desperate for her.

The question of Switzerland's attitude is one of much concern, for Italy and the Swiss themselves are debating the question, and some of them openly have commented on the rumored unfriendliness of some of the chiefs of the Swiss military staff for Germany. The recent construction by the Italians of formidable defensive works on the Italy-Swiss border gave rise to an outburst of more or less angry criticism in a portion of the Swiss press.

The leading newspaper of the Italian speaking part of Switzerland, the Gazetta Ticinese, expressed its grief that Italy should thus show a lack of confidence in Swiss neutrality in case the Germans invaded their country in order to attack Italy. The Bund, an official organ of the Swiss government, said that if any such lack of confidence existed on the part of Italy it would be without justification, as Switzerland would defend her neutrality against any one who attempted to violate it. It added that an invasion of Switzerland by Austrians or Germans was improbable, because it would bring enormous injury to the invading nation. It concluded:—

"This new charge against Switzerland is perhaps intended to furnish the pretext for the Italian fortification works on our border.

This phrase seemed distinctly offensive in Italy and was so commented on in the press. The Bund then published what was regarded as an officially communicated statement, as follows:—

"We are informed from governmental and military sources that if a certain lack of confidence should spring up again in Italy against Switzerland it would cause much displeasure in certain circles, but that there can be no question of lack of confidence in the relations of the two governments, and that the construction of Italian fortifications works on our border, regarding which the Swiss authorities were notified in advance by the Italian government, are not justification for the stirring up of an agitation of any kind."

The Gazette de Lausanne, discussing the question of Italian suspicion with regard to Switzerland, asks if the Swiss always have done, and now are doing, all that they ought to keep up correct relations with Italy. This newspaper thinks that, while the Swiss government always has been correct, the messages taken by the military authorities of Switzerland have not been always in harmony with that policy, and that it in this way has offended public sentiment in Italy.

The Tribuna, of Rome, summing up the discussion, says the Italian commander-in-chief considered it necessary to take certain measures for prudence sake, and that the Swiss must not be surprised if Italy, responsible for the direction of [illegible] foresees and takes steps to fulfill any possible initiative of Italy's enemy.

Italy is convinced that she can hold out against [illegible] in any operations they may attempt and believes she can beat them. Neutral observers, such as the critic of the Basler Nahrichten, do not believe the real inferior aim of the Austrians is to overrun the Veneto, the northeastern corner of Italy and to envelop the Italian forces operating in Carnia and on the Isonzo front.

Attempts at Deception.

The Austrians have let it be clearly seen that they were preparing a big operation south of Trent, apparently for the purpose mentioned. The Italians then announced that General Cadorna had transferred his headquarters by special train to Bassano, in the threatened district. Publicity of this kind, the critic observes, shows that each side is trying to deceive the other.

The Italians do not dread the Austrian offensive, knowing the limitation of the Austrians in men and war material. General Cadorna may allow them to advance a certain distance for strategic reasons.

"But even after the Austrians had passed the mountain chain," the critic adds, "they know that they would have to reckon with the more powerful artificial fortifications which have been strengthened since the beginning of the war and which, being intact, would stand a long siege. Rivoli, Caresino, Arsiero, Asiago and Primolano are the names of powerful fortified works of the most modern type. They could not easily be swept aside and they would be heroically defended by the experienced fighting power of the Italian troops." It is concluded, accordingly, that the concealed purpose of the Austrian movements is quite different from that which they desire to publish.

That a real attempt at invasion of northern Italy by the Teutons is within the possibilities is regarded as one of the motives for Signor Salandra's tour of Northern Italian cities during the last month. The words of his public speeches were as grave in their appeal to the patriotic courage of the nation that they attracted the widest attention.

At Brescia, one of the Italian cities which runs most serious risk in case of invasion, on account of its strategic position and of the fact that it is a great industrial centre for the supply of war munitions, the Premier solemnly affirmed that Italy must be ready "to make history, not to submit to it." The municipal authorities of Brescia had presented to him a replica of the Winged Victory, and he spoke of it as an emblem of the purpose of the Italian people to win at all costs and despite all sacrifices.

Existence in the Balance.

"It is true," he said, "that we have put our whole existence in the balance in this war. It is true that those of us who, not on our own behalf, but interpreting the sentiment of the nation, decided on the war, had our mind at times disturbed by the grave responsibility, but it is also true that the more we reflect on it, the more clear to our consciences that we acted the wise part for our country. We could not be one of the people that submit to history. Italy had a right to be one of those peoples that make history."

Absorption of Man by the State, German Ideal

Mr. Emile Boutroux Analyzes Teuton Theory of Government and Shows It To Be Irreconcilable with the Liberty and Democracy of Other Nations.

(Special Dispatch.)

PARIS, Saturday.

"To the whole world this war is considered as a sort of philosophical crusade in which two opposite conceptions of good and of evil and of the destiny of the human race are in conflict."

Such is the thesis of Mr. Emile Boutroux, one of the best known French writers of the day, in a study in the Revue des Deux Mondes, in which he attempts to show what war has done to the German mind. He translates the German conception of the Teutonic idea as follows:—

"The idea sprang forth and rose up and did not remain in the condition of pure idea, but it was made flesh and dwelt among us; it became incarnated in the German nation, Germany, or the Teutonic nation, is the pre-eminent nation, for the word 'thiud' (root of deutsch, thiudisk) signifies nation and allemand, according to Fichte, all-man, 'that is to say, the universal soul.

"The Germanic nation arose as the opponent of Greco-Roman dissolution and corruption. The attempts at organized government which took place in the ancient world, as they did not proceed from the intellect, were only feeble, destined to prepare for the Teuton organization.

"Germany was self-revealed in the forest of Teutoberg in the year 9 as a power not only opposed to the Latin power, but one essentially warlike. And, in fact, it is not in the calm temples of classic wisdom but only in the horrors of a war to the death that the idea can clothe herself in the material force she needs in order to impose herself upon rebel nations carried away with the thought of their independence.

"To combat the Latins, to build up and cause to triumph the theory of a moral, religious and intellectual culture opposed to the principles of the classic civilization—such is the task which devolves upon Germany.

"You, the Greco-Latin idea was that of man as possessing an individual virtue and value and as capable of increasing that value by trying to approach the ideal of truth, of beauty, of justice and of goodness that the human reason conceived. What a beautiful thing to make what he really was!' Thus has Alexander expressed the Greek thought.

"The German idea, therefore, is the negation of all value and of all virtue in man as man, the concentration of everything in the State as a unit, as a substantial and superior reality of all virtue, of all power, of all excellence, and the reduction of human beings to the condition of mere inert parts, receiving from the Whole [illegible] all their reality."

To the realization of German dominion [illegible] by the divine scheme [illegible] all Germany expects its every [illegible].

"According to the pseudo German education [illegible] German students are carefully guarded against the attempt to [illegible] learn directly about foreign affairs. These latter, it is believed, should not be regarded as they are in reality, except through German spectacles. It is a fundamental axiom in Germany now that Germans have nothing to learn from foreigners.

"'We are the masters of all the world' is one verse of a hymn composed for the German soldiers in 1911 and entitled 'German Wrath.' Germans are taught to measure the sayings of foreigners in accordance with a celebrated epigram of Schiller, 'You would teach me a truth, do not take the trouble. I do not think of seeing things through you, but only of seeing you through things.' In the philosophy of Descartes, in the tragedies of Corneille and Racine, in the principles of the French Revolution, the German can see nothing but documents to be used to interpret the French mind. In the value of truth, beauty or justice he is not concerned."

Therefore, Mr. Boutroux argues, the liberal idea of human destiny, with the aid of the Allies' armies, must triumph over the German idea and the task of France will not end with the war, for he says:—

"If our first duty is to preserve and make France prosperous, the present one will result in our relegating to a later place many differences of opinion in which formerly we attached vital importance. One can live without imposing on other persons his beliefs, his opinions, his methods, and without trying to dominate and oppress them. But what would be men's lives if they were deprived of tradition, variety, liberty, poetry, fidelity, justice and humanity? To-morrow as well as to-day we shall remember daily these supreme benefits if we wish to possess them."

GOES TO FRONT TO WIPE OUT THE PAST

(Special Despatch.)

LONDON, Saturday.

An unusual case of a man who sought to give his life for his country to make up for past wrong doing came to the attention of the British people recently through an appeal sent to a magistrate by a soldier to have his real name secretly recorded so that if he died in battle his relatives might know that he had made some effort to redeem himself.

The man who appeared before the Magistrate must have had a long criminal record, which included three years of penal servitude and ten years of police detention.

The smart and distinctly soldierly looking man explained that in case he was not killed at the front he would be willing to return home and live under the name by which he had been convicted.

In order that his real identity might not be publicly known he wished permission as here his correct name secretly filed.

"I ask it if I fall in the service," he said, "so that it may be known that I have made some attempt to redeem the past." The permission he sought was granted.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Singular Case of Resurrection

By F. A. MITCHEL

The investigators of the Rockefeller institute may be very proud of themselves. Indeed, they have reason to be. They have substituted live parts of the human body for dead parts; they have set heart substance beating outside its proper place in a man's breast. If they keep on they may in time make a man out of parts of other men. But if the stories of what Indian fakirs have done in keeping persons alive in a comatose condition for many years is true these Rockefellers or scientific fellers or whatever they are have yet much to learn from an antique and apparently undeveloped civilization.

There is a story going the rounds among the undergraduates of a certain university which, if it can be substantiated, puts the modern scientific investigator to shame. Arnold Gereau, assistant professor of chemistry—he has charge of the laboratory—is one of those phenomena who spring up once in a century. He is very young, and it is well known that he was born with certain mental powers, a certain supernatural knowledge of things on which many a man has studied for a lifetime without making any progress whatever.

Wilbur Stockbridge, a member of the class of '15, so the story goes, one day went to Professor Gereau with a yellow bit of paper on which was written in old English style:

This is the body of William Arbuckle, private in his majesty's —th foot. Captured in the patriot lines with maps showing our fortifications on the upper part of Manhattan Island. He was condemned for a spy. An Indian serving with the same regiment—he had joined it at Singapore—proposed to General Washington to put the man to sleep for an indefinite period instead of executing him. The general, who was averse to the execution, consented, and Arbuckle was turned over to the Indian, who claims that any time after fifty or even a hundred years life will still be in the body. But not one man in many millions will be able to effect a resurrection.

Young Stockbridge told the professor that in excavating for building purposes on the upper part of Manhattan Island on property owned by his family a tomb had been discovered containing the body of a man in British uniform of a former period. The paper had been found in the lead coffin in which the body had been buried.

Gereau—mind you, I don't vouch for this—arranged with the student to bring the find to the laboratory, which at the time was closed on account of the spring recess and would therefore be at the professor's individual disposal. No one has attempted to give the process by which Gereau manipulated the remains of Private Arbuckle, but it is claimed that he effected a resurrection. The professor avers that he worked on lines which are being followed by modern scientific investigators. He must have had an inkling of the method by which animation was suspended by the Indian or he would not have been able to restore to the reverse action, which, he says, he applied. He gives as a fundamental principle that the tissues knew how to suspend—not kill—the action of the heart, and Gereau restored the pulsations, which are the basis of animal life.

Whether the story is true or false there is one part of it that fits in with modern scientific investigation. It is said that Gereau found that certain members of the body had suffered from the long suspension of their functions. The resurrected man showed signs of decay, and the professor feared that, though he had remained in an ordinary condition of health for more than 150 years, he would die within a few hours after resurrection.

A test was begun of different organs and the first tested—the kidneys—showed decay. Gereau at once telephoned to the College of Physicians and Surgeons for a pair of sound kidneys and, removing the ones affected introduced the new ones. He supposed for some time that Arbuckle had died under the operation, but half a bottle of Irish whisky brought him round. The liver was next tackled, and half of it replaced. There were other parts to be substituted, but those mentioned were the principal replacements.

These operations required several hours, and another hour passed before Private Arbuckle spoke. Then he opened his eyes and cried out in a voice that seemed to come through dry leather:

"Corporal of the guard!"

Gereau was delighted. It looked as if he might save his patient, for while the man had doubtless been deanimated in good health his being brought back to consciousness was not only a difficult matter, but a dangerous one.

There are several versions of the rest of the story. Some say that Arbuckle was sufficiently restored to remember and speak of his expected execution. Others aver that Gereau, finding his breathing defective, worked his arms vigorously, but in spite of his efforts the man died.

It is said that at one time Arbuckle sat up and was given a stiff drink. Raising the glass he shouted in a bombastic voice:

"To his gracious majesty King George. God bless him and confound his rebellious subjects!"

Stockbridge and Gereau have both been asked to make a statement, but have refused either to affirm or deny the story. It is suspected that they are afraid of coming under the ban of the law, which might involve them in a charge of murder.

Enemy Bleeding Poland By Heavy Tax Exactions

The amount of the damage done by the Germans in Russian Poland is incalculable, according to information reaching the London Times. They have done it by direct requisitions and thefts, and by ruin inflicted on industry. From Lodz alone they have taken away machinery and raw material to the value of $16,500,000; from Czestochowa to the value of $9,000,000; they have cut down irreplaceable forests and devastated the country. The time has not yet come for attempting an estimate of these losses.

The following account deals merely with the quasi-legal forms of the German exactions, with contributions, taxation, and concessions, to companies of German monopolists. The figures quoted below cover exclusively the Polish territory under German occupation and that only for the period up to January 1, 1916. They are derived mainly from public returns and are absolutely trustworthy as far as they go, but they are by no means complete; wherever estimates are made they tend to be well below the mark.

PUT ON OLD TAX.

The contributions levied on the 18 towns for which it has been possible to obtain statistics (the list, however, is incomplete) amount to $280,000. In November, 1914, the Russian government, on account of the general distress, suspended the exaction of certain taxes. The German authorities not only reintroduced this taxation, some of it at increased rates, but decided to exact the payment even of the arrears. Thus Germans re-introduced the land tax (raised by 100 per cent.) the hearth tax and the tax on movable property in towns and urban districts, and also the tax on occupied houses, and the industrial taxes. These taxes had produced in 1912, $17,000,000. They have also introduced new taxes on timber, on joint-stock companies, on dogs and on fire-arms. A conservative estimate of the amount of these taxes up to Jan. 1, 1916, puts it at $4,000,000.

POOREST IN EUROPE.

Supplies, lodgings, etc., are being exacted from different towns for the German army and for the government authorities. Up to January 1, 1916, Warsaw has expended in that way $900,000 and Lodz $1,250,000. These two industrial cities, probably now the poorest in Europe, are unable to feed their starving populations and have to raise heavy loans through the German banks, and still they are compelled to pay these regular contributions. The same happens in the case of the other towns.

In the chief urban districts of Russian Poland the German government has introduced a monopoly in grain and flour. The transaction is most complicated and involves an ingenious system of exports of grain to Germany and the reimportation of a certain amount of flour to Poland. It is calculated that the German government and their concessionnaries spend on the rye, wheat and barley which thus passes through their hands $1,500,000 a month. As they charge for the same $2,000,000 they make a profit of about 25 per cent. on the transaction. In the agricultural districts a tax of 1 mark is raised on the grinding of every 220 lbs. of grain. It is calculated that this tax yields $100,000 a month.

The tax on sugar has brought during the four months up to January 1, 1916, a total of over $1,000,000. The total surcharge made on coal is calculated for the five months in 1915 at $6,000,000.

VODKA AGAIN SOLD.

At the beginning of the war the Russian government abolished the sale of vodka. The German administration have reintroduced it for fiscal reasons—in spite of protests. Out of the monopoly in alcohol, established in Dec., 1915, it makes a revenue of about $9,600,000 a month.

But as has been stated, this survey is incomplete. It does not include excise taxes levied in the provinces, fees for permits to travel, the revenue from tobacco and beer, etc. It is certainly a most conservative estimate to put the monthly revenue derived by the Germans from the part of Russian Poland under their occupation at $7,500,000 a month. The average revenue which Russia used to derive in 1914 from the whole of Poland amounted to $9,576,000 a month, which sum included import duties paid on goods which merely passed through Poland, but were in reality paid by the consumers in Russia.

Stomach Was Bad.

Could Eat Hardly Anything.

When the stomach gets out of order the whole system seems to become affected in one way or an other. The breath becomes foul, the tongue furred, the appetite becomes disturbed, nausea and vomiting occur, there is a rising and souring of food caused by the acidity of the stomach, and the stomach and bowels become distended causing flatulency. Unless these symptoms are met with immediately, dyspepsia or some other serious trouble is liable to follow as a consequence.

That grand old remedy, Burdock Blood Bitters, has been on the market for the past forty years, and we claim, without any fear of contradiction, that there is not another medicine on the market to-day that can compare with it for the cure of all disturbances of the stomach.

Miss Lillian E. Phillips, Pleasureseep, N.B., writes: "My stomach was so bad I was in pain and misery. I could eat hardly anything. I had been treated by skilful doctors for it, but they did me no good. I was giving up in despair when I happened to hear of Burdock Blood Bitters. You can't think how fast it helped me, for I had only taken two bottles before I was better. I will recommend your medicine very highly to all my friends and sufferers."

BRITISH HAVE MADE GREAT PREPARATIONS

LONDON, June 27.—Marcel Hutin, a war correspondent for the Echo de Paris, is quoted as saying to the Paris correspondent of the Weekly Despatch:

"It will be a surprise for the world when we know what the English have accomplished in silence. We have never seen such intensive preparation as that going on at present, and it would not surprise me to learn that the Germans are becoming very anxious in consequence.

"That they are apprehensive of what is in store for them seems evident from the fact that many troops originally destined for Gen. Von Falkenhayn have been transferred to the north."

After corks have been used for a while they sometimes become so compressed that the contents of the bottles leak out. This may be remedied by putting the corks in boiling water and leaving them until the water cools. They will then fit tightly.

NEW HOMES FOR WIDOWS.

Salvation Army in England Proposes to Raise $1,000,000 for Their Emigration to Colonies.

LONDON, June 29.—A scheme has been launched by the Salvation Army for promoting and assisting the emigration of women for the United Kingdom to the overseas dominions. A fund of £200,000 ($1,000,000) will have to be raised, and not less than seventy-five per cent. of it would be preferentially devoted to the emigration of widows and their children.

The emigration department of the Salvation Army, under the direction of Commissioner Lamb, has been settling widows and their children in the colonies for a number of years. The pioneer work has been done and the machinery is in running order. It is estimated that the cost of emigration would average about £15 ($75) for a single woman and £40 ($200) for a family of three, and that by means of the £200,000 found, part of which has already been subscribed, at least 5,000 widows, with 10,000 children, could be emigrated if the whole cost were borne by the fund and only widows and children aken. It is expected, however, that the overseas governments will offer special reduced fares and subscribe to the fund.

The people whom it is proposed to transfer to the dominions under this scheme would be the wives and children of men who have sacrificed everything for the empire.

THE BLESSING OF A HEALTHY BODY

Has Not Had An Hour's Sickness Since Taking "FRUIT-A-TIVES".

MR. MARRIOTT
78 Lees Ave., Ottawa, Ont.,
August 9th, 1915.

"I think it my duty to tell you what "Fruit-a-tives" has done for me. Three years ago, I began to feel run-down and tired, and suffered very much from Liver and Kidney Trouble. Having read of "Fruit-a-tives", I thought I would try them. The result was surprising. During the 3½ years past, I have taken them regularly and would not change for anything. I have not had an hour's sickness since I commenced using "Fruit-a-tives", and I know now what I haven't known for a good many years—that is, the blessing of a healthy body and clear thinking brain".

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON QUESTIONS

July 2nd, 1916.

Paul at Thessalonica and Berea.—Acts 17, 1-15.

Golden Text, Him did God exalt with His right hand to be a prince and a Saviour.—Acts 5:31.

1. Verses 1, 2. Is church going a good habit, and if so what is the extent of the loss of those who have not formed this habit?

2. How many times on each Lord's day should a person attend church—health and other circumstances permitting?

3. Of how much value is a good habit, and how may such a habit be formed?

4. Verse 3, Did Paul mean to say that it was necessary for the Jews to have put Jesus to death, and if not what did he mean?

5. Verse 3. If it was necessary for the Jews to cruelly murder Jesus, why would that not imply that Jesus was acting a part when he urged them to accept him?

6. What is the measure of our obligation to accept all Paul's opinions?

7. In what sense was it true "that Christ must needs have suffered?"—(See Matt. 2:4-6, Luke 24:26; Jer. 23:5, 6, Mich. 5:2.)

8. In what way do the Old Testament Scriptures bear testimony that Jesus is the Christ

9. Verse 3. How do you account for the fact that women are generally in the majority in Christ's converts?

10. What reason did the Jews have for being envious of Paul?

11. Would you say or not and why, that a man filled with envy can at the same time reason correctly?

12. Verse 3. When a man is filled with envy because another man is having great success in doing good, how would you characterize such a state of mind?

13. Verse 6. Which would you say, and why, that the world to-day is "upside down," or "right side up"?

14. Verses 7-9. When people oppose the work of God, do they generally, or ever, confine themselves to the truth?

15. Verses 7-9. Basing your opinion upon this incident, would you say or not, and why, that objectors to the Gospel falsify ignorantly or deliberately? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by the members of the Club.)

16. Verses 10-12. What virtue is there in exposing ourselves to danger when it is not necessary, in the interest of the truth?

17. What difference was there between the Christians at Thessalonica, and those at Berea?

18. Verses 10-12. What degree of certainty may a truth seeker cherish that he will finally be successful in finding the truth?

19. When, if ever, is it right to suppress the truth in the interest of the Kingdom of God?

20. Verses 13-15. What is it that prompts men to work so hard, and persistently, in opposing what they know to be the truth?

Lesson for Sunday, July 9, 1916.—The Thessalonian Christians. I. Thess. 2:17-20; 4:13-18.

DON'T WASTE SOAP.

We have heard our grandmothers tell of the good old days when they used to spend hours melting and adding odd bits of soap into cakes. We do not like housemakers have no time for that, but we want to utilize the scrap bits just the same, so we put all the little pieces of toilet soap into a cheesecloth bag and use it for the bath, just as one uses the bran bag. The kitchen soap we handle in the same way and have the bag hanging in a convenient place near the sink, where we may use the soap bag to make a good, thick lather for our dish water.

AIRMAN ESCAPES FROM PRISON THREE TIMES

Gilbert, the dashing French aviator, was, it will be remembered, interned in Switzerland owing to his having alighted on that neutral territory while escaping from an aerial attack by two German Fokkers. He managed shortly afterwards to escape into France, where the French authorities ordered his return to captivity. Again he escaped, and again he was restored to the custody of the Swiss military authorities.

This time, however, the Swiss determined that they would not be caught napping. Every conceivable precaution was adopted to ensure Gilbert's detention. No interviews were allowed him except in the presence of a warder. His correspondence was minutely examined and censored. Even his handshakings were regarded with suspicion. Warders were frequently changed in case they should become too familiar with the prisoner.

A report of his movement, with the books that he read, the newspapers that were handed to him, and the remarks that were passed were duly presented in the form of a report to the Commandant of the camp daily. He was not allowed to converse with the ing was subjected to a most careful examination. His room or cell was made "escape proof," and the Swiss military officers flattered themselves that they had at last got the airman in their grip.

And yet the other day the bird man fled!

$500 FOR HIS CAPTURE!

About two a.m., a motor car drew up in the neighborhood of the barracks where Gilbert was confined. The engine was running gently and the chauffeur appeared to have merely stopped for the purpose of executing some slight repair.

The sentry on guard saw no cause for alarm. All of a sudden from the gloomy interior of the barracks, a figure came creeping along, then rose, and darting through the gateway dashed into the motor, which was driven away at top speed.

The sentry, too much taken aback to do anything on the spur of the moment, gave the alarm and a search was made, revealing the escape of Gilbert.

The aviator is now believed to be resting near Paris, and the Zurich newspapers suggest that Gilbert has merited the right to remain where he is while the Germans have placed $500 reward for his head.

OLD COMMONS VANISHED.

Even the Tower Has Been Taken Down For the Present.

Ottawa, June 28.— The old House of Commons, except for the new wing built six years ago, and the library, is now practically demolished. The tower has completely disappeared, but each stone has been numbered and will be erected again on the architectural lines of the parliamentary tower at Westminster.

The special committee superintending the work, and consisting of Hon. Messrs. Reid, Hazen, Blondin, Lougheed, Pugsley, Lemieux and Senator Watson, met and inspected the plans and work yesterday. They will meet regularly. Hon. Chas. Murphy, who was put on the committee, has decided not to act, and Sir Wilfrid Laurier will name a substitute.

GERMAN WOMEN SEND GREETING TO SISTERS IN FRANCE.

The Hague, June 28. — The Zeitschrift fuer Frauenstimmrecht, the German woman suffrage organ, has sent the following greeting to the women of France:

"We feel, think and suffer like you, and swear that after this catastrophal war the women of all nations shall work unitedly to prevent forever its recurrence."

A WOMAN'S HEALTH NEEDS CONSTANT CARE

When the Blood Becomes Poor Disease Speedily Follows

Every woman's health is peculiarly dependent upon the condition of her blood. How many women suffer with headache, pain in the back, poor appetite, weak digestion, a constant feeling of weariness, palpitation of the heart, shortness of breath, pallor and nervousness. Of course all these symptoms may not be present—the more there are the worse the condition of the blood, and the more necessary that you should begin to enrich it, without delay. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are beyond doubt the greatest blood-building tonic offered to the public to-day. Every dose helps to make new, rich, red blood which goes to every part of the body and brings new health and strength to weak, despondent people. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are valuable to all women, but they are particularly useful to girls of school age who become pale, languid and nervous. Thin blood during the growing years of a girl's life usually means a flat-chested, hollow-cheeked womanhood. There can be neither health nor beauty without red blood which gives brightness to the eyes and colour to the cheeks and lips. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills do all this as is proved in thousands of cases. Mrs. Wm. Rowe, Carlaw avenue, Toronto, says:— "I have received so much benefit from Dr. Williams' Pink Pills that I feel it my duty to recommend them to others. I was about completely prostrated with anaemia. I had no appetite, was terribly weak and subject to fainting spells. I suffered greatly from dizziness, and the various other symptoms that accompany a bloodless condition. Remedy after remedy was tried but to no avail until a friend advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Before completing the second box, I was again enjoying splendid health, and have since remained in that happy condition."

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

HOLLWEG SEES DISASTER NEAR, PARIS REPORTS

PARIS, June 28.—"Our situation is bad. If everything goes well we can stay a few more months. If the people will be satisfied with small results we can last till March, 1917."

Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg is reported to have made the foregoing statement at a secret council held in Berlin last week. It is published in the Berlin Journal, which states it obtained it from a confidential document drawn up by two Deputies who attended the council.

The Conservatives demanded the resumption of unrestrained submarine operations. In reply the Chancellor said:

"We have only twenty high sea submarines, divided into squadrons of five. One of these squadrons is always in dock for repairs. Our other submarines are necessary for coast defence."

The Conservatives then demanded the instant building of more submarines. Admiral von Capelle replied that last year more could not be built because of the shortage of certain metals.

THREATS OF SEPARATE PEACE.

The Chancellor then said:

"Not a day passes but I am visited by Austro-Hungarian and Turkish Deputies who threaten a separate peace unless we cease the submarine war. They fear that after the war the allies and United States will entirely paralyze their overseas trade."

Dr. Helfferich the Imperial Secretary of the Treasury, remarked:

"Financially we can last through the war, but afterwards our bankruptcy is inevitable. We have already lost millions of marks in exchange."

Foreign Minister von Jagow said:

"The only great power we are not at war with is the United States Spain is favourable to us. The Swedish government and big business interests are with us. Norway is hostile. The Danish Ministry is with us, but the people are against us. Holland is frankly pro-Ally. Switzerland is not exactly among our enemies, but is rather against us."

HOLLWEG BANGS TABLE.

Angered at the Conservatives' attitude on the submarine question, von Bethmann-Hollweg banged the table with his fist and exclaimed:

"Remember, gentlemen, we have only one means of salvation. That is to detach France from the Allies. We must obtain a breakdown of the French confidence at all costs."

Thereupon the Conservatives demanded that a great blow be dealt France, no matter at what sacrifice.

The Chancellor pointed out that the greatest possible sacrifices were being made at Verdun without overcoming the French resistance.

TAGEBLATT IS SUPPRESSED

LEADING BERLIN NEWSPAPER RUNS FOUL OF MILITARY AUTHORITY.

BERLIN, June 28.—The Tageblatt, one of the leading Berlin newspapers announced this morning that its appearance has been prohibited by order of the military commander.

This is the first instance for some months of the suspension of a Berlin paper.

BRITISH LABOUR MEN SCORED BY BISHOP

Care More For Beer Than For War, Says Right Rev. Dr. Mills

KINGSTON, Ont., June 28.—In addressing the Anglican Synod Tuesday afternoon, the Right Rev. Dr. Mills, Bishop of Ontario, who spent the last seven months in England, scored the English labour interests for their unpatriotic attitude toward the war. He spoke as follows:

"The opposition offered from labour sources to the efforts of the Government to make provision for carrying on the war is very disappointing and annoying, and one would not be sorry to see representatives of labour interests have a taste of German rule for a short time—if they could only be left under it alone. The labouring people, as a class, act as if they had no interest in the war, nor do they apparently care how it turns out so long as they get their beer."

"The money spent on drink in the British Isles during the year 1915 amounted to the incredible sum of £150,000,000, and notwithstanding the King's request and the exhortations of the Bishops, eight million pounds more was spent during the last six months of the year than for the same period of the preceding year.

ALSO SCORES POLITICIANS

"The aristocracy of England, however, and the middle classes have shown a splendid patriotism, and have recognized the responsibilities resting upon them in this time of stress, giving their very lives for their country, for there is scarcely a house which is not in mourning.

Referring to the British politicians the Bishop said: "We sometimes are very much disgusted with our politicians—to some of whom party means more than country, but it is quite as bad, if not worse, over there. The country may go to the dogs, or even to the Germans, so long as party interests are served.

Members of the Cabinet, resign, apparently without regard to the effect it may have upon the country. There are able men in the Government. The Premier, Mr. Asquith, is an exceptionally able man. It is impossible to catch him napping. He is always prepared and ready for every question, and no trap that is laid for him can catch him.

"The country has been a good deal dissatisfied with the Government and its management of the war and has expressed itself very plainly to the great gratification of Germany, who has misinterpreted it in her own favour, but she will find that this is England's way of doing things, growling and grumbling but she will get to work and settle matters in time."

His Lordship declared that the condition of England was very good and the country was quite equal to dealing with the Germans.

A WONDER WORKER.

"It heals like magic!" is a favorite expression when Dr. Chase's Ointment is used. It works quick! stops all itching at once, often heals in a single night. For eczema, salt rheum, barber's itch, skin irritations or eruptions, it is a most satisfactory treatment. Being antiseptic it prevents blood poisoning.

MUSTN'T GO WITH SOLDIERS.

Ottawa, June 28.— The governors of the Carleton General Hospital are being appealed to from an order of the lady superintendent banning the nurses in training at the Lady Stanley Institute from being in the company of soldiers in uniform. It is being urged that the new rule is an insult to the King's uniform, and likely to be a restraint upon recruiting.

On the other hand, the lady superintendent of the institution calms that the nurses are for the most part young ladies who are away from home, and have to be safeguarded as pupils in an ordinary school.

On Guard

What the army and navy is to the nation, so is the life insurance policy to the home. The former protects trade and commerce and fulfils its glorious traditions, while the latter protects the home against the vicissitudes of life.

You are justly proud of the achievements of our troops. Take pride in the possibilities of your home and carry sufficient life insurance to protect your loved ones against want. Don't procrastinate. To-day you may be insurable; to-morrow you may not be.

Be patriotic. Don't increase the burdens of the nation by your neglect to insure. Our business is to carry your risk.

GERMAN ATTACKS AT VERDUN REPULSED

MORE PETERBORO SOLDIERS ARE MISSING

Berlin Believes Allied Offensive On All Fronts Has Commenced

Special Cable Says All Germany is Very Nervous in the Face of the Latest Development---British Artillery Fire on Western Front is Steadily Increasing in Violence--German Attacks at Verdun Repulsed.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

TORONTO, June 30.—A special United Press cable from Berlin via New York to-day says that the steadily increasing violence of the British artillery fire on the western front with the continued Italian and Russian offensive, leaves little doubt in Berlin that the Allies are in the early stages of their grand offensive. The Berlin cable describes the various activities at length, but makes no claim that the Teutons' allies are repulsing this offensive at any point except in the northern part of the eastern front, where the Russians and Germans are now engaged in a terrific artillery duel, with occasional infantry assaults by both sides. The intimation in the cable is that all Germany is very nervous in the face of the latest developments.

PARIS, June 30.—The newspaper Echo de Paris, declared to-day that the Russians have captured the important Galician railway city of Kolomea.

PARIS (French Official Communique), June 30.—The Germans last night shifted their attack back to the west bank of the Meuse and delivered several violent attacks, preceded by liquid fire between Avocourt and Hill 304, the War Office announced.

All these attacks were repulsed, the enemy suffering frightful losses, but east of Hill 304 the Germans carried the first line of fortified work in which all French occupants had been buried.

The French recaptured the works by a most brilliant counter-attack.

The Germans became active yesterday along the Belgium front, but the German attack was repulsed. Near Nieuport French artillery supporting Belgian lines dispersed three enemy reconnaissances.

PETROGRAD, June 30.—Virtually the whole of General Kuropatkin's front is under bombardment. German raiding parties have been harrassing the Russian lines for forty eight hours.

Interest is divided between the German operations in the north and the Russian advance on Kolomea in Southeastern Galicia. Unofficial reports to-day placed the Russian lines within less than ten miles of Kolomea, which is of great strategic importance because of its position as a railway centre.

Suggests Clemency For Sir Roger Casement

Special Morning Cable:

LONDON, June 30.—The Daily News alone of London papers to-day suggested clemency for Sir Roger Casement, sentenced to die for high treason.

The News conceded that the death sentence was justified but declared the execution of Casement might stir up ill feelings in Ireland and America, just at a time when the Government hoped for a settlement of all difficulties.

Next Week The Most Important in the War

TORONTO, June 30. — The Toronto Star's military critic says to-day:

"Next week may well be the most important of the war to date. For the first time the military might of Britain will be brought into play. Two years ago Britain hardly ranked with Serbia as a military nation. To-day a million and a half well trained and well equipped men are matching themselves against the powerful German military organization in France and Belgium. The terrific British bombardment that has lasted for six days is making it difficult for the enemy to bring food and munitions to the front line trenches, and also is destroying many munition depots miles behind the lines. Moreover, frequent raids are assisting in robbing the enemy of his sleep night and day, and setting up a state of demoralization. How long the British will choose to keep up their preparation for the infantry no one can tell, for all records have been broken already. The policy adopted is to wear down the enemy and to cherish the lives and morale of Allied troops until the moment for delivering the knock-out punch arrives.

TWO SUPERVISORS OF PLAY GROUNDS

Miss Doris Smith, of Toronto and Mr. Tillotson, of Oberlin College, Ohio, Will Have Joint Charge.

The Playgrounds Association is getting away to a good start and there is every indication that a most successful season is ahead of them.

An enthusiastic meeting was held last night in the Council chamber, with the president, Mr. W. G. Morrow, in the chair. The reports of the various committees were received.

The Appointment committee reported that they had been successful in securing four excellent supervisors for the two grounds to be carried on this summer. Mr. Tillotson, a graduate of Oberlin College, Ohio, is to be general supervisor, with Mr. Gilbert, a local teacher, to assist in the boys' work.

Miss Doris Smith of Toronto, and Miss Littlefield of the local Y.W.C.A., are to supervise the girls' work— or rather play.

The Equipment committee reported that new apparatus had been ordered for the King Edward ground, consisting of swings, teeters, and boxes, basketball, tether, tennis, volley ball, basketball, etc.

A new feature is also to be added to the Central school grounds, in the form of a slide, a piece of playground apparatus which never fails to delight the children, usually the only objection registered being from the mothers who have to patch the trousers.

Over half the amount required for this season has already been raised by the ladies through Carnation Day, and the rag collection, and the remainder is being looked after by Finance committee as membership fees and subscriptions. The amount realised from the rag collection was a gift from the Playground committee of the Council of Women, to the Playground Association.

The grounds will be formally opened on Monday, July 3rd

PLAYGROUNDS OPEN ON MONDAY NEXT

The two supervised playgrounds, one at the Central school grounds and the other at King Edward school, will be opened on Monday, July 3rd at 2 p.m. Children are asked to go to the playgrounds nearest to them and to bring their fathers and mothers with them. Two supervisors will be in charge of each ground, a man for the boys and a lady for the girls. Mayor Duffus and other prominent citizens will address the parents in the early part of the afternoon.

The Choice A Wise One

Sir Robert Borden Approves of Selection of Duke of Devonshire

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, June 30. — Sir Robert Borden and Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Railways, who have been in New York in connection with the proposal to appoint a commission to report on the condition of Canadian railways, returned to the Capital to-day. When reference was made to the appointment of a new Governor-General, Sir Robert expressed his satisfaction that the choice had fallen upon the Duke of Devonshire. He expressed the conviction that the choice was a wise one.

It is understood that President Underwood of the Erie System was one of the American railway men asked to serve on the Canadian Commission.

93rd BATTALION LEAVING BARRIEFIELD EARLY NEXT WEEK

Large Number of the Men of the Peterborough Battalion Are Home on Final Leave From Camp---Forestry Battalion is Seeking Recruits in This Locality--Battalion Orders and General Military News.

The Examiner received the following wire from Capt. J. H. Burnham this afternoon:

93rd gets final leave to visit Peterborough friends Saturday morning, returning, leaving Peterborough Monday a.m., 8 o'clock.

The the 93rd Battalion will leave Barriefield Camp early next week is now reasonably certain. To-day a large number of the men of the battalion are home on final leave, and are under orders to report back in camp to-morrow night. Many more of the men are expected to-day to say goodbye to relatives and friends. In fact there has been a rumour that the battalion would charter a special train in order to give everyone a chance to say farewell. Although nothing official has been given out, Tuesday is named as the day of the battalion's departure from Barriefield.

Mr. Bruce D. Clegg, son of Mr. S. Clegg, left last night for Montreal en route for England. Mr. Clegg has been given a commission in the Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve as sub.-lieutenant in the Auxiliary Patrol Service.

Mrs. J. Reid of Havelock has indeed a heavy burden of sorrow to bear. In addition to the death of her son, Pte. Lyman, her eldest brother Pte. M. McFarlane, of Marmora, has had both eyes destroyed by wounds, and is an institution in England. Another brother, Pte. Jos. McFarlane, also of Marmora, was reported last week as being dangerously wounded, and a brother-in-law, Pte. Dobson of Toronto, has also been wounded.

PORT HOPE, June 30.— The 136th Battalion, now at Barriefield, will arrive in Port Hope to-morrow afternoon, and on Saturday morning they will be presented with colours by Dr. James L. Hughes, of Toronto. The Dominion Day committee has arranged a suitable programme for the day, consisting of horse races, baseball tournament ,wire walking, acrobatic work, vaudeville entertainment, etc. A monster crowd is expected. The battalion leaves on Sunday night direct for Valcartier.

Local men who wish to join the Queen's Field Ambulance are asked to see Major Cameron at the armouries. There are still a few vacancies in this splendid unit. The Peterborough boys who have joined the Field Ambulance are loud in their praises of their officer and in their liking for the training. Men anxious to get in should lose no time in applying.

There is another call for recruits for the Canadian Army Service Corps. Local men who wish to join should apply at the recruiting rooms at once as a draft will be sent to Barriefield on Monday morning. Men physically unfit for other service will be accepted.

Capt. J. H. Burnham, paymaster of the 93rd Battalion, will arrive home at 5.30 this evening on final leave from Barriefield.

FORESTRY BATTALION.

Still another battalion has been authorized to send out its call for recruits in this locality, and this is the 238th Forestry Battalion, which has just recently been organized by Lieut. Col. W. R. Smyth, M.P. for Algoma, and which will afford many men an opportunity to do their bit, even though they do not fancy the infantry or the trenches. Lt.-Col. Smyth's battalion is designed primarily as a non-combatant force; it is being gathered quickly, and is intended to be sent over to England within a couple of months to reinforce the 224th Foresters who are now engaged in cutting down the forests of England to supply the men at the front with the necessary material for building trenches and other military works.

Seeing that no fighting will be expected of the members of the 238th, the ranks should fill up quickly. At the same time the physical qualifications of the members have been slightly reduced. For example, a man who may have been turned down for ordinary military service owing to the loss of a finger or through defective eyesight, should not be discouraged, for the qualifications for the Foresters are such that he will doubtless be able to catch a place with them.

Special privileges in recruiting have been given Col. Smyth from the Department of Militia, his authorization covering all of Ontario, and all the Western Provinces as far as the Coast. While no special number has been set aside for Ontario to recruit, the most of the recruiting depots have been scattered about through this province, and it is anticipated from the number of lumbermen, sawyers and bushmen known to be in this Province, that Ontario will supply

AGITATION AND ENTRIGUE IN OLD LAND POLITICS

Spirit of Restlessness and Its Aggravating Influences—Uncertainty in Irish Situation

O'CONNOR'S REVIEW

By T. P. O'Connor

LONDON, June 30.—Once more the whole British scene has undergone a transformation. Last week Ireland held the centre of the stage and acute anxiety existed as to the decision of the Nationalist conference in Ulster where a formidable body of opinion, including a large majority of the priests, were known to be in uncompromising hostility to the proposed settlement and already four bishops had declared publicly their condemnation of the confidence of all Irishmen, however, in Mr. Devlin's courage, persuasiveness, tenacity and his strong hold on the affection, confidence and trust of Ulster made them certain he would win, as he did quite triumphantly.

Final Stage.

The final stage so far as Irish Nationalists are concerned, was reached when Mr. Redmond was authorised at a meeting of the Irish party last Monday to announce their acceptance of Lloyd George scheme. Then there came a new transformation for the vehement campaign carried on by the Ultra-Unionists reached the cabinet and made the situation of every Unionist Minister difficult and wavering. Lord Lansdowne, Walter Long were known to share the views of Lord Selborne and ready to follow him in resignation, but the position still is uncertain of Bonar Law and Austin Cumberland, while Arthur Balfour in spite of his old record as a coercionist Minister, has ardently, consistently supported the settlement. But Bonar Law and Mr. Chamberlain would find it difficult to remain in the majority if the Tory party voted against the settlement.

Position Uncertain.

Thus the position still remains uncertain. Some respite has been obtained by postponement of the Tory meeting till next week, and active efforts are being made by Mr. Lloyd George to keep the cabinet together. I still believe he will succeed and that the Home Rule Ministry will come into existence within a few months from now, but at the moment the situation is very difficult.

We are passing through one of the most extraordinary phases of Parliamentary life in England that has ever been seen. The most remarkable characteristic is the feverishness one finds everywhere, and feverishness is not a Peterborough's casualty list for the month of June now totals eighty-six, to-day's official casualty lists containing the names of six more Peterborough boys. Five of these are members of the Mounted Rifles and like the long list published yesterday, are officially reported missing. Pte. Fred Sullivan, who left with the 39th, is wounded.

PTE. THOS. H. PERRY

Yesterday Pte Thos. H. Perry of the Mounted Rifles was reported missing. To-day his wife, who resides on Chamberlain Street, and who formerly lived at 28 Park Street, received official word that Pte. Perry has been killed in action. Pte. Perry enlisted in Peterborough with the first quota of B Squadron. He was born in England, but had lived here for some time

PTE. WM. H. LARKMAN.

Another of the original B Squadron, 8th C. M. R. to be reported missing to-day is Pte. Wm. H. Larkman, who enlisted here with Major Medd's Squadron in January of last year. Pte Larkman was a well-known member of the 8th C.M.R. Before enlisting he was employed as a driver with the Canadian Oil Company and lived at 431 Chambers Street.

PTE. JOHN G. HADDEN.

Only a short time ago Pte. John G. Hadden of the Mounted Rifles was reported wounded. Now his name appears on the list as missing. Pte. "Peterborough Possesses Possibilities Unsurpassed."

FRIDAY, JUNE 30, 1916

DOMINION DAY.

Canada will be forty-nine years old to-morrow—the forty-ninth anniversary of the day when she became a confederated national entity. We have reason to regard the near approach of our half-century with pardonable complacency. We have done well in building up our country on a sound national foundation. While we have not achieved, however, painfully perfect political morality, yet taking all things together, and considering compensating achievements, we are closing the half-century in a very creditable manner, as its closing years Canada has taken a new and high place in the Empire. We have given substantial help in preserving and solidifying the Empire. By the stern test of war, we have proved the quality of our manhood, showing that, whatever our faults of political morality, we have in fifty years developed a quality of manhood that augurs much for the quality of accomplishement of the next half century. It is not spread of acres, nor magnitude of material resources that makes the real nation; it is the spirit of manhood. In that regard we are well equipped, and if the mantle of our fighting defenders falls upon the people they defend, Canada's future if greatness is comfortably assured.

JOHNSONIAN PATRIOTISM.

The late cynical Samuel Johnson declared that "patriotism was the last refuge of a scoundrel." Party politicians are not necessarily scoundrels, but they sometimes take strategic shelter behind patriotism in a way that recalls the great satirist. The Liberals of Ontario have their loyalty questioned, and their patriotism impeached, because they insist upon unpatriotically bringing on a contest in North Perth by-election, which the Conservative Government patriotically brought on in war time—in the interests of a little representative 'graft'. If the unpatriotic Grits had let the seat go to the presently dominant party by acclamation there would not be the bitterness of a war-time election contest. The Mail and Empire modestly suggests that the electors should vote for the Government candidate, to show recognition of what the Government has expended to help on the war, thus making a khaki contribution of the by-election. It is the people, not the Government, that has made the war expenditure. Every ratepayer in Peterborough will pay through the tax collector a part of the half million the province devoted for machine guns, which should have been bought by the Dominion Government. If the Hearst Government had any other ground of appeal to the electors it would not have to resort to the pitiful clap-trap of beseeching the favour of the electors on account of what the people of both shades of politics have provided, and by constitutional compulsion intrusted to the Government to expend. It makes one think of Dr. Johnson, in spite of oneself.

SCHOOL HOLIDAYS.

It may be true that "all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy". It is, however, possible that too much play—too lengthened school holidays—is not good for the educational progress and moral of the pupils, and the interests of education in the Province. It has long been felt by practical educationists that too lengthened school holidays, as, at present arranged, are not in the interests of securing the best results from the operation of our schools. The reasons given by competent authority may be briefly summarized:

By the Regulations of the Education Department, Public Schools close on June 30th, and reopen on September 1st; and High Schools close on the same date and reopen the first Tuesday in September. This gives all pupils and teachers two full months and more of holidays at midsummer.

Two or three years ago the Education Department changed the time for holding the Departmental examinations; so that, now it is impossible to adhere to the Regulations, and keep the schools in profitable and effective session until June 30th.

Instead of holding the High School and Entrance Examinations in July, as was formerly done, these examinations are now held in June. This year the High school examinations began about June 8th or 10th, and the Entrance Examinations began on the 20th of June. This necessitated the closing of the High Schools throughout the Province early in June; and the necessary dismissal of the Entrance classes from the Public Schools affects the other forms of the Public Schools and interferes with the work of the pupils. The latter feel, unthinkingly, that they are kept to the grind while other classes escape it, a condition that tends to demoralization and to really making the most effective school work cease for all the forms, with the dismissal of the Entrance Form on June 8th or 10th, virtually adding two-thirds of a month to the already actual holidays of two months.

These long holidays shorten the school year, and it becomes difficult for teachers to retain the interest of their classes and prepare pupils for examination. Apart from this it is doubtful if protracted holidays are beneficial to children unless they have some regular employment, outside of play, for their energies.

Another element in the present arrangement not in the interest of the fullest educational results, is the fact that the Public School Inspectors have to preside at the examinations, and the schools are deprived of the benefits of inspectorial supervision during nearly the whole month of June.

The only reason the Department gives for the change of date of examinations is that it would avoid the possibility of extremely hot weather in July, which would be hard on the pupils writing their examinations. This indicates, perhaps, greater solicitude for the momentary physical comforts of pupils than for general educational interests, which are held to be interefered with by the disorganization of routine work caused by placing the examination dates in the working days of the term. But it must be remarked that in farm and factory, in office and shop, hot weather brings no holidays for the toilers whose hours are much longer than those of school pupils.

After two years' trial of the plan of change of date there is a feeling among all interested in education and in securing the best results that the change has not been a success; and, to put it in a mild way, not conducive to the promotion of educational interests.

INCONSISTENCY.

The first example in Canada of suppressing, or suspending publication, of, a newspaper for the alleged offence of publishing articles alleged to be hostile to the interests of recruiting, is made at Sault Ste Marie. There, the Express newspaper of that city was seized by the military authorities, at the instance of the Government chief censor, and has had enforced suspension of publication for three months. The offence held to justify the seizure and suppression of the newspaper was an article in the Express urging that no further Canadian troops be sent to Europe, an article held to be "detrimental to recruiting."

The action of the Government is not criticised, except that it is exceptional treatment, singling out one unfortunate newspaper to be subjected to humiliation and financial loss, while similar offenders, in effect, are allowed free run. If appeals to prevent sending Canadian troops to Europe are to be regarded as "detrimental to recruiting" why have Bourassa and Lavergne and other members of the Nationalist cult been allowed to preach day after day, and publish in their newspapers, firebrand articles, opposing the sending of Canadian troops to Europe — been allowed loose tether, or no tether at all? If articles "detrimental to recruiting" justify drastic action by the Government, through the press censor, why hasn't he shut up the Toronto News and other saffron sheets of its ilk, which have helped kill recruiting in Quebec by continuous and malignant assaults, racial and religious, upon French Canadians, engendering animosity and impairing the harmony that at this time is necessary for united action? If systems hostile to recruiting are to be taken account of, why not suppress the government, which, by its official indifference to, and its failure to systematize recruiting, negatively conduces to conditions that are "detrimental to recruiting?" Why not discipline the Premier for retaining in his cabinet, as he has done, three members of the Nationalist faction, the overt agency of propagandism of the policy of insulting Canadians to resist taking part in the defence of the Empire? If a comparatively obscure newspaper is to be disciplined for an isolated offence, why are others who make a business of preaching the treason implied in advocating refusal of Canada to send troops to Europe to fight the battles of the Empire, or who, by creating discord, do deeds "detrimental to recruiting" allowed to continue their campaign without let or hindrance? Suppress seditious publications hostile to recruiting by all means; but do it on principle and not outrage consistency by permitting other agencies with more malignant efficiency in discouraging recuiting to ply their treason unmolested, if not encouraged?

The very irony of impudence consists in the order, for the suppression of the Sault Ste Marie Express enwspaper, being signed by Hon. P. E. Blondin, the Nationalist Secretary of State in the Conservative cabinet—by the distinguished Nationalist gentleman who has demonstrated his fitness to be an adviser to His Majesty the King, by declaring, as a reason why Canada had "no use for England and the English," that "we had to shoot holes through the British Flag to breathe the air of liberty."

The examples of inconsistencies on the part of the Conservative Government of the day are not confined to half-measures—making flesh of one and fish of another, with the object of providing against the operation of agencies "detrimental to recruiting." We have home evidence of how nepotism and virtual graft are allowed to undermine the confidence of recruits and of possible recruits in the military administration of Canada's share in winning this war.

"Would Rather Be Irish Recruit Than Reign As Greybeard King At Home"

Sir Frederick Williams-Taylor (formerly manager of the Bank of Montreal, Peterborough), addressed the officers and men of the Irish-Canadian Rangers this morning at their Recruiting Headquarters, [illegible] Catherine Street West, Montreal, and said in part: I have three reasons for coming here this morning to say a very few words to you. First, it is my duty: second, I am heart and soul with the cause, and third, there is not a drop of blood in my veins that is not Irish, and Irish-Canadian at that. Glory be to God.

The world will tell you that there are two kinds of Irish. There is the Irishman from the North, described by the inimitable Rosebery as the toughest, the most dominant, the most resistless people the Lord ever made. There is the southern Irish, the keltish, whose hospitality is as free as the sun upon their valleys, and the rain upon their mountains.

I have in my hand a prize presented to me by the Grand Duke Michael of Russia. It consists of two kinds of gold. There is the red gold, you can see, and the yellow metal. These two qualities of gold do not detract from the intrinsic value of the gold. On the contrary, the value is enhanced by this amalgamation and give scope to the engenuity of the artificer, and so it is with the Irish. In this great fight the North and the South are welded together in a manner to bring out the best quality of each, and the result is patriotism of the purest gold, whether the individual be a Papist or Protestant is immaterial.

You men may not realise it, but you possess in youth and strength, in your ability and your desire to serve your country, a form of wealth which is the greatest form of wealth the world contains. Somebody said that the greatest thing in the world is to play a leading part. Well, you needn't envy the illustrates of this country or any other country, for it is you men, and not them, who are playing a leading part on the greatest page of history, in the greatest fight for liberty, freedom and justice the world has ever known.

You are going forth possibly, it may be, to die, but "how could man die better than by facing fearful odds, for the ashes of his fathers and the temples of his gods."

What is there in it to live four score years and ten and then end your days probably full of sorrow and disease?

To adopt the words of King Lear: "One crowded hour of glorious life give back by twentieth spring."

I would rather be an Irish recruit than reign a greybeard King at home."

Go out in the highways and byways and tell the dilatory and unenlightened that you give them the privilege of fighting for the Flag, the dear old Flag that has braved a thousand years the battle and the breeze, and joining the greatest adventure the world has ever known.

I know a boy who has been in France for eighteen months. He is as tall as the tallest of you and he is as straight as the straightest of you. Possibly you may run across him some day—I think he is on his way to Salonika—and if you do give him this message from his father: "Smite the Hun hip and thigh for thy honour of Canada, of old Ireland and the British Empire."

Back From War But Three Days Joins U. S. Army

Survivor of Princess Pats Marries to New Field of War

(Detroit News)

A rather small man with a black moustache and wearing tennis shoes entered the armory during the morning. His first inquiry was as to the location of the recruiting officer and a tall private informed him.

"There's a rooky for you, Bill," he said to friend, who was rolling a cigarette.

"Bet he don't get by," was the reply. "Him a soldier?"

And they both laughed.

The small man got into the line, sat down in a chair, yawned once or twice and looked about him with lack of interest. He saw young soldiers discussing the chances of getting into action, young soldiers talking with good looking young women who were gazing at them with admiration; young soldiers waiting their turn to get at the telephone; and young soldiers writing letters; and young soldiers fidgeting about doing nothing at all.

HIS STEP IS DIFFERENT.

Then he smiled, arose smartly and passed through the door.

When he executed his stride was different. is steps were exactly the same length, and when he turned he wheeled smartly. An officer passed and his hand came to his forehead in a salute—a salute different from the right angle of the American method.

"Did you get through?" asked the long soldier, grinning.

"Oh, yes," said the stranger quietly. "I knew I would. But I haven't been asigned yet."

His name is Ernie R. Smith. He is thirty-four years old. His wife and four children are living at Port Credit, Ont., but are coming to Detroit. He is a citizen of the United States, having been born in Vermont. Also—

He came back from Europe Friday. He had been there eighten months, and was a member of the famous Princess Pats. He was through the battle of Ypres and has five little mementoes, such as five bullet holes through his right leg and a great white scar on his left breast. He was in the hospital six weeks, but is well now. Further—

He was in the trenches when the Germans released the gas. He saw men fall, swell up and become horrible. A considerable number of his friends were killed in this manner. In fact, of the 2,000 or more men who left Canada with him, he is one of the half-dozen that got back. And—

In 1901 and 1902 he served in South Africa. He didn't get a scratch in that war, but was commended for his service. It was hard fighting down there in South Africa, but Smith didn't mind that.

TWO VOLLEYS AN INITIATION.

"After you are in one or two volleys you don't mind it," he said. "I had eighteen months over there, but I feel as though I just got started. After you get used to it you like it all but that gas. I heard of this fracas over here just in time, so I came right along."

"You never can tell, Bill," said the big soldier. "I guess we won't pull anything on him if he gets in our outfit."

"Right-o," returned Bill. "You never can tell."

MEETING OF OTONABEE COUNCIL

Otonabee council met at Keene on June 26, 1916, an account was received from Nicholls Hospital for treatment of Beatrice Grde, the clerk was instructed to notify the Hospital that she is not an indigent resident of Otonabee, also accounts for treatment of a man and C. Powell, two soldiers, the county had no knowledge that they were residents of Otonabee. When they enlisted, Michael Ross was authorized to put 200 6 inch tile in a drain along the road, the council to pay for the tile and Mr. Ross to do the work. Complaint had been made to the council that horses were running at large on the streets of Keene and Alandale, the clerk was instructed to put up notices that horses are prohibited from running at large on the public highways. Ralph Humphreys was appointed to the offices of Pound Keeper. The Reeve and Councillor Lawrie were appointed to look after the erection of Taylor's bridge, the following accounts were passed:—

Nicholls Hospital for treatment of recruit Harry Mather, $5.00; D. McCarthy, gravel and drawing gravel for cement tile, $19.20; Review Co., 1st Court of Revision, $1.00; J. R. Borland, spikes for bridge 60 cents; Sheep killed and injured by dogs, $12.00; Wm. O'Leary for sheep $31.00; E. W. Emon sheep valuator, $2.00; David Thompson, wire fence $16.75.

Council adjourned to July 17.

KEEP A BAG OF BRAN HANDY.

Bathing in hard water is bad for the skin and is apt to make it coarse. Rainwater makes a wonderful bath, but is hard to get, and when that is impossible the water should be softened by throwing into it a small bag of bran or a teaspoonful of baking soda. Even a bag containing ordinary yellow cornmeal will take away the harshness of the water.

Von Papen Paid $503 To Tauscher, Papers Reveal At German Plot Trial

Documents Seized From the Office of the Discredited Military Attache's Secretary Are Offered in Evidence by the Government—Light Thrown on Dynamite Purchase

New York, June 30.—In the trial of Captain Hans Tauscher, husband of Mme. Gadski and agent for Kruppe and other Teuton gun works here, before Judge Hand, in the United States District Court, Roger B. Wood, Assistant United States attorney, brought further testimony and documentary evidence to prove that Captain Franz von Papen, recalled German Military Attache, was the leader in surreptitious warfare in this country.

Several of the documents seized in the office of Wolf von Papen, at one time secretary of Captain von Papen, were produced yesterday and identified. They were contained in dossiers marked with "German Embassy" in German on them. Certain surprises therefore were sprung on the lawyers for the defence and they appeared impatient at the time taken by Mr. Wood in obtaining identification of the documents. Protests against "taking up the time of the jury and the court" were made without effect by one of Captain Tauscher's lawyers.

Mr. Wood offered in evidence Captain von Papen's order to pay a bill of Captain Tauscher's. The order read:

"Please draw a check for $508.25 to the order of Hans Tauscher and charge account to W. G. Sickles. PAPEN.

TAUSCHER'S BOOKKEEPER TESTIFIES.

The bill was dated Dec. 29, 1914. Mr. Wood hinted through questions he asked witnesses that he would like to have a look at Captain Taucher's books, which he cannot subpoena, because the case involves an individual defendant. Henry Muck, a bookkeeper in Taucher's employ, said he remembered only in a general way "Bridgman Taylor" coming to Tauscher's office. Taylor is an alias for Horst von der Goltz, who also is known as "Frana R. Wachendorf." He is the star witness for the government.

"Taylor" went to Captain Taucher's office to complete arrangements for the dynamite which was to be used in the alleged plot to blow up the Welland Canal. The indictment charges conspiracy to blow up the canal. Muck could not recollect to whom the dynamite was charged or whether it ever was paid for. He did not recognize Von der Goltz, who was ordered to stand in the court so that the witness could see him.

When a bill from the Du Pont company against Tauscher and the receipted bill from Tauscher to Captain von Papen was shown to Muck he said his employer had paid the Du Ponts for the dynamite and sent a bill for the amount to von Papen, who paid the account in December, 1914.

"Where are Mr. Tauscher's books for 1914?" asked Mr. Wood.

"In Mr. Tauscher's custody," was the answer.

"Where?"

"I don't know."

"Are they in the office?"

"No," replied the witness.

Mr. Wood tried to ascertain something from the witness concerning the sale by Captain Tauscher of six automatic pistols, delivered to a H. P. Nowington at Meyer's Hotel, Hoboken. The witness declared that possibly he did make the sale, but he could not remember. On cross examination he asserted that the firm's books were taken away for inspection every two years.

BUFFALO LAWYER IN STAND.

John T. Ryan, Buffalo lawyer, who paid von der Goltz money sent by Captain von Papen in Buffalo, said that one day in September, 1914, a man—he identified Von der Goltz or Wachendorf as the man—came to his office and asked whether "Steffens" (Von Papen) had sent any money from New York for Bridgman Taylor. The witness said that he told Von der Goltz no, asserting that there were three other Ryans who were lawyers in Buffalo.

"He went away and came back the next day," said Mr. Ryan. "Meantime I got a telegram from John Devoy, editor of the Gaelic American, saying he had sent "Taylor" to me and asking that I identify the man. I went to the Manufacturers and Traders Bank, and found a remittance for $100 there. I drew a check on the bank for the amount, cashed it and gave the money to 'Taylor.' In his second visit to my office I took his receipts. Later the man came back and said that another remittance was due, that he was anxious about an overdue grain shipment, and that he had to leave town that night. I advanced him $100 and later received word from the bank that $200 was waiting for me. I got the cash, and when 'Taylor' came again I gave him the balance."

"Did you act as an attorney in this case?" asked Mr. Wood.

"I thought I was so acting."

"Who was your client?"

"I never learned."

"Do you know any Steffens?"

"No."

Mr. Ryan identified his signature on a receipt for $200, but said that he did not notice the name Von Papen on it. In all he gave Von der Goltz $100 within eight days, and then received a wire from Steffens (Von Papen) telling him to instruct Taylor that there was nothing more for him.

Walter A. Richter, Captain Tauscher's shipping clerk, told of delivering a package of pistols to a Mr. Newington in Meyer's hotel, Hoboken, in September, 1914. He did not know whether the pistols were paid for or whether he presented a bill. He admitted that he got a receipt. The pistols sell for $19.25 wholesale, he said.

Charles Tucker of Tuchandler, one of the assistant of Von der Goltz in the plot to blow up the Canadian waterway, and a German, said he met Von der Goltz, as "Wachendorf," in Longacre square.

"He got to talking about the war, and hired me as his secretary at $2 a day. We went to live in a hotel in the vicinity for a few days, and then went to Baltimore. There we stopped at the Emerson Hotel for a few days. We went twice to the German Consul's office and once to a steamship. I cannot hear very well and when we ate with the captain did not understand much about what they said. We returned to New York and started for Buffalo. Von der Goltz told me, 'We are going to Canada.'

"He wanted me to carry a suit case, with dynamite in it, and I said that I was a secretary and not a porter, and I did not carry the dynamite. In Buffalo a suit case containing dynamite was in my room for a few days, but it was taken away, and just in time, for a policeman came to search the room."

The witness said that he had been arrested in El Paso and had been brought here and kept on Ellis Island ever since. He added that there was trouble in Buffalo because Von der Goltz spent his time "sporting around." The witness said that he was left without money.

He also said that he was forced to go to Buffalo by Von der Goltz. Then Judge Hand interrogated him.

"How did he force you?" asked the Judge.

"He said that I must go."

"Suppose he did say so?"

"He would shoot me down."

"Did he say he would shoot you?"

"He said he would have me shot down."

"Were you with him all the time in New York?"

"No."

"Then why didn't you escape?"

"He came to my room and frightened me, and I had to go."

"Was it not as easy to change your room as to go to Buffalo?"

"I had to go to Buffalo; he made me go."

One of the lawyers for Captain Tauscher scoffed at the idea of the men ever having the idea of blowing up the Welland Canal.

Adolph B. Levenger, Captain Tauscher's secretary, told of seeing Von der Goltz in his employer's office. He said that Von der Goltz said he wished to see Captain Tauscher privately and that he (Levenger) went out of the office and left them alone. He said that he called the Du Pont company on the telephone and heard Captain Tauscher order the dynamite.

"Did Tauscher ever order dynamite before?"

"No," was the reply.

"Or since?"

"No."

Levenger said he did not know where Captain Tauscher's books for 1914, were, but that they were not in the office.

Harold A. Clarke, an employee of the Du Pont Company, who took the order for the dynamite, said representations were made to him at the time that the dynamite was wanted for blasting in New Jersey. The blasting was to be done the next day, making shipment by mail not feasible, he said. It was for that reason that von der Goltz and his associates got permission to take the dynamite away with them.

"We permitted the irregular method of delivery," said Mr. Clark, "because Mr. Clark was a responsible person."

CHARACTER WITNESS CALLED.

Lt.-Colonel Jay E. Hoffar of the United States Ordnance Department of the United States Army, appeared as a character witness for Captain Tauscher.

Further identification of the money receipts were made by Paul Blume, manager of the telegraph money transfer department of the banking firm of Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne. He said that the first draft had been for the account of Captain von Papen, and he then was asked by Mr. Wood why he left out the name of von Papen in the second draft.

"Von Papen requested me to do so," was the reply.

"Was there a third draft sent to Buffalo at the order of Von Papen?"

"Yes, October 14, I sent $40 to Fritzen and Busse, to Delaware ave., Buffalo."

Valentine Buettner, manager of Falls Restaurant, Niagara Falls, told of meeting von der Goltz and giving him permission to store the two suit cases.

"When he was gone I asked a fellow named William Schroer to take the suit cases away, and get rid of them," he said.

Later Schroeder told me there was dynamite in the suit case and that he threw it into the Niagara River.

Much amusement was caused by the testimony of Mr. and Mrs. Amos S. Guy, who rented the rooms to the conspirators in Buffalo. Mrs. Guy said there were four men besides Von der Goetz. She said she did not wait up for them and therefore never knew what time they came home. Her husband testified:

"They seemed a jolly but a noisy lot. They ran up and down the stairs so that you could hear them a block away. One day the fellow who said his name was 'Taylor' said his watch had been stolen, and as we did not believe that they had a watch among the five of them, I sent for a policeman. Next day they left.

"Did they have suit cases with them?"

"Yes," replied the witness, "and they told me that the suit cases contained musical instruments.

Mr. Wood announced that he had only a few witnesses, who were coming from Buffalo, and probably would close his case this morning. Captain Tauscher may take the stand this afternoon.

4 YEARS' SENTENCE FOR PLOT TO TRAP CLERGYMAN'S WIFE

Mother's Plea Fails to Save Granville H. Triplett, New York Lawyer

WOMAN ATTACKED IN NEW HAVEN HOTEL

CONVICTION FOLLOWS EXPOSURE OF ALLEGED CONSPIRACY TO ENABLE ASTOR TO GET DIVORCE.

New Haven, Conn., June 29.—Granville Hampden Triplett, New York lawyer, with offices in the Long Acre Building, Broadway and Forty-second street, was sentenced to serve not less than four years nor more than ten in the State Prison to-day by Judge Edwin B. Gager in the Superior Court. The counts on which he was found guilty were those of conspiracy to assault and actual assault on Mrs. Dorothy A. Triplett, of New York, wife of the Rev. John Edwin Triplett, a Congregational pastor, of Middlebury, N. J. Triplett, it is alleged, entered into a conspiracy with J. Wilson Shaw, Frank Campbell and Thomas J. Donahue, to place Mrs. Triplett in a compromising position in the Garde Hotel here for the purpose of procuring divorce evidence for his brother, the clergyman.

Mrs. John E. Triplett, mother of the prisoner, made plea to the court just before the sentence was imposed in which she said that she did not appeal for sympathy or leniency, but simply justice and right. She asked Judge Gager to place his son in the position of hers, and said the jury was prejudiced.

The trial of Triplett was sensational from the start, and during its course Donahue and Campbell, witnesses for the accused man, were arrested for perjury. Shaw also has been arrested, and is held pending action on serious charges in connection with the case.

Mrs. Triplett was induced to come to New Haven on May 15, 1915, ostensibly to meet a New York real estate dealer. The purpose of the meeting was to discuss the sale of some property belonging to Mrs. Triplett's mother, Mrs. Dora M. Nelson of New York. This man met Mrs. Triplett at the Garde Hotel and induced her to go to a room with him, where they might talk without being disturbed.

It is alleged that he attacked her and as he did so Granville H. Triplett, Donahue and Shaw forced the door of the room.

There is a separation action pending in the New York courts in which Mrs. Triplett accuses her husband of cruel and inhuman treatment.

Carried Sweden To Brink of War

Activist Campaign Finally Failed and Now Neutrality Is Stronger Than Ever

Finally Settled When Russia Gave Assurances Fortifications Would be Removed After the War.

STOCKHOLM, June 29. — The Swedish people are breathing more easily now than at any time since the war began. They are convinced at last that their King and their Government are determined to maintain a strict and impartial neutrality until peace shall have been declared, and they are plunging with renewed vigor into a prosperity unprecedented in the history of the country.

That Sweden would give up this prosperity and the happiness which has come with it for the perils, the poverty, and the misery of war seemed unthinkable to the foreign observer, but it cannot be denied that the political and international crisis through which the country passed the latter part of May brought it dangerously near to the brink of catastrophe. Now that the people wanted war—far from it—but the anti-Russian propaganda carried forward by an influential group of politicians known as the Activists attained for a time a momentum which threatened all the dictates of neutrality and was outspokenly an effort to force Sweden into war with her traditional enemy, Russia, and thus rally this part of Scandinavia with the Central Powers.

This Activist movement was denounced by the Socialists and Liberals in the Swedish Parliament as more pro-German than pro-Swedish, and was referred to on one occasion by Socialist Leader Branting as having a "dangerously strong financial backing." The pro-German press of Sweden carried the campaign at times to a violent extreme, and the bitterness engendered between these papers and those representing the Liberal and Socialist elements of the country may not be effaced for years to come.

The Liberals and Socialists frankly feared for a time that the influential Activists would win over the support of the Conservative Party, which still controls the upper house of Parliament and is supposed to more than hold the balance of power in what is theoretically a coalition cabinet. But when the test came, when the situation was at its worst, the Conservatives threw their strength with the other two parties in a determination to keep Sweden out of the war at any cost.

Neutrality More Firmly Established.

It so happened that the Activist campaign, designed to upset the neutrality of Sweden, actually brought about an agreement among the contending political factions of the Swedish Parliament which has given Swedish neutrality a stability and a standing before the belligerent nations it had not enjoyed before. This agreement was the immediate result of an Activist interpellation in Parliament calling attention to the alleged permanent character of fortifications being erected by the Russians on the Aland Islands in the Baltic, and asking what the Government proposed to do about it. At night the lights of the Alands are visible from the easternmost points of Sweden and the nearest of these isles is but six hours' sail from Stockholm. Russia had given informal assurances to Sweden that the fortifications were only temporary, being erected for the purpose of protecting certain mine-fields and thus defending the islands from possible capture by the Germans. Sweden was further assured that the fortifications would be removed at the end of the present war.

The Aland Islands command absolutely the waterways entering the Gulf of Bothnia, and as a naval base they also command the entrance to the Gulf of Finland, and hence the way to the Russian capital. Strongly fortified and in the hands of Russia they practically make it impossible for Germany to use her navy in the Northern Baltic waters. They also give Russia the opportunity for an outflanking movement in the event of a German naval of military division north of the Gulf of Riga. Military strategists attach much importance to the Baltic the coming Summer and realize that it may play a very prominent part in the German campaign against Russia. All these facts, considered together, led the Liberals and Socialists to the conclusion that the agitation of the Alands question was designed wholly in favour of the Germans, Sweden, and Russia, too, for that matter, fully expected when the war broke out that Germany at once would seize the Aland Islands as a base for naval operations. The islands were entirely without protection at that time, and their possession would have enabled Germany to bottle up the Gulf of Bothnia and safeguard all her operations in the Baltic—the very operations she must now undertake if German arms are to pass Riga in the direction of Petrograd.

But at the outbreak of the war Germany seemed to fear a British fleet might enter the Baltic through the Great Belt of Denmark and she kept the bulk of her navy in southern waters. Finally Denmark decided to close the Grand Belt to all belligerents and she strewed it with powerful mines. This action closed the only deepwater entrance or outlet to the Baltic, other than the Kiel Canal, and the German fleet was left freedom of action in that sea. So on August 20, 1914 there came a German naval diversion against the Alands archipelago. By this time, however, Russia had mined the Aland waters and the German fleet managed only to destroy some signal stations.

BASE FOR BRITISH SUBMARINE.

Another element of importance attached to the Alands when British submarines managed to pass the shallow sound separating Denmark and Sweden and entered the Baltic. The Alands are now offering them a splendid base and the recent activities of Russian submarines have put a sudden stop to German shipping in the Northern Baltic. The submarines also constitute a continuing menace against any naval craft which may venture out of the south.

In the negotiation of the North Sea-Baltic Treaty in 1908 Russia promised her present allies, Great Britain and France, out of consideration for Sweden, not to fortify the Aland Islands. The Swedish people are a unit in regarding as a threat and a menace any permanent military works on this archipelago. But they now have the assurance of both France and Great Britain, as well as Russia, that the works nearing completion are not of that character, and will all be taken away when the present war is ended. Professor Steffens author of the Alands interpellation has declared such promises are worthless; that the present war has shown that diplomatic notes and promises are, indeed, but "scraps of paper," not to be regarded when conflicting with the interest of a belligerent.

But the renewed assurances from the Entente Powers appear to have completely satisfied the Government and the leaders of the three great parties. And so came the agreement, dramatically staged in the Parliament. Mr. Wallenberg, speaking for the King and Government, said he was in a position to reaffirm the solemn declarations of neutrality previously proclaimed. He said the Government regarded the question of the fortification of the Aland Islands as one of vital importance to Sweden, but he assured the Riksdag and the people of Sweden that the Government would neglect nothing to preserve the rights and interests of Sweden. Sweden, he added, would always maintain her right of self-determination but in the face of a very difficult situation, she already had shown her steadfast desire to fulfill the demands of a strict and impartial neutrality, as well as an eager desire not to be drawn into any warlike entanglements.

The proceedings in the Riksdag, the Swedish Parliament, had all been arranged in advance, and Mr. Wallenberg had scarcely taken his seat in the second chamber when the leaders of the three parties in turn arose and indorsed all that he had said. This same plan then was carried out in the first chamber, and there was rejoicing through all of Sweden that a serious crisis had been safely passed.

The Activists, however, chose an effective weapon when they took up the Alands question. They had attempted from time to time to arouse the people against England because of the blockade, but the response of this appeal was meagre. Ever since the loss of Finland, however, Russia has been a traditional enemy of Sweden in the minds of many of the Swedish people, and it has been comparatively easy to arouse their fears.

Battle-Blinded French Soldiers Are Being Taught How To Fence

Among the eighteen blinded soldiers who are in the Phare de France, in Paris, which is under the direction of Miss Winnifred Holt of the Lighthouse for the Blind, are some who take fencing lessons. Despite the fact that they are totally blind they are learning to use the foils with remarkable skill. Their instructor is one of the best in Paris, Miss Holt said in a recent report of the work.

Flouret is what they practice with the foils. Among the fencers are two officers who gave their eyes for France, Miss Holt continued. The other men and these two are learning various tactics.

"With their ten fingers, which have become to them eyes, the men are now learning, and they are beginning to see again the light of contentment," she said.

Telling about some of the men in the Phare de France, she said: "Sergeant G. was our first resident guest at the French Lighthouse. We found him in a hospital, so weak, so hopeless, that he impatiently asked me to go away. I stayed, however, and talked to him about music for I recognized that he could sing. He is now at the Lighthouse and is an industrious student, reading his Braille notes.

"Our second pensionnaire is a sub-officer from the South who learned to use the typewriter. He was a great fencer, and we have engaged the best fencing teacher in Paris to re-educate the blind hero as well as the others who want to learn to fence.

"This maitre d'armes cried when he saw our blind officers as they drew themselves up, clicked their heels together, and our Southerner raised his stick, giving the fencer's salute.

"Another of our light finders is an architect. He still wears the uniform pierced by the bayonet thrusts received in the battle of Champagne, where he lost his eyes. He hopes to be a professor at the lighthouse and get a place as secretary and stenographer. Yesterday he started again at his old craft and built houses out of clay.

"We have a sunny studio at the Phare and two Americans who are devoted to teaching our men to become deft with their 'ten eyes.' We can boast already of a remarkable exhibit from our modelling class and a still more remarkable achievement in re-educatinng the blind and giving them new sight through new facility and sensitiveness of touch.

"It is for such men as these that once again I want to appeal to the generosity of Americans. Contributions are welcome, large or small, and should be sent to William Forges, Morgan, Jr., treasurer, No. 17 East Thirty-Eighth Street.

MILLIONS NEEDED TO RELIEVE DISTRESS

ARMENIAN & SYRIAN VICTIMS OF TURKISH ATROCITIES ARE IN DISTRESSING CONDITION.

The incalculable havoc coming out of Europe's war cannot be tabulated, but there are high lights, says the Springfield Republican that show the greatest need for American giving. For example, the Russian commission of the Armenian and Syrian relief committee reports a quarter of a million destitute Armenian refugees in the Caucasus and Persia under the care of the commission.

It is further stated that the half million refugees in Northern Arabia, Mesopotamia and Asia Minor are mostly women and children, 'whose physical condition is horrible beyond words to describe.'' American consuls and missionaries are now able to reach large numbers of these sufferers with food and clothing, if only the funds are provided. It is estimated that $500,000 a month for the next six months will be required to care for these people and to return them to their desolated homes in Armenia, recently captured from Turkey by the Russians.

It is difficult to grasp the full meaning of these statistics. They represent a state of things by the side of which famine and disaster appeals of the past look small indeed. War's daughters of the horse leech are crying "give, give," and we who sit in peace and plenty must not close our ears to the old world's destitution. Never before did we face such continuous demands for help as are now being pressed but by the same token never before were there so many people needing our assistance. This demand for helping suffering men and women and children encircling the people of the globe is greater as never before. It may be considered as one of the good things coming out of the great evil of our time.

FORTY-FIVE MILES DOWN TRENCHES TO SEE AN OLD FRIEND

Officer Tells Story of "Sensitive Firing Line"

LONDON, June 28.—The British hold, at present, one-fourth of the allies' western front. That is to say, their line is about 90 miles long.

"I shouldn't think," said a correspondent, "it would hardly be possible for any one man to keep track of what'd doing along such a tremendous string of trenches".

"You'd be surprised," said the young officer he spoke to, "to see how sensitive a fighting line is.

"For instance, the other day, a chap said to me, 'Don't you know Bill Smith?'

"'Yes' I said. 'He and I used to be great pals but he went to Canada and I haven't seen him for years.'

"'Well,' said the chap, 'he's 45 miles down this line now. Why don't you get leave and go see him?'

"I did. I made that 45-mile trip, wading through trenches and taking short cuts, travelling through country I'd never seen before, meeting thousands and thousands of men I'd never met, getting lost and asking directions, mixing up with convoys and ammunition trains and having all sorts of experiences, until finally I came to a jolly long tunnel leading down to a thundering deep dug-out in a first line trench.

"I went down this hole and as I landed in the dugout, Bill Smith got up and said, I'm mighty glad to see you old chap.

"Just then a telephone bell rang in the dugout. One of the other fellows answered it and after a minute, said, 'Yes, he's just got here.'

"It was the chap who told me about Bill Smith, asking if I'd arrived safely."

CASEMENT THANKED JURY FOR VERDICT

Bitterly Refers to His Trial in England and Declared Not Tried By Peers

LONDON, June 29.—Viscount Reading, Lord Chief Justice of England, with the black cloth, by tradition called a cap, spread over his head, and his two associates in scarlet gowns, likewise black-capped, pronounced the sentence of death for high treason on the Irishman, Sir Roger Casement, shortly before five o'clock this afternoon, half an hour after the foreman of the jury gave the verdict of guilty.

Sir Roger addressed the court, reading his final statement with the explanation that he wished it might reach a much larger audience than the one before him. His auditors, among whom were Viscount Bryce and many other prominent men and women, listened in deepest silence.

The prisoner declared he did not regard trial by Englishmen in an English court as a trial by his peers, to which he was entitled. He reviewed recent events in Ireland from the beginning of the formation of the Ulster Volunteers, and said:

NOT ASHAMED.

"We have seen the constitutional army refuse to obey the constitutional Government, and we were told the first duty of Irishmen was to enter that army. If small nations were to be the first consideration, I saw no reason why Ireland shoud shed any blood for any people but her own.

"If that be treason, I am not ashamed to avow it here. If the Unionists chose the road they thought would lead to the good side, I knew my road led to the dark side. Both of us proved right. So I am prouder to stand here, in a traitor's dock, than to fill the place of my accusers.

"Self-government is our right. It is no more a thing to be withheld from us or doled out to us than the right to live or right to sunshine or spring flowers."

THANKS FOR VERDICT.

Throwing aside his manuscript Sir Roger said: "My Lords, I have done. Gentlemen of the jury, I wish to thank you for your verdict. I meant no reflection upon you when I said this was not a trial by my peers."

With a sweeping gesture of his arm, and with more feeling than he had shown before, Sir Roger continued:

"How would all men here feel"—his voice broke—"how would you feel if an Englishman had landed in England and had been taken to Ireland; if that man had been placed before a jury in a community inflamed against him, believing him to be a criminal?"

SHOOK HANDS WITH FRIEND.

Then the prisoner shook hands with a friend who was sitting below the dock, while the usher placed the black cloths over the heads of the judges. The voice of the Chief Justice was firm, but his face was pale as he spoke the few words in pronouncing the sentence. He began: "Roger David Casement, you have been found guilty by a jury of your peers of high treason, the highest crime known to the law," and concluded by sentencing him "to be hanged by the neck until you are dead."

SMILED AFTER SENTENCE.

As the judge pronounced the sentence the prisoner, who was leaning on the railing of the dock, smiled. Then a warden touched his arm and he withdrew behind the green curtain from what may be his last appearance before the public, which during the trial, has regarded him without animosity, if not with some degree of sympathy.

NOT A SURPRISE.

Michael Francis Doyle, of counsel for Sir Roger, gave out the following statement to-night: "The verdict, though regrettable to us, was not a surprise. We will take an immediate appeal to the Criminal Court of Appeals, and then to the House of Lords if necessary, because we feel that the point of law involving a statute 500 years old under which Sir Roger was tried never has been legally tested."

FLY FROM FRONT TO LONDON.

London, June 29.—Flying from the trenches in France to London and back again in the same day is becoming a not uncommon experience for officers of the British Army. Recently an officer left the trenches early one morning, crossed the English channel in an aeroplane, and was in a London Turkish bath in a few minutes under four hours from the time that he left the battlefield.

Later another soldier did the trip in even shorter time, leaving the trenches in the early morning, Turkish bathing three and a half hours later in London, lunching at one of the leading hotels, and arriving back "somewhere in France" the same evening.

To Have Perfect Skin Throughout the Summer

These days the face needs special care and attention. Flying dust and dirt, the beating sun, are severe on any skin. Their despoiling effects are best overcome by the application of pure mercolized wax. This keeps skin and pores in a cleanly condition, the complexion beautifully white and spotless. Discolored, freckled and roughened cuticle are actually absorbed by it. One ounce of mercolized wax, obtainable at any druggists, is sufficient to completely renovate a soiled complexion. It is used like cold cream, allowed to remain on over night, and washed off in the morning.

As the skin tends to expand in warm weather, causing wrinkles to form, a good astringent lotion should be used. Dissolve 1 oz. powdered saxolite in ½ pt. witch hazel. Bathe the face in this during the heat of the day or before going out for theatre or social affair. It is a remarkable skin tightener and wrinkle eraser.

Many Canadians Refused To Yield

Germans Killed One General and Several Officers Before Ypres

FOUGHT DESPERATELY

London, June 28.—The Cologne Volkszeitung, describing the gallant stand made by the Canadians at Ypres at the beginning of this month, says that many of them made an obstinate resistance, preferring to be killed rather than surrender. One general and several officers who refused to give in were killed. The general drew his sword and when a sergeant demanded his surrender he cut him through the face, whereupon an infantryman bayonetted him.

Many such groups who resisted desperately and refused all mercy, had to be cleared out with bombs.

ONTARIO SYNOD RAISES STIPENDS OF CLERGY

MAKES MINIMUM FOR PRIESTS $800 to $1000, ACCORDING TO LENGTH OF SERVICE.

Kingston, June 29.—The Ontario Synod adopted a canon providing for an increase in stipends of clergy in the mission fields. It provided that the scale of stipends, in addition to a residence, shall be as follows: For deacons, not less than $700; for priests not less than $800, for the first five years of service, not less than $900 after ten years of service, not less than $950 after fifteen years of service, and not less than $1000 after twenty years of service.

SPANIEL LEADS POSSE TO BODY

PET DIRECTS SEARCHERS TO WHERE MISTRESS LAY AFTER BLOODHOUNDS FAILED.

South Norwalk, Conn., June 29. — A posse of 26 men which had searched for three days with bloodhounds for Miss Abigail Meeker Treadwell, was led to her body in Devil's Den, near her home, in Weston, by her pet dog.

Mrs. Treadwell and her dog disappeared together on Saturday, and since late that night the men who had been organized by her relatives, had searched for her. They had some bloodhounds but could get no trace of her.

Late this afternoon Miss Treadwell's spaniel, nearly famished, reached her home, and after he was fed he led the men to a deep glade in Devil's Den, where the body was found.

Miss Treadwell was 55 years old. Her throat had been cut with a small pocket knife which was found near her body, which had fallen face down in the swamp. The dog had dragged it part way out and apparently had remained with it until hunger drove the animal back to the house.

No reason is know for Miss Treadwell's suicide, if her death was so caused.

PORT HOPE'S BIG DAY

Port Hope will observe the 49th anniversary of Dominion Day by a monster celebration on July 1st. A feature of the attraction will be the presentation of the colours to the 136th Battalion by Col. Hughes of Toronto. The afternoon programme will consist of horse races, baseball tournament, acts by four of the greatest lady acrobats on the continent, wrestling matches and all kinds of athletic sports. In the evening there will be a band concert, acrobatic stunts and a regular Vaudeville entertainment. Two bands numbering seventy-five pieces will furnish music during the day. Special, after evening performance, leaving at 10.30, for Peterborough.

NO COTTON SENT TO GERMANY

Paris, June 27 —"The economic situation of Switzerland is much more embarrassed and complex than is generally understood," said Mr. Edmund Schulthess, federal counsellor and chief of the Swiss Department of Commerce, Industry and Agriculture, as quoted to-day in a despatch from Berne to the Journal.

The Counsellor's remarks were by way of comment on Germany's demand that Switzerland permit the exportation of cotton and foodstuffs, collected by German agents, on pain of prohibition of the exportation from Germany to Switzerland of coal, iron, and other materials essential for Swiss industries.

"Germany sends us coal, raw materials, necessary for our mechanical industries, seeds, chemical fertilizers, kerosene, benzine and a number of other articles, to the amount of 15,000 tons daily," the Counsellor continued. "Our efforts to obtain these goods from America have failed thus far and we are dependent absolutely on the Central Empires for them.

"It is absolutely untrue that goods are imported into Switzerland for re-exportation to Germany. Such goods as are shipped to Germany are forwarded under official auspices in compensation for goods applied to Switzerland in accordance with the arrangement accepted by the Entente Allies. Moreover the quantities shipped are proportionately insignificant, and certainly have no effect on the economic aspects of the war."

MEN GET TO CAMP WITHOUT UNIFORMS

Full Machine Gun Company Lacks Special Equipment and Becomes Infantry

No Water For 2nd Regiment

Troy Commands Camps at Cornell Farms — Guardsmen Regret Division is Not to be Unit.

CAMP WHITMAN, BEEKMAN, N. Y., June 30.—With new bodies of State troops coming into Camp Whitman only partly equipped, the impatience of officers and guardsmen at the slowness of the arrival of the equipment was increased to-day. Officers were worried by the reports that the guardsmen were to be rushed to the border in installments, followed by declarations that the entire guard was to be expected. This so confused man first. The indefiniteness of the date when the camp will be ready for a large body of men added to the restlessness.

Troop H of the First Cavalry arrived at Camp Whitman to-day, to the surprise of headquarters, which had not been notified that the troop w asto be expected. This so confused the officer of the troop that they made up their minds they had mistaken their orders and were on the point of entraining for Van Cortlandt Park, to which another troop of the same reigment had been ordered.

The Second Regiment, with headquarters at Troy, made camp at Cornell Farm, thirteen miles from Camp Whitman. They were scheduled to proceed to Camp Whitman to-morrow, but word was sent that because of lack of water, the camp was not ready for them and they were to remain at their present encampment for two or three days longer.

Although the Second Regiment is the largest and one of the best equipped in the State, its condition on the march from Poughkeepsie five miles to Cornell Farms emphasized the defects in equipment of the militiamen generally. Ten guardsmen marched out in civilian clothes. They could not even get old khaki uniforms for the reason that all the khaki in Rensselaer County had been used up. A large part of the men in several companies wore uniforms which had seen long service.

180 Soldiers Without Guns.

Ten militiamen who were nominally mounted troopers marched afoot, with their spurs clanking. One hundred of them are without guns. A recently oragnized machine gun company of fifty-eight men marched as infantry, because it had not a single article of special machine gun equipment. This company has been ordered to spend no time drilling for the use of the machine gun, and has been notified that its status will be that of infantry for an indefinite period.

News that the Seventy-first Regiment and others had been ordered to the border at once fired many of the officers with eagerness to be hurried there, although they wish to go thoroughly equipped. The officers all along the line are in sympathy with the leading officers of the State National Guard, who were anxious above all things to have the entire division of New York State an intact formation when it reached the border. They also wanted it drilled and equipped so that it can stand a comparison with regulars.

Many former officers of the regular army have their own news services from the border. Letters from their former comrades have been received, expressing hope for the speedy presence of the New York National Guard. One of these letters, which was shown to a Times reporter, to-day, detailed the plan for invading Mexico from the vicinity of Eagle Pass in case war should be declared. The writer, who is a regular army officer and a classmate at West Point of the recipient, said it was clear that Carransa was preparing to attack. He said Carranza troops had been brought to the border weeks ago from as far north as Vera Cruz, the pretext being to help hunt bandits, but the writer added, "Why so much artillery?"

Criticize War Daparment.

No militia officers here will talk for publication, but their criticism in private conversations of the failure of the War Department to make speed with the equipment lacking to bring the units up to war strength is outspoken and bitter. New contingents on their way to or arriving in Camp Whitman are not slow to express their disappointment at the prospect of remaining here, especially when it is doubtful how many of the other State troops will join them. One of the most disappointed was Troop H of the First Cavalry, which had been ordered to Camp Whitman, although Troop M of the First had been sent at the same time to Van Cortlandt Park.

American Seaman, Long Prisoner In German Camp, Tells of Abuse

Edward L. Johnson Says Food Was So Scarce He Wished He Could Conquer the Habit of Eating—Says Men Are Dying of Neglect and Ill-treatment—Finally Proves Himself Citizen of United States.

"Believe me she's some queen to look upon," said Edward L. Johnson, speaking of Miss Liberty. He had been entertained in an extremely frugal way by the Germans, most of the time in the British prison camp at Ruhleben, Berlin, and had just reached his native land. Johnson an able seaman, was taken prisoner of war by the Teutons on August 1, 1914, and since that time he has been tyring to get away to Paterson, N. J. There seemed to be a fear that Mrs. Johnson would have something to say to her husband concerning his protracted absence, and Johnnson hinted that now that he was free, back in the land of the Stars and Stripes, the fighting could cease in Europe.

Johnson is at present abiding at the Seamen's Church Institute, No. 25 South street. In the meantime he is full of wrath against Prussians and their ways of feeding prisoners, of using the butts of their rifles and so forth. He showed a passport and other proof to back where he'd been. The story he told was heard by several persons, and Johnson appeared well satisfied with the food and coffee that was before him at luncheon time.

"You've got to let me have my head on this yarn," said the sailor. "It isn't every day that I come back to America with the tale of a prison camp and what the Germans do. I'm an American, but that did not count for much over there. Still I got free and I suppose I should be grateful for that, eh?

HIS LAST VOYAGE.

"I was a lamp trimmer, A.B., aboard the Incola, chartered from a Liverpool firm by the Hamburg-American line. If it hadn't been for a part load of Russian peas I might never have been held in the blessed place. The Incola is a vessel of 20,000 tons and the biggest British ship held there. I had been at sea for thirty years and had resolved that it should be my last voyage. It was, and you'll not wonder when I get through.

"On August, 1, 1914, when we had steam up and were going to take a chance on the Russian peas, the Germans came aboard and held us back. Nothing doing, they told us, on beating it away. So with Captain Allsides, the chief mate, whose name I've forgotten, Second mate Andersen and Third mate Gibbons and several other men I was taken over to an old hulk. There were 1,800 men aboard her, mostly Russians. She was ducked in Hamburg. We were used like dogs. I never was so pushed about in all my life. Why, the smell of the cooking was enough to make a dog sick. Nobody could eat anything. The pigs' feet walked away from your plate before you had time to stick your fork into them. So you can guess what life was like to us. I'm not used to feeding in the Waldorf-Astoria or Delmonico's but now and again I like to enjoy what I eat. And when I say something's rotten you can bet your sweet life that there must have been something wrong about it, eh?

"How glorious it was when some of these Germans ordered us off the hulk. We were ready to run. It was then October 6. They took us away early one morning. We got to Berlin in the night without one thing to eat and only water to drink. It was ten o'clock when we were marched into Ruhleben camp. Somebody as told to find us a place to sleep in. We could not sleep because we were so hungry. It was next morning at breakfast time that we got a bit to eat. But don't think that we started out with grape fruit seated on double violets, special cereal with cream, eggs and bacon and coffee—oh, no! That was what we wanted. What we did get was plain coffee, bad at that, no milk or sugar with it, and a pretty small piece of black bread—black as the coffee ought to have been. Even that was better than what we had on board the hulk.

SCOFFED AT PROTESTS.

"We were lined up and counted and then counted again. I told them that I was American, said it softly, shouted it and yelled it. All I heard back was a sneering 'English.' They scoffed at the word. They seemed to hate it and with it they hated me.

As I had only had one slim breakfast in two days I was eager to see what the lunch affair would bring forth. My hopes were blasted. How would you like to be ready to eat a horse and have served to you cabbage wash and a piece of black bread? Almost makes you feel as if you did really want to give up this habit of eating. You began to feel that in the past you had made a pig of yourself. However, I looked to the future—dinner. It was some shock when I discovered that I had had that in the middle of the day. The third annd last meal was a fine looking menu. Here it is— tea and bread, the latter black.

"It was some time before those friends of mine in Liverpool and Dundee started to send things, or maybe the Germans held them back because they believed that I was lying and not an American at all.

"You ate your meals with a soldier messing about with a fixed bayonet on the end of his gun. There was no doubt as to what he would have liked to do with that bayonet.

"Ruhleben before the war was a race track. Now there are twenty-eight wooden places they call barracks on it. We were used like dogs.

Y.M.C.A. HELPED SOME.

"I had no papers with me. Why should I? I had been shipwrecked three times in seven years. It never occurred to me that the worst jobbing I could get would be right in Germany. They started a Y.M.C.A. in the camp and that helped matters a bit. But sometimes in the middle of winter if you wanted warm clothes they'd make you wait until you nearly froze to death. The Germans did not care. It was one less prisoner for them to handle.

"It was on the Kaiser's birthday that some fellow in digging around the staff on which they had hoisted the flag cut the halyards with his spade and the flag came down. The Germans looked glum and then fierce. There was a lot of whispering among the soldiers, and I suppose more by the officers. Next thing I knew was that all mail was stopped for three weeks. They did everything they could to make us miserable.

"In the morning they'd pull the bed clothes off and yell, 'Raus mit!' that's the language I've been bossed by for nearly two years. I don't understand German, and maybe it's a good thing for me that I did not. I've been kicked though. Once I was hit with the butt of a gun and had to be taken to the hospital.

"It's precious when you come back here, after walking around in the snow with your hands as deep in your pockets as you can get them and wooden shoes on your feet. Some of the men there have been in Germany for many years. The German commander calls us out for fire drill. The orders were translated through the captains, who were prisoners.

"No and again they pull this kind of thing:—

"Whoever is in sympathy with Germany can step out.' Men knew that would mean that they could go around Berlin practically free. Who stepped out? Just one negro. When I thought of the food and of what I was going through I was half way willing to step out, but to say that I was actually in sympathy with Germany was something different.

"I had been fighting to get that passport for months and months. I spoke about it to Mr. Gerard—yes, I did—the American Ambassador. I guessed it must have slipped his mind that Edward L. Johnson was with the British at Ruchelsben camp. Maybe, too, he had a lot of people telling him that who were born in the land of the free.

PREACHER TO THE RESCUE.

"On November 8, 1915, things began to look brighter. Hanged if I didn't finally get a chance to sign my passport, but it was not the one that I got away with. A clergyman came to the camp. I told him my story, the same one that I had rammed into every man's head who would listen to me. I asked him to send a message for me to the Embassy of the United States and offered him £5 sterling to do it. He would not take the money, but said he would do his best. Soon I got the word:—'Mr. Johnson, your passport is on its way and as soon as it comes it will be handed to you.' It was from the American Ambassador. I went out soon after that to get the passport. Do you think that I could be trusted without a soldier. Nothing doing! I had one with a fixed bayonet as I went along the street.

"Finally I did get away in a train for Holland, with 600 marks. When I got to the border, after having been all that time in the prison camp, they stripped me to see what I was carrying through. They had charged me double fare before that, but I would have given anything to get away.

"Men are dying there through neglect and abuse. One man who died was a jockey and another was a captain and several others were sailors. They stick the needle into you for anything. I had ninety-six 'hypos' in me."

Johnson recognized an old friend at this instant and shouted, "Ho, Jim!"

"Blimey, Ed," said the Briton.

"Excuse me," said Johnson, "but I guess I can get some more of this off my chest to Jim. He ought to have been there instead of me."

Arrivals at Viamede

Among the arrivals at Viamede this season are: Mrs. A. S. Butchart, Mr. Geo. M. Butchart, Frank D. Butchart, Allan Butchart, Miss Constance Butchart, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Gall, Cameron Gall and George Gall, of Toronto; Miss Camille H. Park, Peterborough; Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Phillips, Miss Helen Phillips, Rochester, N.Y.

The Phillips party are out every day fishing, and have had good luck with both bass and maskinonge, making good catches.

Mr. George M. Butchart, on Tuesday evening, had hardly left the Viamede Dock when he landed a 12-pound maskinonge, which was a fine large fish.

Mr. Jack Thompson the next evening caught a ten-pounder at the same place.

Viamede is certainly one of the best points on the lakes for good fishing.

FINE PROGRAMME BY CHILDREN'S ORCHESTRA

Orchestral and Solo Numbers Delighted Large Audience Last Night

A most charming programme was given last night by the children's orchestra and pupils of the Conservatory of Music in the Conservatory Hall. This juvenile organization, made up of the violin pupils of Miss Logan and Miss Palmer, and wind instrument pupils of Mr. Gliddon, is one of the many advantages offered by the Conservatory, and the spirit and enthusiasm which marked their playing last night, shows that each member took a genuine pleasure in the part they had to perform. That the orchestra has almost doubled itself in size since last year, shows that parents are anxious to take advantage of the excellent training it affords for their children under the capable direction of Mr. Rupert Gliddon. Representative pupils of the different teachers on the staff rendered solos during the evening, and showed by the quality of their playing an intelligent and painstaking interest in their work. Some of the youthful performers showed a marvellous technique, and a very promising musical talent. The programme was as follows:

Orchestra — (a) "Past Man's March"; (b) overture — "Evening Slumbers" (Marcadante).

Piano—"Wild Horseman" (Schumann), Loretta Galvin.

Violin—Springtime Waltz, Kathleen Grose.

Clarinette—Selection from "Bohemian Girl" (Balfe), Jim Matthews.

Piano duett — "Dance of the Dewdrops" (Ducelle), Marjorie Lawrence, Verda Graham.

Trombone—"The Palms" (Faure), Harold Lancashire.

Piano—"Nelke" (Lichner), Mary Hewson.

Cornet—"Lillie Dale" (Arne), Fred Greene, Charlie Thirnbeck.

Violin—"Home Sweet Home" (Farmer), Sam. Swartz.

Orchestra—Sacred Selections.

Violin duet—"Vesper Bells," Dora Brown and Daisy McCall.

Piano—"Messenger of Spring" (Spindles), Marjorie Turner.

Clarinette — Fantasia on British Navy Airs (Macdonald), Orville Crowe.

Piano—Serenade (Bohm), Thelma Darling.

Violin quartette, Mabel Gardener, Mary Gardener, Ada Shelton, Gladys Jay.

Piano—Rondo in D (Mozart), Jean Kidd.

Flute—Selected, Billy Mowat.

Piano — "Negre" (Cyril Scott), Agnes Logan.

Orchestra—"Keep the Home Fires Burning," "O Canada."

"God Save the King."

The members of the orchestra, violin section: Sam. Swartz, Ken. Lang, Mary Gardener, Mabel Gardener, Gladys Jay, Ada Shelton, Kathleen Grose, Edna Connor, Dora Brown, Daisy McCall, Genevieve O'Connoll, Sybil McFadden, Howard Young, Leonore Crary, Alice Brown, Charlie Nicholls, Fred Doupe, Frank Whitehouse, Edwin Johnston.

Clarinettes: Otto Gliddon, Jim Matthews, Orville Crowe.

Cornets—Paul Glibbon, Charlie Thirnbeck, Fred Greene.

Flute: Bill Mowatt.

Trombone: Harold Lancashire.

Previous to the concert prizes were distributed to some of the pupils of Miss Palmer. Daisy McCall, Kathleen Grose, Leonore Crary, Edna Connor, and Howard Young received prizes for attendance. Dora Brown and Daisy McCall received prizes for the best playing in the junior girls' class.

ROYAL THEATRE

Years of experience in the picture business has taught us what the public wants and that is what we give. Our programme for to-day and to-morrow excels anything ever presented in Peterborough. We have three extra changes a week and something new every day. For prices and particulars see our advertisement in this issue.

TWO CHILDREN ARE SHOT DEAD, FATHER IS HELD

PENSACOLA, Fla., June 30. — Ethel and Tiffany Fudge, aged 13 and 15 respectively, were found dead in a house on the outskirts of Pensacola. Both had been shot through the heart, and, according to the police, a note found near the bodies said they had decided to kill themselves rather than go to an orphans' home, and another note said their father, E. J. Fudge, was not to blame. After an investigation, however, the Coroner had the father arrested and held pending developments.

Fudge asserted he was in town seeking work when the children met death.

Narrow Escape At Gravel Pit

MILLBROOK, June 30.—A falling in of a gravel pit at Walsh's, West of Millbrook nearly entombed men and team. Lavergne Fallis had backed his wagon under the bank and the filling had started when he heard a crack. He shouted to the men to run and gave the horses a quick clash and all got out except the hind wheels of the waggon which were buried in tons of earth, rock, stumps and trees. They had been undermining the bank some time. It took Mr. P. I. Bentley two days to blow up the debris to get into the pit again.

Boy Bitten By A Dog

George Panter, 292 Townsend St., Will Be Incapacitated For a Couple of Weeks

While delivering papers at the residence of Mr. Arthur Stevenson yesterday afternoon, George Panter, 292 Townsend street, was severely bitten by a dog. The cur took a piece clean out of the boy's leg. He will be incapacitated for at least a couple of weeks. Dr. J. B. Mann was summoned and rendered medical attention.

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading, containing or involving attacks on individuals or violent or extreme statements, must to secure insertion, be signed with writer's real name, the owner of which thus assumes the responsibility.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—From a letter received, I find that some may imagine that I referred to Mr. Gillespie, M.P.P., in my letter re Pigeon Creek bridge. That is not correct. I referred to those who had opportunities, yet did nothing.

By the way, I have been bombarded with letters regarding some appointment of Mr. J. Harris McClellan. I have laid the complaints before the Prime Minister, to whom all complaints should be directly addressed regarding this or any other matter during my absence on duty. A number of the letters have been from Liberals. Do I understand that the Liberal party in W. Peterborough agrees, then, with the finding of Hon. G. H. Ferguson re T. V. C. matters? This opens up a new phase of this inquiry and discounts the replies of Hon. G. P. Graham and Mr. Guthrie, M.P. I am at a loss to understand why these local Liberals should feel so outraged if they deny the allegations made in the investigation.

Yours truly,

J. H. BURNHAM.

Barriefield Camp, June 30, 1916.

Mr. Burnham cannot get out of it in that easy way. Liberals do not feel outraged by anything but the monstrous inconsistency of Conservative party members, high up, who spent thousands of dollars in an investigation, which, according to the finding of the Commission, declared an official appointed under another government, guilty of wrong doing that justified his dismissal, and with indecent haste, gave this declared discredited official a place in the service of the government which had declared him unworthy of trust and unfit to hold office. The question is not, at all, whether or not "Grits" believe the Ferguson charges. The real point is that "Tories" believed them, and inflicted punishment, which they at once converted into reward. There is no partyism in the matter; it is plain, palpable "graft." Does Mr. Burnham condone or condemn it?

What a pity it is that the Public should be held up by the exorbitant price of strawberries which are indigenous to this country and where they abound by thousands of acres. I do not know of any combine where a greater imposition is inflicted upon the community, and it is one that should have been redressed by the government long ago. Have we no live representative for that purpose, or does he consider that this duty only consists of looking out for votes and leave the country at the mercy of every exploiter. It is currently reported that one market gardener alone in his neighbourhood made five thousand dollars out of fruit in one year, principally out of strawberries.

To make matters worse they have reduced the size of the boxes, besides having half size boxes, but still retain the maximum prices. The idea of charging 18c. per box in the midst of the season is preposterous.

Fruit, and particularly strawberries, calls for the paternal protection of the government, inasmuch as they contain medicinal properties which go far to conserve the health of the people.

There are other places where the fruit is sold at five cents per box, and a large box at that, and when this is the best adapted country for berries in the world, why do we longer submit to the imposition?

We are appealed to by the Imperial and Local Governments to practise economy, but how can we do it under present imnositions?

Yours, &c.,

Economy

cal examination and became a member of the Peterborough Squadron. To-day he is officially reported as missing. Pte. Benzie was thirty-one years of age and unmarried. He had had previous military training in the Gordon Highlanders. His mother, living in Banffshire, is the next of kin.

PTE. HENRY GEORGE HITCHMAN

Another Peterborough man who joined the 8th C. M. R. at the same time as Pte. Benzie, was Pte. Henry George Hitchman, of 208 Perry street. Pte. Hitchman is included in the long list of Mounted Rifles who are missing. He was twenty-one years of age and single. His next-of-kin resides in Birmingham, Eng.

PTE. GEORGE EGGERTON.

Among the gallant lads who marched down George Street with B Squadron, 8th C.M.R., on the night of March 6, 1915, to entrain for Ottawa, was Pte. George Eggerton. To-day Pte. Eggerton is numbered among the missing, following the terrific fighting of the third battle of Ypres. His relatives live in England.

PTE. FRED. A. SULLIVAN.

Pte. Fred A. Sullivan, a Canadian born boy, who left here in March, 1915, with the Peterborough contingent to join the 39th Battalion, is reported wounded. Pte. Sullivan is a son of Mr. D. Sullivan, 267 Bethune Street, and is well known in the city. He went overseas with the 39th and after some training in England, was transferred to another Canadian battalion at the front.

PTE. JAS. F. GIBSON.

A short time ago Pte. "Jimmy" Gibson, a well-known Peterborough boy, who enlisted in Toronto, with the 92nd Highlanders, was reported dangerously wounded. His relatives have since been informed that the young soldier has died of wounds. He is the second son of Mr. C. T. Gibson to give his life for the Empire, his older brother, William, having been killed in the second battle of Ypres, in April, 1915.

Bodies of Jutland Victims Recovered

CHRISTIANIA, Norway, June 30. —The fact that so many bodies of British and German sailors daily are being brought ashore on the southern coast of Norway with lifebelts securely fastened about them suggests that they are victims of the Jutland battle and that the men drifted for many hours before succumbing to cold and exhaustion. The papers therefore are urging that neutral powers be notified after a naval battle so that they may be able to send out boats to search for survivors.

Daily funerals of unidentified German and British men of war's men are attended by great crowds, who strew the graves with flowers.

Parting Gift of Purse of Gold To Rev. Mr. Hinton, of Warsaw

A very successful social under the auspices of the Young Peoples' Bible Class of the Warsaw Methodist Sunday School was held on Monday evening, June 26.

Owing to the near departure of the pastor, Rev. Mr. Hinton a large crowd attended. At the conclusion of the tea all assembled in the body of the church which was filled to its seating capacity and the following interesting programme was rendered.

1. National Anthem.
2. Rev. Mr. Gilchrist.
3. Chairman's address.
4. Solo—Henry Easton
5. Recitation—"Native Born" by five girls.
6. Song—Bessie Bulmer and Willis Darling.
7. Address—Rev. Gilchrist.
8. Solo—Bessie Lonsdale
9. Solo—Miss Hamilton
10. Quartette—Carmel Choir.
11. Solo—Mrs. McMillen.
12. Recitation—John Jenkins' Sermon—Florence Foster.
13. Address—Rev. Mr. Roberts
14.—Song Colours as True, by six girls.
15.—Solo—Norman Puffer.
16. Violin Medley by Mr. Jacob White.
17.—Solo—Mrs. George Taylor.
18.—God be with you till we meet again.

An interesting feature of the programme was the reading of the following address by Mr. Thos. Clements to Rev. M. L. Hinton, accompanied by the presentation of a purse by Mr. Uriah Payne.

Dear Mr. Hinton:—

We your friends and congregation of the community desire to take this opportunity of showing in a small way our love and esteem for you and our appreciation of your work among us as pastor.

For the last three years we have profited by your ministrations and within that period you have greatly endeared yourself to us by your patience, your amiable character, your earnest devotion to duty, and the hearty interest you have ever manifested in our welfare as a people.

In the sacred desk you have faithfully advocated your religion and ours, have wisely warned us against the perils that beset us in our everyday life, and have earnestly endeavoured to elevate and uplift us to a higher plane of life.

In our homes you have been our sincere and sympathizing counsellor and friend. In our hours of pain and sorrow you have spoken gentle and soothing words to our troubled hearts, your benediction has rested upon us in our domestic and business affairs and in all things you have proven yourself our competent and loving pastor.

During your sojourn here we have found you and Mrs. Hinton ever ready to lend a helping hand to one and all and you may be assured that such was not in vain; and though in your work you may have met with many discouragements and may have wished to see greater evidence of good results from your labour, still the desired imprint has been stamped on many lives which time will not efface.

This evening at this, your farewell gathering and previous to your departure from our midst we ask you to accept this purse not for its mere value but as a slight token of the good wishes, and the good will which it conveys.

We know we shall miss you, Mrs. Hinton and the children, but wherever you may be, we pray that God will bless you in your great lifework in the Master's service.

Signed on behalf of the Warsaw Methodist congregation. Thomas Clements. Uriah Payne.

Mr. Hinton was completely taken by surprise but replied in well chosen words which showed his love for his people and his regret in departing from their midst.

Finger nails may be kept clear if before undertaking a piece of dirty work, the nails are drawn across a cake of soap and filled. Afterward corn meal is excellent to use with soap for removing grime from the hands.

To make cold cream melt in a double boiler two drams of white wax, one ounce of spermaceti and 3 1-2 ozs. of oil of sweet almonds. Remove from the fire and add in a thin stream two fluid ounces of rose water and stir constantly until cold. If you can use glycerine with safety add from one-half to one ounce before the mixture sets.

IN MEMORY OF KITCHENER

From all directions out of the streets came men and women sadly to St. Paul's to pay solemn tribute to Lord Kitchener. They came uneasily,—statesmen, diplomats, sailors and men from Kitchener's army. All were filled with a subtle sense of awe and wonder that their leader, in the midst of his work, had been taken from them. There were many women in the silent moving line, wives and mothers, into whose lives the name of Kitchener had come, and as they came, whispering and then quite silent the band of the Royal Engineers played Chopin's 'Funeral March'.

Everywhere there was mourning which was deepened in effect by the brilliant of scarlet uniforms and scarlet robes of the city Aldermen. The music ceased and silence crept through the Cathedral. This was broken by the playing of the "Chanson Triste" which wailed gently and then rose and died again once more to stillness.

With a sense of relief the congregation rose, as the King entered dressed in khaki, with a mourning band upon his sleeve. Through the open doors at the Western end came a great burst of cheering from the crowds outside, breaking in strangely upon the quiet of the congregation. After the King had taken his place, the great organ played the opening notes of the hymn "Abide With Me" and the congregation began to pray.

At the first verse of the psalm "Out of the deep have I called unto Thee, O Lord" a wave of sorrow passed over the assemblage.

"Dominus Regit Me" was sung by the choir and the Antiphon "I am the Resurrection" without accompaniement. The clear human voices seemed to fill the air with a sense of hope and courage.

After the Lesson, the great congregation rose, following the lead of the King, and stood while the band of Lord Kitchener's regiment played the dead march in "Saul". Once again without accompaniment the voices of the choir began, this time, to chant the Liturgy of St. Chrysostom to the setting of Kieff. After the hymn "For all the Saints" and the Benediction by the Archbishop, came a moment of absolute quiet, in which the strident call of the "Last Post echoed through the great spaces of the dome and filled the congregation with a bleak sense of loss.

As it ended it found the congregation transformed, gazing far beyond St. Paul's cathedral into the dying line and into the dreary wastes of sea, gazing into eternity, until with a splendid rolling grandeur the National Anthem summoned them to take up the stern duty of the war.

IMPORTANT MEETING OF DAUGHTERS OF EMPIRE

Miss Saunders of Toronto, Giving An Address Here on Monday Night

The Peter Robinson Chapter of the Daughters of the Empire are arranging a meeting of all those interested in the League of Honour, on Monday night, in the Y.W.C.A., at eight o'clock, to hear Miss Saunders of Toronto.

The League of Honour was formed in England, in September, 1914, for the purpose of uniting all the women and girls of the Empire in upholding the honour of the nation and maintaining the strength of its men by prayer, purity and temperance.

The League is not so much a new society as a movement seeking to work through existing organizations by developing in individuals a sense of their national responsibility, and by calling them to greater sacrifice, to spiritual development, to untiring efficient service and systematic regular training.

In a very real sense the outcome of the war is in the hands of the women, of the Empire!

Our men are out there "somewhere in France" fighting the great battle for right. Are we going to prove worthy of their great sacrifice? Are we going to measure up to the ideal those men have formed of us? Are we going to do our part to make the Canada that is to emerge from the war the country those men hope it will become.

Let us get together and help each other. To the women of Peterborough we give a very sincere invitation to meet Miss Saunders on Monday evening.

For those for whom Monday evening is not convenient there will be a meeting at the home of Mrs. Robert Neill, 300 Hunter Street, at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon.

Agitation And Intrigue In Old Land Politics

dual quality with Englishmen or indeed English women. Nor is political intrigue an art in which they shine, and which they usually love. But intrigue is more rampant today than at any moment since the days of the Stuarts and the first Hanoverian kings. And on top of all is the strange new part which journalism is playing in this grim and world-wide tragedy.

Cabinet Secrets.

To realize what is going on one has but to take up the newspaper any day, and you will find strange and unprecedented things. One of the strangest of these things is that some papers profess to give—and as a matter of fact do give—full reports of the substance at least of the discussion at Cabinet Councils. In one case there was what professed to be the substance of a confidential report by the Army Council—the highest military authority in the country, next of course to the Cabinet. What is perhaps more reasonable is that you find different newspapers, giving according to their colour and to their tendencies, what are pleas by different Ministers in favour of their particular views. And this has led to the almost shocking scandal of these Ministers giving to each other the lie in public and making terrible charges of the violation of the oath of secrecy which is supposed to bind all Cabinet secrets. And finally the climax came when the Government itself had to issue an ordinance that any revelation of the Cabinet discussion would be regarded as a violation of the defence of the Real Act — the most stringent war measure that has ever been adopted in so liberty loving a country as England.

The Secrecy of This.

What is the secret of all this? Of course the first great cause is the absence of any great victories in the field. This is always the fate of a War Ministry, whatever the age, whatever the country. Abraham Lincoln had to pass through criticism as violent, through hours as dark as those which now hurtle around Asquith. The second cause is the uneasy sense that bad blunders have been committed—in Gallipoli, in Mesopotamia, in the diplomacy in the Balkans, which gave Bulgaria to Germany, and Greece and Roumania to neutrality. The third reason is undoubtedly the personality and the power of Lord Northcliffe. And there is a fourth cause intimately associated with this namely—the spirit of the soldiers, especially in the region of the War Office. And fifthly, associated also with the other two, the strong resolve there is in many quarters, especially in high social circles, to plant conscription as a permanent institution in Great Britain.

Brothers Disagree.

The importance of Lord Northcliffe is that he controls so many newspapers, in whole or in part. He is the chief owner of the Times, of the Daily Mail, of the Weekly Dispatch, and a brother, Harold Harmsworth, now Lord Rothermere, has another daily paper or two in Leeds and in Glasgow. I am bound to add the two brothers do not see eye to eye on everything—I believe they are in accord with each other as to their attitude to the war policy of the government. The Times reaches the official and the diplomats as well as social classes, the Daily Mail reaches the man in the street, and the man in the street is against the government, as the poll of nearly eight thousand for Mr. Kennedy Jones in Wimbledon proved, as well as the return of Mr. Pemberton Billing for such a stodgy Tory constituency as East Herts.

In addition to all these there is the tremendous and incessant agitation in high social circles. The Conscriptionists count many important forceful men. They have for instance, Lord Milner, who in spite of his South African record, still exercises great influences, especially in military circles. They have in the War Office itself Captain Amery—a tiny little man scarcely five feet high, but with the energy of a forty horse power dynamo. Captain Amery is in addition an active Parliamentarian and an active journalist. In the House of Commons he may be trusted always to say the bitterest thing—though in private he is quite pleasant. When Asquith was announcing the thrilled and alarmed House of Commons the prospect of a break-up of the Ministry, Captain Amery shouted out a word of insult—and there was a tremendous howl from the Liberals who resented this attack on their leader and on the decorum of a solemn situation. Then, of course, there are ladies great and small, whose violent partisanship for husband or brother or son lend additional vehemence to their always indiscreet tongues; and things are said and then repeated with a virulence that a barbed tongue can give, and of the personal and family venom of allusion which is again one of the weapons and the weakness of a feminine campaign.

Last Fight.

The truth is that great principles are fighting out perhaps one of their last fights, and that this accounts for the fierce and continuous movement of rival forces behind the scenes. On the one side are those who honestly fear the Prussianization of England, and have opposed conscription as the beginning of that disastrous process. They do not fear without reason, for one hears from military circles some wild proposals for dealing with strikers, conscientious objectors and pacifists, which are just in the spirit of Prussianism. On the other side there are zealots conscriptionists who on the one hand are convinced that without conscription it is impossible to win the war as decisively as is necessary; and on the other hands have always held that conscription must come and ought to come. On these conflicting forces, Asquith and Lloyd George have been forced by circumstances into the rival champions.

Thus it is that these two distinguished men are not divided personal antagonism in the least—for personally they have always gotten together—are being ranged against each other by the two contending forces. Mr. Asquith cool, cautious, with a nerve that is rarely lost, who can sleep his eight hours every night after ten minutes over a book—who has a splendid art of managing men, who is acceptable to a large number of Englishmen because he is so essentially English in his characteristics—Mr. Asquith has nearly every Liberal member of the Cabinet with him. Mr. Lloyd George, impulsive, resolute, even obstinate, of reckless courage shrinking at no peril even to his life — as he proved during the terrible South African controversy—is regarded as the man to press things forward. He has been in favour of conscription for years, and announced his views upon it at an early age of the war. He wants universal conscription immediately. Mr. Asquith thinks, that seeing the traditional habits and prejudices of the British people, it is possible to get it only by slow and gradual steps.

Position is Delicate.

The position of the Unionist members of the cabinet between these two policies is rather delicate. On personal grounds most if them are rather more favourable to Asquith than to Lloyd George.

For the moment the divisions have been patched up; but such differences of principle are nearly always accompanied by personal animosities, as an Irish politician who went through the Parnell split can testify and thus the situation remains obscure. And the tragedy of it all is that the spirit of the people in England grows in intensity and ferocity, and never was there a more violent feeling against even a whisper of peace, except a peace on conditions that Germany will never accept till she is thoroughly beaten. I dwell in a sentence on this last act as the controlling one of the whole situation. This minister may go or that; there may be more shuffling, but the people remain steely, determined, irreconcilable, ruthless. Zeppelins and submarines have done their work in producing this temper. It cannot be changed.

THE REPORTS WERE FAKED

LONDON, June [illegible] — The Daily Mail says this morning: "In the House of Commons yesterday, Mr. Ainsworth asked the home secretary if the censor had passed a telegram which appeared in the New York American from the London correspondent of the International News Service, stating that the Admiralty had admitted an overwhelming defeat by a portion of the German high seas fleet. Mr. Samuel replied that the passage in question was not included in any telegram sent from this country, but was composed in the New York office of the International News Service, with the exception of the word 'overwhelming,' which was inserted in the office of the New York American. There were several similar cases at the time of the disturbances in Ireland at the end of April, but the London representative of the agency had now given assurance that no such manipulation of his messages should occur again."

The Times publishes the text of Mr. Samuel's written answer to Mr. Ainsworth. Referring to the Irish cases, he says: "There were seven cases, he says. The several cases at the time of the disturbances in Ireland at the end of April in which messages appearing in the New York American and the New York Journal, which purported to be from the London correspondent of the International News Service, bore no likeness to the cablegrams actually despatched, and in some instances gave information which was the opposite of that which had been sent to the press."

PERMANENT POOR KITCHENS

The Hague, via London, June 29.—The municipality of Brussels has decided to keep open indefinitely the municipal poor kitchens, which in other years were open only during the winter months, closing at the end of March. This year the closing has been postponed month after month under pressure of the needs of the poor people and it has now been finally decided to keep the kitchens open for an indefinite period.

The Vervaerts says the kitchens are crowded as in midwinter, and that there are many complaints regarding the inefficiency of the rations served.

SAY SQUIRRELS MIGHT GET PEACE ADVOCATES

El Paso Mayor Does Not Encourage Coming Meeting.

EL PASO, June 29.—The general attitude of the American border public toward the "peace commission," headed by David Starr Jordan, which is to meet here for the purpose of considering the Mexican situation, is reflected in the statement of Mayor Tom Lea. Mayor Lea said:

"The only suggestion I have to make is that they might hold their meetings in Peace Grove, across the river. I cannot offer them Washington Park, because the squirrels are running loose, and squirrels are unusually fond of nuts."

Must Speak Respectfully of the Police.—"Then I must not call a policeman an ass?" said the motorist who had been fined. "Certainly not," said the Magistrate. "Would you object if I called an ass a policeman?" queried the defendant. "Why should I," was the rejoinder. "If it gives you any satisfaction?" "Good day, policeman," remarked the motorist to the officer as he left the court.

The Third Battle Of Ypres: Canadians Showed Superb Heroism

BRITISH HEADQUARTERS, June 8.—Momentous events have been happening elsewhere in rapid and tragic succession. Public attention has largely been diverted from this sector. Even had the official communiques been less meagre, it would, perhaps, have been hard for the English reader to keep a healthy sense of proportion. Whatever the cause, there is ample reason to believe that the nature, extent, and significance of the late third battle of Ypres are not generally realized.

On Friday, June 2, a crescent-shaped line, extending from the little village of Hooge on the north to Hill 60 on the south, and passing through Sanctuary Wood, a distance roughly of a couple of miles, was held by soldiers from the overseas West. They were ranchers, farmers, and miners, and they were merchants and clerks from Winnipeg, Calgary and Vancouver. Some hailed from Toronto, and others from as far east as Montreal. On their extreme left, where it links up with a British division, was a famous regiment whose deeds have already thrilled the Empire, which, repeatedly shattered, has returned again and again to take up a post of danger on the firing line. Others were the Canadian Mounted Rifles and the Royal Canadian Regiment.

Tragedy-Haunted Ruins.

The two divisions to which these troops belong have been in the trenches for many months, watching, eagerly and ardently, every move of the enemy's game. What that game was every man knew well. It was to push past them and gain that tragedy-haunted grey heap of crumbling masonry which a brief year ago was still called the city of Ypres. This each and every man of them was pledged to defend to the last drop of his life's blood. For weeks there had been a comparative lull; brigades, weary with work and tension, came in and out, as they were relieved or went to relieve. Yet uppermost in every mind was this: "When will the next big push come, and where? Twice the Germans have come on in smashing force to destroy the Ypres salient; two deadly battles have been fought. Am I fated to take part in the third?"

The question whether this battle in Sanctuary Wood was a real battle, an important battle, may be answered here once and for all. If you were to take all the actions along the British front, from the very beginning there is none which illustrates so vividly, so intensely, the whole character of the fighting in this war. It combines the essential features of all, with the exception of poison gas. Brief, compact and murderous, it was by far the greatest ordeal to which the Canadians have yet been subjected. As an exhibition of British steadfastness it is unsurpassed in the war. "Comparable only to Verdun," is the commend to me of a distinguished commander, when the fury of the German bombardment was mentioned.

"Silent Lizzies."

On this brilliant June morning, behind those hostile parapets 300 yards away, the enemy had been massing his artillery—guns of every age, shape and calibre, but chiefly the terrible 5.9, even naval guns, the "Silent Lizzies," mountains of shells, pyramids of bombs. Long rows of German gunners along those two miles of front daily awaited the signal, and the time for the signal had come. General Mercer, ever alert, often astir soon after daybreak, had gone forward to the front trenches at so early an hour as half-past six. He was met by General Victor Williams, commanding the brigade now holding the front trenches. These, in company with the lamented Colonel Shaw, made the inspection.

The soil here is loose and damp and sandy, and only by rigid care and incessant exertion can the trenches be maintained in effectiveness. After breakfast the men were observed to be everywhere in high spirits, and went about their tasks of digging, repairing, rifle-cleaning, and general tidying up with great good humour. General Mercer visited a number of the officers' dug-outs. The day's work had begun well—all were at their appointed posts. Occasionally a sniper's rifle rang out or a bullet whizzed harmlessly overhead. A soldier told me he was watching a flight of birds immediately above him in the clear blue sky when "the thing" happened. He did not see the sky again for hours, and when he did he was on his back being borne on a stretcher to the rear.

It was the lull before the storm. At twenty minutes to nine o'clock, without any warning, hell broke loose. The detonation was stunning, absolutely overwhelming. It did not come from one part, but from the whole length of the opposing line opposite the Canadian Division. It not only deafened the ear and paralyzed the nerves; but instantly the firmament became blackened. For the next few minutes dazed men groped about in the darkness, unable to hear any word of command from their officers, instinctively clutching their rifles and waiting for what was to happen. The two generals, attempting to reach the communication trench, found their retreat cut off. For the first minutes it appears that no shells, or very few, fell into the front trenches, and the machine gunners and trench mortar men held to their posts. But behind our front line a high wall of descending shells, screaming, crashing, exploding, emitting clouds of noxious smoke, seemed to shut off chance of escape.

Moments passed that seemed hours, and then the iron and steel missiles began to rain down and explode in the front line, scattering death and destruction. Nothing could live for long in such a tempest. The sandbags of the trenches began to crumble and fall in. Yet by a miracle our men held on, darting from one devastated section to another in order to gain refuge. A mine exploded, leaving a grim and enormous crater. The communication trench was by this time battered flat. Orders were conveyed to the men to withdraw, and some few hundreds attempted to beat a retreat through the deadly barrage. One, two, three hours passed; not for a moment—not for a single second—did he hideous thunder slacken.

On our own side the sound of our artillery was indistinguishable, but a great volume of British shells pierced that infernal barrage and crashed eastward into the German line. Once, it is related, two shells from opposing sides collided in mid-air with a shriek that actually rose above the tempest. Our gunners worked madly, and it is certain they wrought great havoc among the enemy, but they were severely handicapped by the nature of the ground.

Terrible Moments.

It was now that there took place in the intervening ground, between the enemy's barrage and our own a thousand struggles between brave men palpitating with health and life and hundreds of merciless hidden machines belching forth fragments of insensate metal. For this is modern warfare.

Meanwhile, on our side of the barrage, several battalions of desperate men were watching for a chance to cleave their way through to their comrades in peril. In the intervening territory several gallant men were ministering to the wounded. Stretcher bearers were moving backwards and forwards as though their nerves were of steel. Officers were collecting their men together in places of uncertain refuge. Colonel Shaw, for instance, directed eighty of his men to Cumberland dug-outs—a little shallow square. When it became too hot there, he forced them all out through a gap and told them to get back. He refused to leave his wounded men, and remained there at his post until a shell struck him and he was killed.

Seventy yards from the spot was the dressing station of his battalion. Here another brave officer toiled unceasingly all through that terrible morning, the wounded coming to him, many crawling on hands and knees, by scores. Before the war this R.A.M.C. captain was a jovial ship's surgeon in a steamer plying between Vancouver and Honolulu. He was a man of infinite courage—"nothing ever rattled him or upset his temper," said one survivor to me. When the dressing station was shelled he moved with his assistant, deliberately and coolly, to another on more exposed ground, and continued his humane work to the last.

A certain private hailing from Kamsack, in distant Saskatchewan, was ministering to an officer and three desperately wounded men. He refused to leave them when the lull came and the Germans were seen advancing, although they urged him to do so. "I said I'd stand by you, boys," he said, "and I will." That was the last that was seen of him.

By this time—it was ten minutes to one o'clock—after four hours' steady bombardment — the storm of shell ceased as suddenly as it had begun. Forthright from the opposite trenches sprang a swarm of grey-coated Huns. Fully accoutred, and with overcoats and full packs, they advanced on the run, yelling wildly. They must have been firmly convinced that amid those rugged, battered, seared, and bloody wounds and ditches, which four hours before had been the British trenches, not one single human soul had escaped.

Of those advancing hordes certainly few were in proper fighting trim. They came forward gaily, light-heartedly, as victors after a victory. It was then the most wonderful thing happened. Out of the earth there sprang up a handful of wild-eyed soldiers, two officers among them, muddied and reeking with sweat, and, running forward with upraised rifles and pistols, they bade defiance to the oncoming foe. On they ran, and, having discharged their weapons, flung them in the very faces of the Huns. Death was inevitable for these—the only remaining occupants of the British front line—and it was better to die thus, breathing defiance to the enemy, than be shot in a ditch and spitted through with a Hun bayonet.

The "Princess Pats."

Only the wounded or those suffering from shell-shock fell into the hands of the enemy, and among these were General Williams and Colonel Usher, both of whom were in a communication trench. A Toronto officer, himself in the very thick of the fight and who performed wonders of valour, mentions that he had last seen General Mercer sitting dazed and deafened on the ground just as the shell fire ceased and the Germans were advancing. General Williams was slightly wounded in the face.

The cessation of fire was the signal for the Canadian supports to hasten forward to meet the enemy, who was now advancing in force and bringing up his machine gunners and bombers. The battalion holding Maple Copse planted itself firm, and refused to budge, and, having dug itself in, still holds that position. Its commander, Colonel Baker, was unhappily hit by a shell in the lungs, and died later in the day. The Princess Patricias, holding Hooge, fought with all their accustomed gallantry, led by the brave Colonel Buller, and helped, although at great cost, to check the further German advance. Colonel Buller met his death in the most heroic fashion, and the second in command, Major Hamilton Gault, was wounded in two places, but it is hoped not seriously.

It would be impossible within these limits to recount even a tithe of the outstanding deeds of heroism of that day's battle, which waged without cessation until nine at night. I could relate many. One striking story there is of a parson from Medicine Hat, on the Bow River. At the outbreak of war he flung aside his surplice and enlisted as a private. He came to England with his battalion, where his talent for ministration and good works could not be concealed, and he was promptly, when a vacancy occurred, appointed chaplain.

With Bare Fists.

When the battalion arrived in France he felt it his duty to strike a blow of a sterner sort for his country, and returned to the combatant ranks. He, on this day in Sanctuary Wood, wielded a rifle with accuracy and effect as long as his ammunition lasted, and then went after the Germans with a bayonet. After one particularly fierce thrust the weapon broke. Whereupon this officer bared his arms and flew at one beauvy Boche with his fists, and the last seen of him he was lying prone and overpowered.

The outstanding feature of the day is, however, not the numerous traits of individual valour. It is the marvellous discipline and cohesion of the officers, non-commissioned officers, and men, which I find evoke most praise from the survivors. When one was struck down and unable to give orders, another took his place automatically, and was obeyed implicitly and instantly.

In most of the battalions the losses have been very severe. But the morale of all ranks was unimpaired, and the men, who had been through an experience which might well weaken the purpose of the strongest and stoutest, were fit and ready at dawn on the morrow to undertake a counter attack, the tale of which I must leave to be told.

Peterborough Defeated Norwood Tennis Men

There was considerable good tennis displayed at the Brookside lawn yesterday afternoon, when the Peterborough and Norwood Clubs met in friendly competition. In the singles F. C. Weber defeated Dr. Sutton of Norwood by 6—0 and 6—2. L. Waters of Peterborough trimmed his brother, K. Waters of Norwood by 6—1 and 6—4.

D. R. Munro of Peterborough defeated C. I. Puffer of Norwood by 6—0 and 6—3.

Mr. Grover of Norwood won from Dr. Weldon of Peterborough by 5—7, 6—2 and 6—2.

The doubles provided closer contests, as follows:

F. C. Weber and Hermie Nicoll of Peterborough defeated Dr. Dutton and Tom E. Finlay by 6—2, and 6—3.

D. R. Munro and L. Waters of Peterborough defeated Charlie Puffer and K. Waters of Norwood with the following scores: 6—2, 7—9, and 8—6.

The Norwood party included a number of ladies, and after the above games, tea was served by the ladies of the local club, and a very pleasant hour was spent, followed by ladies' doubles and mixed doubles.

The gentlemen of the Peterborough Association are very grateful to the ladies who so ably assisted them in entertaining the visitors.

WOULD ASK FOR $10,000,000

TO BE SPENT ON TECHNICAL EDUCATION IN TEN YEARS.

TORONTO, June 29.—James L. Hughes, LL.D., Thomas Bengough, and R. D. Fairbairn, formed a deputation from the Ontario Association for the Promotion of Technical Education, which waited on Premier Hearst and the Hon. Dr. Payne, Minister of Education, this morning. They asked that the Ontario Government lead the governments of the other provinces in a united request to the Dominion Government that the same grant be made for technical education as for agricultural education.

The deputation did not desire the money provided at present, but thought that the Dominion Government's promise should be secured so that the money would be forthcoming after the war. The speakers dealt entirely with after-the-war conditions, pointing out the absolute necessity of greater progress in providing technical education for the people of the whole Dominion. It was mentioned that the grant to the provinces for agricultural education was $10,000,000, spread over a period of ten years, and that a like grant should be made for technical education, making a total expenditure of all the provinces of two million dollars per year.

Premier Hearst and the Hon. Dr Pyne promised that they would consider the best manner of meeting the objects which the deputation had in view, and when the proper time came they would take whatever action was necessary.

Red Mill Announcement
On Monday, July 3rd the "RED MILL" goes on the "WORLD" Circuit. This company is at present supplying Canada with the celebrated "BRADY" Features, extensively advertised in the Saturday Evening Post and Ladies' Home Journal; such noted actors and actresses as Lillian Russell, Clara Kimball Young, and Lew Fields appear in their films. Such quality service comes expensive, but our prices will still be at the old Popular Rates—Adults 10c, Children 5c. Special Matinees afternoons for Ladies and Children. As our theatre is small, we felt that a two-days' run would be too short a time to give all interested in better Motion Pictures sufficient opportunity to view these superior "WORLD" features, so we have contracted to have each picture on view for Three Days. We open with "THE CUB," a film based on the adventures of a young Newspaper Reporter in the feud-infected mountainous regions of Kentucky.

It is ten years since Mr. Carver visited Peterborough and while here noticed a marked improvement in the growth of the city. It is 31 years ago that he left his home town and went to California and he has only returned twice in that time. He is engaged in the fruit business near Fresno, having sixty acres in grapes.

WEDDING BELLS

CURTIN—BYRNE.

At St. Peter's Cathedral yesterday morning the wedding was solemnized of Robert Curtin of Peterborough, to Miss Clara Byrne, also of this city. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Phelan. Mr. and Mrs. Curtin will reside in Peterborough.

GARDINER—STEWART.

A pretty wedding was solemnized on Wednesday afternoon at St. Luke's Church when Miss Isabel Maud Stewart of 306 Mark street, was united in marriage to Mr. Bruce Gardiner of Driscoll Terrace, Ashburnham. The bride who was given away by her brother-in-law, Mr. F. E. Joyes, looked charming in a beautiful gown of white crepe silk with veil and bridal wreath. She carried a bouquet of white roses. Miss Elizabeth Manlece was bridesmaid, wearing a dress of pale blue crepe and large picture hat, and carried a bouquet of pink roses. Miss Maudie Joyes, dressed in white and carrying a basket of white daisies, acted as ring bearer. Mr. H. T. Stewart, brother of the bride, was groomsman. The church was decorated by the choir girls with white daisies and ferns which added to the beauty of the service. Rev. Mr. White, rector of St. Luke's, officiated, Mrs. W. A. Greenslade played the wedding march with the choir in attendance, and Miss Perrin sang in splendid voice, "O Promise Me." Luncheon was served at the bride's home following the church service. Mr. and Mrs. Gardiner left for their honeymoon in Uxbridge and other parts, the bride wearing a travelling suit of blue taffeta with white trimmings and hat to match. On their return they will reside at 68 Sophia street, Ashburnham. The groom's gift to the best man was a pair of initialled gold cuff links, to the bridesmaid a pearl crescent brooch, and to Mrs. Greenslade a silver mesh bag. Little Miss Maudie Joyes presented Mrs. Perrin with a lovely bouquet of roses and carnations. The bride received many beautiful presents, including a cut glass bowl from St. Luke's Choir.

OBITUARY

JAMES FLAHERTY.

At the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Michael Murphy, 64 Aberdeen avenue, this afternoon at 1.30 o'clock, James Flaherty passed away in his 80th year. He was born in Emily township and had passed his entire lifetime there until two months ago, when he moved to Peterborough. The deceased had been ill about six months. His wife predeceased him eighteen months ago. The children are Mrs. M. Murphy and Mrs. J. Sullivan of Bow Island, Alta., and John, Martin and Edward of Peterborough, Michael of Lindsay and Mrs. of Minneapolis. The funeral will take place on Sunday afternoon from Mrs. Murphy's residence to St. Peter's Cathedral and thence to St. Peter's Cemetery, Embalmers.

Villiers Red Cross Social Fine Success

Eighy-five dollars was the amount realized last night by the Red Cross Society of Villiers at their annual garden party and concert. There was the usual large attendance and a very pleasant evening was enjoyed by the visitors. The supper with strawberries and cream as the extra special item on the fare bill was as appetizing and as daintily served as ever. The ladies were untiring in a work that was performed without ostentation or publicity, but which doubtless brought them real satisfaction. Villiers ladies have been busy since the war began, making comforts of all kinds for the soldiers. And they are the first to pay tribute to the assistance and example of Miss Estelle Cuffe, principal of Villiers school, who is severing her connections with the school at the end of the present term. Miss Cuee has been an inspiration to many and her efforts have been most fruitful. It is only fair to add that she found in the ladies of Villiers sympathetic and earnest assistants.

Mr. Geo. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., was chairman last night and it has come to this, that a Villiers social would be lost without the presence and the interest of Mr. Gillespie. Rev. Mr. McEachern spoke briefly last night and was followed by Mr. Joseph Wearing, who delivered a stirring patriotic speech with appeal not only to the young men, but also to their parents and to the ladies, asking the co-operation of every person who can be of any aid to the Empire, that all the resources of the country may be mobilized for the present task.

Dr. Harrison of Keene was unable to attend this year's social.

WAS EXONERATED

NEW YORK, June 28.—John Ellis Roosevelt was entirely exonerated from the accusations brought against him by his wife, Mrs. Edith H. Roosevelt, who sought a separation before Justice Clark in the Supreme Court. The Justice finds that Mr. Roosevelt did not attempt to choke his wife either at Naples, Italy, or at the Savoy, in London, while they were on their wedding journey, March 1, 1914. Mr. Roosevelt is a cousin of Theodore Roosevelt.

Mrs. Roosevelt said that her husband used abusive language in referring to her in October, 1915, but the Justice finds that he did not. They lived peacefully together before the action was begun and that it is not unsafe for the wife to continue living with her husband, although she has said she is afraid to do so. Recently Mr. Roosevelt lost an action to annul his marriage. Her separation action is now dismissed.

Although Justice Clark made no provision for the support of Mrs. Roosevelt in the future, Mr. C. Walter Randall, counsel for the husband, said that a suitable provision for her would be made by her husband out of court. The exact amount has not been determined upon, but it is said it will be satisfactory.

Steamer Otonabee Smashes Into An Open Swing Bridge

The Otonabee of the Lake Simcoe Navigation Co's line, is docked here waiting repairs, after colliding with a bridge on the Trent Canal last fall, by which severe damage was done. The vessel it appears had been impounded awaiting the result of the suit instituted by the Lake Simcoe Navigation Co. This was a suit for damages. On July 6th of last year Mr. Freeland, who was a bridge tender at Balsover on the Trent Canal, received serious injuries when the Otonabee struck the bridge on which he was standing. He had turned the bridge at right angles to its usual position in order to allow the steamer to pass. He stood by the lever holding it, expecting the vessel to pass through on the south side. Instead the Otonabee struck the bridge, on the east end, damaging the bridge and swinging round, with the result that the tender, Mr. Freeland, was roughly handled. Mr. Freeland was knocked violently, sustained a fractured [illegible] in addition to other injuries. Mr. McCullough, McCullough & Butler, the plaintiff's solicitors, contended that the vessel running faster than the speed limit, and that it was owing to negligence on the defendant that the accident resulted. Mr. McCullough called Holloway, Woodville, who held an inquest on the injuries received by Mr. Freeland. Proceedings to the accident, he had always considered Mr. Freeland a smart man. He did not think he would ever again be capable of working. The jury found for the plaintiff, assessing damages at $7,000.—Brighton Empress.

A SPLENDID AD.

One of the most striking billboard ads. that has ever been shown in Peterborough, is on show at The Banks Garge on Charlotte St.

The original drawing is by the well known poster artist Cole Phillipps, who designs most of the large double page posters, for the OVERLAND CO., that appear from week to week in The Saturday Evening Post, The Ladies' Home Journal, and other publications.

This particular drawing appeared in last week's copy of The Ladies' Home Journal, and appealed to Mr. Banks as worthy of reproducing.

In conversation with Mr. Reg. Turner, it was learned that this could be done by J. J. Turner & Sons, and the result of their work, can be seen at the Banks Garage.

The best time to see this painting, is in the evening.

10,000 Germans Captured by Allied Offensive on West Front

MAIN GERMAN COMMUNICATION RAILWAY THREATENED

British and French Troops Take Twelve Villages in the Greatest Drive Since the Marne

Advance Has Already Covered Fifty Square Miles and Allied Armies Working in Complete Harmony are Steadily Pushing Back the Enemy, in Some Places Having Penetrated Deep Into Second Line of Defence.

Examiner Special:

LONDON, July 3.—Results of the Allied drive up till midnight.

PRISONERS CAPTURED.

By the French—6,000.
By the British—3,500.

VILLAGES CAPTURED.

By the French—6.
By the British 6.

TERRAIN CAPTURED.

Fifty square miles.

British and French troops are consolidating the positions captured on Saturday and Sunday, and are continuing to advance in spite of desperate resistance by the enemy. Counter attacks against the French at Hardecourt were easily repulsed with heavy loss to the enemy. Four of the captured towns are only seven miles west of Peronne on the chief German railway, and this town now is threatened. British aeroplanes brought down scores of enemy aircraft.

ITALIAN DRIVE CONTINUES.

ROME, July 2.—Italians continue offensive, driving Austrians from positions betwen Selz and Montfalcone in Trentino.

Offensive Was Preceded By a Week's Shelling

Prisoners Say Curtains of Fire Cut off Their Supplies for Five Days Previous to Advance

CASUALTIES COMPARATIVELY LIGHT

LONDON, July 2.—The tremendous British offensive was launched at half-past seven yesterday morning, over a front extending 70 miles north of the Somme. The assault was preceded by a terrific bombardment. The British troops already have occupied the German front line and have captured many prisoners.

The terrific bombardment which preceded the attack lasted about an hour and a half. It is too early as yet to give any but the barest particulars of the fighting, which is developing in intensity. The British casualties have so far been comparatively light, according to official report.

At 7.30 o'clock, through clouds of smoke and dust, which hung over the whole field as far as the eye could see, the infantry sprang from the trenches for an assault over a front of 20 miles. Already it has gained possession of the first line trenches, and the advance is continuing.

MORTARS EFFECTIVE.

The new British trench mortars, which fire 35 shots a minute, played a great part, cutting wire entanglements and destroying trenches.

Some of the prisoners say the British curtains of fire prevented them from getting food for the last five days.

A British staff officer who witnessed the advance at the junction of the French and British lines, said the attack was launched as though the men were on parade.

Simultaneously with the launching of the British offensive, French infantry advanced to the attack. This movement of French troops was inaugurated over a section of the French line adjoining the junction point with the British front.

WAS BULGE IN LINE.

The sector of the German front on which the British have assumed the offensive, forms a considerable bulge in the British line. The southern end rests on the Somme, which is a formidable river in military operations, because it breaks into many channels flowing through a broad marsh, which, at places has not been surveyed.

It is a broad rolling country over which the British are pushing, all together different from the flat marshy and bleak aspects of Flanders. Its rounded chalk lines are densely wooded.

At many points on this section of the British front it is possible to see the trenches of the Germans, winding about the opposite slopes.

A military expert, writing of the offensive, says:

"It is safe to say the Germans never expected a great attack in this country. We may hope, therefore, for a reduction of the German salient there, and the securing of better strategic positions. Far more important than that, it is certain that this attack will be very destructive to the morale of the German troops. The official messages say 'their army' has attacked. But what must be borne in mind now is the much greater length of front the British hold. We attacked on about one quarter of the length of our front."

PRECEDED BY WEEK'S BOMBARDMENT.

The offensive was preceded by a bombardment of a week, compared with the bombardment of 31 days before the advance at Loos last September. The shorter duration of the artillery preparation, however, was more than made up for by its intensity.

The terrible effect of the British fire was described from day to day by correspondents, all of whom agreed that nothing to equal it ever had occurred before on the British front. The curtain of fire was so effective that the Germans were unable to send food to the front line. Men in these trenches were starving for three days.

The nightly raids on German trenches accounted for many of the defenders of these positions and also enabled the British to observe the effect of the artillery fire during the preceding day, and thus return with much valuable information. The number of prisoners taken in these raids has not been disclosed, but the correspondents have been permitted to say that men were captured from every battalion in the German lines opposite the British forces. The information thus obtained shows that not a single German regiment has been removed from this front.

The number of Germans opposite the British front and in reserve behind the lines was estimated a month ago at 800,000.

Bridgenorth Teacher Given Wrist Watch

Closing Exercises of School—Say Good By.

On Wednesday evening, June 28th, the pupils of the school and the young people of the section assembled in the school to bid farewell to heir popular young school teacher, Mr. Leo Copp.

After a splendid programme was rendered. Rev. Mr. McKee, acting as chairman, Mr. Copp was called to the platform. Miss Jean Kelly read the address, and Miss Fern Telford presented him with a handsome wrist watch.

Mr. Copp thanked the young people and the pupils and expressed his regret at leaving them so soon. Refreshments were served and the evening came to a close by the singing of God Save the King.

FIRST SUCCESS OF ALLIED DRIVE ON WEST FRONT

British Plunged Forward on Twenty-Mile Front in Some Places Piercing German Lines to Depth of Five Miles.

FRENCH CO-OPERATING

LONDON, July 1.—The great British offensive which was launched at 7.30 this morning, continues with unabated success, according to the latest reports from the field headquarters. The French are also making equally satisfactory progress.

British troops have captured the village of Mametz, six miles east of Albert. The number of prisoners taken by the British in this region is placed at 1,500.

Reports received up to 12.30 o'clock, five hours after the combined French and British offensive was launched, showed that the allies had captured the towns of La Boiselle, Serre, and Montauban, and Curlu and Favlere woods. The main first line trenches over the entire front under attack are reported to have been stormed, and at various points the fighting has reached the main second line.

Allies Penetrate More Than Five Miles.

These reports show that the French and British at the points of their furthest advances, have broken through a distance of more than five miles beyond the first German trenches. Montauban is 5 1-8 miles east of the old British front, and Curlu Wood is 5 miles east-south-east of Albert. Serre is 14 miles south-west of Arras.

The British are endeavouring to surround Thiepval, and at other points an intense struggle is under way for towns and villages. Reports from the front indicate that the important position at Fricourt may be cut off.

The French, co-operating to the south, who captured Curlu and Favlere Woods, have taken all the main first line trenches.

Main Second Hun Trench Line Reached.

At some points the operations have now reached the main second line, an advance of one and a fifth miles;

French Hold German Second Line Defenses on 3-Mile Front

Brilliant Attacks by French Battalions South of the Somme River—No German Attacks Last Night on Newly Gained Positions.

Examiner Special:

PARIS (French Official), July 3.—French troops, in heavy fighting last night, captured on a three-mile front, Germany's second line of trenches between Mireaucourt Wood and Assevillers, the War Office announced today. The new gain is on the south bank of the Somme. Between these two points, during the course of a most brilliant encounter, the French carried Herbecourt village, five and one-half miles west of Peronne. The advance was made on about a three-mile front. The French swept forward from Mireaucourt Wood near the River Somme, to a point west of the village of Assevillers. The combats south of the Somme were entirely favourable to the French, the War Office stated to-day.

During Sunday evening and Sunday night the French occupied on a five-kilometres front the two second position German trenches between Mireaucourt Wood and up to Assevillers. Between these two points during the course of a brilliant encounter the French carried Herbecourt village, toward Awre, in the region of Dancourt. The desloges Wood was cleaned of the enemy by the French grenade reconnaissances. North of the Somme, there were no German attacks during the night on our newly gained positions.

LONDON, July 3.—Under a blazing July Sun, the Allied armies are pushing on across the roling farmlands of the Somme region region to-day, in what is rapidly developing into the greatest battle in the history of the world. The fighting is not only growing more intense with the arrival of German reserves, but threatens to spread along the whole of the 110-mile front from the Somme to the sea.

MIGHTY SYMPHONY OF BRITISH ARTILLERY.

British artillery has been pounding the German line in Flanders with the most intense fire for forty-eight hours, said a Rotterdam despatch today. The sound of the ships' guns has been heard along the Flanders coast; supposedly British monitors have joined in the mighty symphony of artillery whose rumble may be heard across the Channel in London.

THRUSTING AT IMPORTANT RAILWAY.

Berlin despatches to the United Press Saturday night expressed the belief that the British will deliver their most powerful stroke further north in Flanders. The fighting on the 25-mile front over which the British and French armies are driving eastward toward the "Peronne-Cambrai-Lille" railway is causing huge losses in men. No estimate of the British or French losses have reached London, but the German losses in the first thirty-six hours are said to have exceeded 20,000 men. In the village of Dompierre alone 1,500 German dead were counted after three French regiments had fought their way in with bayonets and bombs.

GERMAN COUNTER STROKES MORE VIGOROUS.

The first thrust deep into the German lines has now resolved itself into a steady rolling movement, with Bapaume and Peronne apparently the immediate objectives. The German counter attacks are hourly growing more vigorous and have checked and bent back the British left which advanced rapidly into the village of Serre when the offensive opened Saturday morning east of Albert. Where the extreme British right links up with the French left the bloodiest struggle is going on.

BRITISH SUCCESS IN EAST AFRICA.

LONDON, July 2.—British troops in German East Africa have taken the important town of Ubena with many prisoners and supplies.

GERMAN COUNTER STROKES REPULSED.

BRITISH HEADQUARTERS, France, July 2.—No change in the situation during the night on the British front. The large German garrison in Fricourt is now practically surrounded. German counter attacks on villages won by British yesterday, were repulsed.

SEVEN THOUSAND GERMANS CAPTURED.

PARIS, July 2.—French have again taken Thiaumont works and tre pursuing a vigorous offensive in the Verdun districts. The vilages of Dompierre, Becquincourt, Busau and Fay were captured. A total of seven thousand German prisoners were taken yesterday by the British and French. Several minor assaults last night, but major offensive by the Allies began again to-day at dawn. Allied guns have moved forward into new positions and have commenced shelling enemy in their new defenses.

BRITISH HAVE TAKEN FRICOURT,

LONDON, July 2.—Fricourt, important fortified town three miles east of Albert, was captured by the British this morning with eight hundred more prisoners.

GERMANS ADMIT LOSS OF TRENCHES.

LONDON, July 2.—German official statement issued to-day admits having lost all the front line trenches and considerable ground in Allied offensive.

A semi-official statement, revealing for the first time the exact scene of operations, shows that the Anglo-French advance reached its greatest depth along a thirteen mile front extending from a point north of Albert to a point south-east of that village. The Anglo-French forces are driving eastward in the general direction of Cambrai. The semi-official announcement indicates that the advances already extend beyond the capture of German forward trenches announced in an earlier statement from the War Office.

Promises Complete Demobilization of Army By End of July.

ATHENS, July 1.—The National Bank of Greece has authorized an increase in its paper currency of 60,000,000 drachmae, without further gold cover than exists at present. The Government has again yielded to the demands of the allies, and has agreed that the complete demobilization of the army will be effected by the end of July.

BRITISH BOMBED STATION AT LILLE

British Headquarters, France, July 1.—Announcement was made to-night that a fleet of British aeroplanes had bombarded the railway station at Lille. Returning, the fleet was attacked by twenty Fokker biplanes, but the British aviators succeeded in bringing down two of their German persuers and arrived safely back within the lines.

CIVILIANS ORDERED OUT OF FRENCH CITIES

PARIS, July 3.—Mr. Aristide Briand, French Premier, has sent a protest to the neutral powers against the action of the German military authorities in ordering the evacuation by civilians of the towns of Lille, Roubaix and Tourvoying, according to the Petit Journal. The protest is on the ground that the order is contrary to The Hague Convention.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

On Washington's Errand and His Own

By ETHEL HOLMES

One visiting the town of Dobbs Ferry, on the east bank of the Hudson and some twenty miles from New York, will find himself in a place that has been called by its present name for so long that no one, except perhaps some of the present residents, knows the date. Doubtless Mr. Dobbs ran a ferry there to some point across the Hudson. He has passed away long ago, but his name remains.

There is another name connected with Dobbs Ferry of far more importance—that is, George Washington. One mounting the declivity leading up from the railway station and following the road leading southward will pass a frame house before which runs a wall to which is attached a tablet stating that it was the headquarters of General Washington during the Revolutionary war.

One day a country lad named Enoch Weatherby, who was a member of the Revolutionary army and had not seen his best girl in New York city for some time, got leave to go there for the purpose of meeting her. Being a patriotic youth, he went to General Washington and, telling him what he was about to do, asked the general if he could be of any service to him in bringing information of the British army, which was at that time in possession of the city.

The general told Enoch that he very much desired to know how many troops were there, how many cannon and whether any preparations were being made for a movement. Enoch promised to gain what information he could.

That night the youngster put a load of farm produce in his boat on the river and the next morning started with the outgoing tide for New York. On reaching Spuyten Duyvil creek he turned into it and when he arrived at Kingsbridge, leaving his boat under the bridge, proceeded on foot to the city, some nine or ten miles away. There was a British soldier at the bridge, but Enoch, being loaded with produce, was suffered to pass, and whenever he was stopped on the way a few eggs or a pound of butter was sufficient to pass him.

New York was then all at the southern end of the island, and Enoch's girl, Becky Bleecker, lived at the lower end of Greenwich street, near where it joins the Battery. He found Becky, and she was delighted to see him, for there was little communication between the American troops in the region beyond Spuyten Duyvil creek and the city. Enoch while in New York was continually going about, counting the guns he saw and estimating the number of the soldiers.

One day he made bold to sketch a redoubt in the region that is now Central park and was observed doing so by a sentry. The soldier called the corporal of the guard and to him sent a message to the commanding officer that a man had been seen sketching the works. By this time Enoch had left, and a couple of men were sent to bring him back. Enoch soon discovered that he was being pursued, and, though the men most of the time kept him in sight, he succeeded in reaching Becky Bleecker's home without being arrested.

Becky put him into the great hall clock, he handing her the memoranda he had accumulated, giving her a kiss at the same time, and she had no sooner taken them than there was a loud rap at the door. She opened it, and two redcoats entered, inquiring for the young fellow who had just come in. Becky declared that they must be mistaken, but the soldiers, having seen him close the door behind him, searched the house. Not thinking to look in the clock, they did not find him. But one man stationed himself at the front of the house, the other at the rear, and Enoch was pinned in.

After they had gone outside Becky returned to Enoch, and he bemoaned the fact that he would not be permitted to take his notes to General Washington. Becky was in terror lest the information he proposed to take away should be captured on him and cause his conviction as a spy. Something must be done before any one came from General Howe and while there were only green soldiers on guard.

Becky resolved to walk out with Enoch's notes and drawings in face of the sentinel at the front door. She did so, and the man essayed to stop her, but she gave him a scornful look and proceeded. She had scarcely got out of sight before a member of the staff came with a sergeant and eight men and gave orders that no one should be permitted to leave the house. Enoch had heard the door shut after Becky and thought it best to come out of hiding. But, since there was nothing found to indicate that he was a spy, after being held for some time he was suffered to go his way.

Meanwhile Becky, presuming that her lover would not be permitted to go back to General Washington, made her way to Kingsbridge, where she found Enoch's boat and pulled herself up to Dobbs Ferry. Mounting the hill to the house where Washington was quartered, she told him the story of Enoch's and her adventures and handed him the memoranda Enoch had collected.

"When Enoch Weatherby returns, if he does," said the general, "come together to see me."

Enoch returned sooner than was expected, and when the lovers called on the general he directed his chaplain to marry them and bestowed upon them a handsome wedding present.

WHERE ENEMY LINES ARE 2 FEET APART

A Visit to Zagora, on the Italian Front; the Strangest Battleground

AT ONE PLACE ONLY A WALL SEPARATES FORCES—SILENCE MORE TERRIBLE THAN BURSTING SHELLS IN THE OPEN.

Headquarters of the Italian Army, June 3rd.—Zagora, which is a little mountain hamlet that was buried in oblivion before the war, is famous today as the only point on the Austro-Italian front, and perhaps on any army front, where the enemy trench lines actually run into one another. For 400 miles on this front the Austrian and Italian trenches run parallel, being often as close as 30 to 50 yards, but at Zagora they slide into each other, and then slide away again uphill and down dale, following the general trend of the Isonzo River, which empties into the Adriatic Sea far above Venice.

The situation at Zagora illustrates the difficult and curious character of the warfare on this front, where there are probably not anywhere opposing lines of trenches crossing so much as a single acre of flat land, for there is no flat land except on a mountain top.

"You must see Zagora, they're always fighting there, playing little tricks on each other," said a division staff officer to a correspondent of the Associated Press. He then took down a photographic map and showed two lines of trenches running for miles along the mountain sides. "The upper is the Austrians, and the lower is ours," he explained. "Note that at Zagora the two lines run together."

It was decided that the best time to see Zagora was in the early morning when the actual firing was desultory. Many miles of walking before daylight, over a pontoon bridge spanning the Isonzo River, and up a mountain side protected from artillery shells by tunnels, brought the party to the headquarters of the officer in command of the hill forces. The commander conducted his visitors still further up the mountain toward Zagora, already visible as a heap of ruins of what had been the peaceful homes of peasants. The visitors went up at an angle of sixty degrees, in the shelter of old trenches that once had been the front lines. At every turn there were visible little plots of wooden crosses where Italian or Austrian soldiers had fallen during the terrific fighting carried on by the Italians to gain their way up the face of the mountain.

"It has been like a sword duel between us all the time," said the commander, "with little artillery fire because either side using guns would in view of the closeness of the opposing trenches kill both friends and enemy.

"It's wonderful the way the soldiers have kept up their spirits here. "For a whole month last fall when the mountain was a mass of wet rock and mud, when it was possible to get food up only at night, when the men could not be relieved, when to strike a match meant death from a sniper, when our trenches were but hastily constructed piles of stones left by the Austrians as we pushed them foot by foot toward the mountain top, the men held on with amazing cheerfulness. Not even the wounded complained. The death struggle developed the best qualities of our men. Even the Socialists among them, whose principles do not include fighting, became some of our best soldiers."

As the visitors came full upon the shattered blackened stone walls of the hamlet of Zagora, the commander advised: "Stoop low, now, and run very quietly. When you reach our front line, don't talk, don't even whisper. Austrians will hear you and begin an attack thinking we ourselves are about to begin one."

The party halted near the walls of what had once been a huge country kitchen, built under the lower side of a house, facing toward the mountain top. Within stood men against the wall with rifles in their hands peeping out of little apertures. On the other side of this wall, not two feet away, stood silent enemy watchers, always ready to fire. The place might have been a tomb, so silent were its occupants. The only sound came from the floor where men were sleeping with their faces covered with blankets to deaden their snores.

This place of Zagora, with its silence fraught with expectant danger, was more impressive than any open field filled with the shriek of bursting shells. The party crept from the silent corner through dark tunnelled ways and zigzagged about other ruined foundation walls, where other soldiers stood, and on, down a line, until the Austrian trenches could be seen through a maze of barbed wire defences.

An officer pointed to the barbed wire and said: "We are on such intimate relations with the Austrians that we and they use the same barbed wire protection. There isn't room to plant any more and their wires prevent them from getting at us as well as keeping us from getting at them." John, with a dulled expression, he pointed to the bodies of soldiers lying in the open space, caught in the wires, fruits of attacks and counter attacks. "The Austrians won't let us pick up the dead, so there they lie," he explained. "They play the mitrailleuse there until they die. Sometimes it takes a long time. This morning a man died who had been there for three days with a fractured leg. At least he doesn't move any more, so he must be dead."

Avoid waste of Fuel

Straight Walls Firepot of Sunshine

Slanting Walls Firepot gathers ashes and decreases radiating surface

Unless you KNOW positively that a cheaper furnace will heat your home without waste of fuel, there is small satisfaction in saving a few dollars on its purchase. The Sunshine Furnace saves coal because it is well made and because every part has been carefully thought out.

LOOK IT OVER. Any one can see that the greatest heating factor in a furnace is the fire-pot; that a pot with straight walls like the Sunshine fire-pot will give off more heat than one that must often have an outer lining of ashes.

Doors and dampers that are tightly fitted will certainly hold the fire longer than those that are loosely fitted. The wider air passages and larger radiating surfaces of the Sunshine must heat the air much more readily. These Sunshine Furnace features are coal-savers that mean much in mid-winter.

If you are looking for economical heating, you must see clearly that it will take a good modern, well-made furnace to supply it. You will naturally think well then of

McClary's Sunshine Furnace

Saving coal interests you, of course. Then you will want a copy of our booklet. Send the coupon to-day for a copy. If you want information about the cost of heating your home, we will let you have it promptly and without charge. If you will write to our Heating Engineer, he will show you how to plan your heat distribution so as to get the utmost warmth with the least expenditure. Write him, giving the size and number of rooms in your home—a floor plan of the upstairs and downstairs—and he will give you the probable cost of putting in a system that will give you the heat you want where you want it. Fill in and send the coupon direct to the factory.

Kindly send me without expense on my part —

1. Your booklet on the Sunshine Furnace.
2. Also, forms for filling out, so that your heating engineers can tell me how to order and install a system that will properly heat my home.

COLOURED RATS TO WAGE WAR ON DISEASES

If you should happen to see a red, green, yellow, blue or pink rat scurry across your cellar or attic floor, don't be surprised, says the Toledo Daily Blade. Don't rub your eyes or pinch yourself to see if it is a dream. Such a sight does not necessarily mean that there is something wrong with you, because there are a number of these colored rodents now running around parts of the United States.

The United States government, feeling perhaps that it was high time that its citizens knew the full extent of the rat danger has hired several scientific experts to give them an object lesson. The experts painted a number of rats for identification purposes and set them free in various parts of the country, just to show how far a rat will travel and carry disease.

One big fact that has already been learned about rats, and that is most important to the average citizen, is that rats are attracted by the shining of phosphorus in the dark, and that this is why they have the habit of gnawing matches. Thousands of destructive fires are said to have been caused in this way.

As a carrier of diseases of the most deadly nature the rat is classed among man's most dangerous enemies. Some of the larger cities are spending thousands of dollars to exterminate the rat and the results are easily seen in the decrease in deaths from contagious diseases.

The rat is also an expensive boarder to maintain, as it has been definitely shown that single rat cannot exist under at least one cent a day. That means that every rat on your premises is costing you a cent every day. This does not include damages to buildings, furniture, etc.

Many solutions of the rat question have already been suggested but perhaps the best and the most effective manner of getting rid of the pest is by poison.

Killing rats has been reduced to an exact science. Rat poisons in the form of powders are claimed to be almost as dangerous as the rats themselves, as the slightest draft may waft the poison through the rooms and allow it to settle on the food.

Perhaps the best method of administering poison to rats is in the form of a paste. One of the best known pastes is doubly efficacious because it also destroys roaches and waterbugs. It is probably the safest method of insuring the health and the safety of the household. Citizens everywhere should join in a rat crusade by getting a 25-cent box of rat paste from their dealer and using it during the house-cleaning season.

GOD'S BLESSING BRINGS RICHES

Through Christ a Great Blessing Is Coming.

Blessings Future and Blessings Present—Blessings of Knowledge—Blessings of Wealth—Blessings of Mind and Heart — Special Blessings for the Church—The Bride of Christ to be Fabulously Rich—Blessing or Divine Favor and Fellowship Even Now.

New York City, July 2,—Pastor Russell spoke here today at the New York City Temple, W. 63rd St., near Broadway. His discourse, as usual, was both interesting and instructive. He said in part:

Our topic for this occasion is found in the wise man's words: "The blessing of the Lord it maketh rich, and He addeth no sorrow with it." (Proverbs 10:22.) The blessing of the Lord is here put before our minds as in contrast with His curse. For more than six thousand years the whole world has been under the Divine curse pronounced in Eden. (Genesis 3:14-19.) When our Heavenly Father created man in His own image and likeness — "very good," as He declares—He was conferring a great blessing, one not sufficiently appreciated perhaps by Father Adam and Mother Eve—the blessing of Divine favor and fellowship, the blessing of living amongst the perfect conditions of an Edenic home, in which everything was favorable to happiness.

We have every reason to believe that God has as good a purpose in connection with the creation of mankind as in connection with the creation of the angels, and that the present greatly different condition of man as compared with that of the holy angels is the difference between a condition of sin and one of righteousness. The angels who live in a state of holiness and happiness are those who kept their own estate. This some of the angels failed to do, but left their own habitation. These God has restrained under chains of darkness to await the great Judgment Day. (Jude 6; Genesis 6: 1-6.) In his fallen condition man is sick, mentally, morally, and physically. Because of sin he has come under a Divine curse—not, as once we thought, a curse of a devilish kind, a curse of eternal torment, but that which the Bible declares—"Dying, thou shalt die."—Genesis 3:17, margin; Ezekiel 18:4, 20; Romans 6:23; etc.

Our text suggests that a great blessing is to come from God to all men when the curse upon mankind has been removed. That a universal blessing is yet to come upon Adam's race is made very clear in the Scriptures. This blessing will come through our Lord Jesus Christ; "for as by a man came death, by a man also comes the resurrection of the dead. For as all in Adam die, even so shall in Christ be made alive, every man in his own order."—1 Corinthians 15:21-23; Hebrews 2:9.

The curse pronounced in Eden was a world-wide sentence, which reached to all of Father Adam's posterity; and as the curse brought all mankind into condemnation through Adam, so it is the Divine purpose that a release from this condemnation shall come to all through Christ. Every man, woman, and child of Adam's race, living and dead, is yet to experience an individual opportunity for life everlasting through the death of our Lord Jesus. But this blessing will be everlasting only upon certain conditions.

Few Seeing Eyes and Hearing Ears.

The proposition which God has made is that all who have gone down, and all who are going down, to death through sickness and sorrow because of Adam's transgression will be brought up again, but will not be further blessed contrary to their wills. Let us illustrate this point by referring to condemnation under human law. Suppose that you had a friend in prison, and that in some way you had secured a remission of the penalty and an order for the liberation of that individual. The responsibility is then his. If he rejects the pardon and the release, the blessing will be of no avail. But before he can be responsible for the rejection of the blessing, he must know that he has the opportunity to go free from condemnation. Even then he might be brought from the prison and be told that he could go free; but if he should then say, "I prefer to remain in prison," he would lose the benefit of your friendly action entirely.

There are some Christian people who claim that the world's only opportunity for salvation is now. They cite the proclamation that whosoever believeth in Christ shall have everlasting life, and declare that this offer does not extend to anyone beyond this life, and that thereby the responsibility to accept this offer rests upon all now. The Bible indicates, however, that not many now hear or see, not many understand, even the first principles of the great blessing which God has provided. The majority believe not because Satan has blinded their minds through ignorance, superstition, and priest craft. Moreover, vast multitudes have died without ever having heard of Christ. Since intelligent faith in Him as a Saviour is absolutely essential to salvation, according to the Scriptural declaration, how can these have any opportunity for salvation if the present life ends all hope?

To His disciples the Master said, "Blessed are your eyes, for they see; and your ears, for they hear." (Matthew 13: 16, 17.) The intimation is that now few hear or understand. Again, our Lord said, "To you it is given to know the mysteries of the Kingdom, but to them that are without all these things are spoken in parables and dark sayings, that seeing they may see and not perceive, and hearing they may hear and not understand; lest at any time they should be converted, and I should heal them." Here again, in our own day, we see that it is given to some to know the mysteries of the Kingdom; and to others, the majority, it is not given.

How inexplicable this is without the key! The explanation is that God's time to enlighten the world at large has not yet come. Only a few are now in the proper condition to be profited by the Truth. For others who are not in that condition of honesty of heart it is better that they do not know too much about God's arrangements, for the knowledge would give them the more severe condemnation. The Lord sees that this knowledge is not given to any except those who are in the right attitude of heart and able to exercise the necessary faith. Upon others God's Message makes little or no impression even if they should hear with the outward ear. Weakness of heredity or handicaps of training, or both, hinder them.

The Blessing Coming Upon the World.

"The blessing of the Lord it maketh rich." All who have the hearing ear and the understanding heart realize this blessing. Something has entered into their lives the like of which was never known before. During the next Age the blessing of the Lord will come upon the world, but will operate quite differently. The arrangement for the next Age, as we see from God's Word, is that, first of all, Christ will take the Kingdom, and will have absolute control of the whole world. His first step will be to bind that old Serpent, Satan, who has been deceiving the nations for 6,000 years. Christ will restrain him, that he may deceive the nations no more, that the people may be relieved from that deceptive influence, that they may the better appreciate the Plan of God, which will then be made known to all.

Will not that be a blessing from the Lord, a blessing of knowledge, when the world is shown that God, instead of being the greatest devil that they could imagine, is a god of sympathy and compassion? Will they not be glad when they learn that God has for a thousand years turned the whole world over to His Son, that our Lord may reign to the intent that the blessing of life everlasting may be granted to all who will receive God's gracious offer into good and honest hearts? God's blessing will make rich in body, in mind, and in moral quality whoever receives it.

The Apostle Peter declares that these Times of Refreshment shall be "Times [years] of Restitution." (Acts 3:19-21.) Restitution means restoration. When Adam fell, he gradually lost his moral and physical perfection, and went down, down, down, into the tomb. So have all mankind, his posterity. Adam and all his race are to be offered restitution—a restoration from sickness, from sorrow, from death, a restoration from mental, moral, and physical disabilities—back, back, back, to the image of God which Adam lost by disobedience in Eden, but which our Lord Jesus redeemed for all mankind at Calvary.

These wonderful blessings are all to be given to the race by Messiah's glorious Kingdom. Whoever will accept these blessings of God will receive riches beyond power of human pen now to portray. Just think what this will mean! Suppose that we had the power now to bring the world back from its selfish, mean condition to the image and likeness of God. Where would the European war be in two minutes? Where would all selfishness and sin be? The removal of all these evils is just what God purposes to do, not by magic, but along better lines. If such a change could be wrought by magic, it would go by magic.

Why Evil is Permitted Now.

God purposes that man must learn a great lesson—that sin burns and devours like a fire. The true Church of Christ have learned that lesson. The world is learning a similar lesson, and will learn it still more fully. The great Time of Trouble now coming upon the nations will enforce that lesson as it has never yet been realized. Then, under the Messianic Kingdom, the world will learn righteousness; they will climb the ladder back to perfection. The Lord sees that this will be far better than magical changes could be.

Now there are sin, sorrow, misery, poverty, all imaginable difficulties, and even death itself. But then, the Lord tells us through His Word, there will be no more curse, no more poverty, nor sorrow, nor crying, nor dying. The earth will become a Paradise. The blessing of the Lord will make the world rich, and He will add no sorrow with it. If any should then have sorrows, it will be because they add the sorrows themselves. Whoever will be obedient to the laws of the Kingdom will be blessed of the Lord. All who will love righteousness and hate iniquity shall have the blessing of the Lord, making them richer and richer, until by the close of the Millennial Age they will be absolutely perfect, as perfect as are the holy angels, as free from pain as are the angels—no more insanity, no more broken hearts, no more curse!

Present Blessings to the Faithful

Even in the present time it is true that the blessing of the Lord maketh rich His people now. "But," says one, "not many of them are very rich." I am not so sure about that. To be rich is to have all that one desires. If one is a true child of God he will desire the things which God sees best for him to have. He will wish God to give him whatever Divine Wisdom approves. In proportion as he is yielding his life to God, in that same proportion he is getting his desire, and therefore he is rich.

There are plenty of people who cannot get the peace which they covet. Many rich people lack much that they crave. But those who get the riches of the Lord are rich indeed; for they have the peace of God, which passeth all understanding. It is the blessing of the Lord which makes His people rich—rich in the blessed sense of sins forgiven, in the realization that God no longer condemns us, that we are His children, joint-heirs with Christ, if so be that we suffer with Him.—Romans 8:17; 2 Timothy 2: 11, 12.

In harmony with the Call which God has been sending forth during the Gospel Dispensation, He has received us as His children. He has been calling out of the world a certain company. The Call goes to the world, but not with the purpose of gathering the world. God's purpose now is to take out from the world "a people for His name." (Acts 15: 13-17.) To illustrate: If a young nobleman should come to this city to seek a bride, he would choose a young woman of especially desirable qualifications to bear his name. He would select her from amongst all others. Similarly God is now choosing a Bride for His Son, to take the name of Christ. (Jeremiah 23:6; 33:16; 2 Corinthians 5:21.) For more than eighteen hundred years this has been God's special work.

Gospel Church Almost Complete.

This work of choosing the Church is almost complete. Probably there are a few more vacant places, but not many, so far as we understand the Word of God. We must be very near the time when the last member shall have come into the Bride class. In the parable of the Ten Virgins (Matthew 25: 1-13), we read that when all the wise virgins had gone in to the marriage, the door was shut. This does not mean, however, that when the door to the Marriage of the Lamb shall have closed, the door of mercy shall also be closed. As long as there shall be any proper use for mercy, there will be mercy. Only the Church as yet experiences mercy from God. But during the next Age all mankind will receive it.

It is not the door of mercy that is closing now, in the end of the Gospel Age; for that door will be open throughout the incoming Age. Nor is it the door of opportunity for salvation that is about to shut. It is the door into the Bride class, into the Marriage of the Lamb, that is soon to close; and when once it is closed, no more will ever get into that class. No other class will ever receive offers as good as those now offered. The Bride of Christ will be fabulously rich. Hers will be the highest honors. She will have all the riches of grace promised in the Word, all the loving-kindness which her Lord has provided for her.

But even while still in the flesh the Church class are greatly blessed. The peace and rest of heart which we enjoy is conducive to physical health. This does not mean that all of the Lord's children are well and strong physically, but that, all things considered, their health is likely to be better than it would have been with the same amount of activity had they remained in the world. Even in a temporal way the Master's words, "Come unto Me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest," have great force. This rest in Christ, this realization that we have the God of the Universe as our best and truest Friend, as our constant Helper and Guide, lifts a great load from the heart, and brings a joy, a freedom from anxiety, that none others than the Lord's own people can understand.

We may not be richer in the sense that we shall have more wealth, finer homes, or greater influence in the world. This will be very unlikely. Nor do we desire these things. But we have the true riches, which far outweigh all these other things; for they cannot bring happiness nor peace of mind. The Heavenly riches give the spirit of a sound mind. This makes the brain clearer, the judgment more reliable, the nerves more steady, the heart more bouyant.

"Eye Hath Not Seen Nor Ear Heard"

The glories which God hath in reservation for His faithful, loyal children are things that eye hath not seen, nor ear heard. (1 Corinthians 2: 9, 10.) Wonderful indeed will be the riches of the world when mankind shall have been fully restored to human perfection and to an Edenic home. But far more wonderful will be the riches of the Church, the Bride of Christ. She shall be made like her Lord in His present glorified condition—far above angels, principalities, and powers—"partaker of the Divine nature."—1 John 3: 1-3; 2 Peter 1:4.

These Heavenly riches are to be attained in the resurrection, when the faithful overcomers shall be richly endowed with all the good things which God hath in reservation for those who love Him, and who prove their love by present-time devotion, sacrifices, etc. But there is also a foretaste of those Heavenly blessings granted to the faithful in this present life. These Heavenly riches granted us now the Apostle speaks of as riches of grace. (Ephesians 1:7,18.) They include faith, hope, joy in the Holy Spirit and an ability to see and to appreciate with the eye of faith the things which actually are not yet seen. The Apostle also declares that these treasures of wisdom and grace—knowledge of Divine good things in reservation, and the fellowship with God which permits us to anticipate these blessings—are all hidden in Christ. (Colossians 2:3.) Only after we have come into Christ, as members of His Body, can we have the opportunity of finding them.

HUSBAND SAVED HIS WIFE

Stopped Most Terrible Suffering by Getting Her Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Denison, Texas. — "After my little girl was born two years ago I began suffering with female trouble and could hardly do my work. I was very nervous but just kept dragging on until last summer when I got where I could not do my work. I would have a chill every day and hot flashes and dizzy spells and my head would almost burst. I got where I was almost a walking skeleton and life was a burden to me until one day my husband's stepsister told my husband if he did not do something for me I would not last long and told him to get your medicine. So he got Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for me, and after taking the first three doses I began to improve. I continued its use, and I have never had any female trouble since. I feel that I owe my life to you and your remedies. They did for me what doctors could not do and I will always praise it wherever I go."—Mrs. G. O. LOWERY, 419 W. Monterey Street, Denison, Texas.

If you are suffering from any form of female ills, get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and commence the treatment without delay.

SHOOTS EMPLOYER ATTEMPTS SUICIDE

NEW YORK, June 30.—After a fight with policemen, in which more than fifty shots were fired, Richard Pertes, forty years old, attempted to kill himself when cornered in a swamp of the Hutchinson River, near the boundary of the Bronx and Westchester county.

The fight followed after the shooting of Mrs. Anna Brück, owner of a farm in Hutchinson street, near the Boston Post road. In a statement to the police, she charged Pertes with having shot her once in the head and once in the neck. Mrs. Brück and Pertes were both carried to the Fordham Hospital, where they are in a serious condition and may die, physicians said.

According to Mrs. Brück' statement, Pertes, who had been without employment for a long time, applied to her two weeks ago for work, and she engaged him as a farm labourer and his wife as a servant in the house. Yesterday, she said, he demanded $164 for his work. She refused to pay it and a quarrel then followed. The matter was finally adjusted when she agreed to pay him $20.

Later in the day Pertes demanded $50, and Mrs. Brück told him, she said, that she would not pay him that amount. He drew a revolver and threatened to shoot her she said. When she attempted to run he fired two shots, according to her story.

Nicholas Pullman, her cousin, and Paul Cohen, who lived on the farm, ran to her assistance, whereupon Pertes, it was said, opened fire on them. He fled toward the swamp, pursued by these two men and by Policeman Winkleman, of the Wakefield station.

A call for reserves was sent to the Wakefield police station and a telephone call made on the Bronx Detective Bureau for assistance. Detectives Meyer, McIlhargy and Wagner were sent from the Brann headquarters, and more than a score of motorcycle and bicycle policemen took up the hunt for Pertes.

From his place of concealment in the swamp Pertes fired on his pursuers whenever they came within range. There was a battle lasting more than half an hour before Pertes ammunition was exhausted. He reserved his last two cartridges for himself, firing one at his head, which grazed his forehead. Then he placed the muzzle of his revolver against his left breast and fired, inflicting what physicians say is probably a mortal wound.

Nervous and Almost Crazy With Pains in the Head

Clergyman Certifies To This Cure of Nervous Prostration by Use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

No ailment is more discouraging than Nervous Prostration. You may feel better for a day or two, only to find the next day that you have lost ground and are worse than ever. The headaches are worse, languid feelings are terribly depressing. As you lose strength you lose hope and courage and look to the future with fear and trembling.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is the greatest blessing that has ever come to the sufferer from nervous exhaustion. It is not narcotic in its influence. It does not deaden the trembling, irritated nerves, but through the medium of the blood nourishes them back to health as nothing else can.

Mrs. Alonzo B. Eisner, Billtown, King's County, N.S., writes: "I was very low with nervous prostration and was about discouraged, as I could not sleep nights and was almost crazy with pain in my head. I had tried many doctors, but seemed to get little benefit from their treatments.

"A friend handed me Dr. Chase's Almanac, so that I might read about the Nerve Food. A single box of this treatment convinced me of its value for I was better. I cannot tell how many boxes I used, but the results were so highly satisfactory that I cannot praise it too much. My health and strength have been restored so that I can do all my own work, and I recommend the Nerve Food to all who suffer from nervous prostration.

"This is to certify that I am acquainted with Mrs. A. B. Eisner and believe her statement in regard to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to be true and correct."—Rev. Arthur A. Whitman.

Some patience is required in the treatment of nervous prostration, but you will not be using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food long before you begin to find your strength and good cheer returning. You will then be encouraged to continue the use of the food cure until cured. 50 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Limited, Toronto.

ROYAL PARTY RETURNING FROM KITCHENER SERVICE — Crowds lined the streets in solemn silence to see Britain's King going and returning from the service at St. Paul's in memory of Kitchener since the announcement of their engagement.

CLERGYMAN SAYS CHURCHES SHOULD USE ADVERTISING

Only Way to Meet Present Sunday Laxity is This, He Declares

CHURCHES MUST MODERNIZE METHODS

NEW YORK PASTOR POINTS TO ADVERTISING AS MOST POWERFUL WEAPON.

PHILADELPHIA, June 29.—The competition of sports and amusements drawing their huge Sunday crowds through newspaper advertising, is one of the obstacles of the church, according to Rev. Dr. Christian F. Reisner, pastor of the Grace M. E. Church, who addressed the church advertising conference at the twelfth annual conference of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, here yesterday.

ADVERTISING EFFECTIVE EVERYWHERE

In order to succeed the modern church must be a competitor — and an active one — of the theatres and movies, said the Pastor. He told of his successful campaign in Denver in building up a church through advertising. After going to New York he was advised not to advertise—that the method would be fruitless there—but preaching to empty pews called him. And when he began to use the newspapers he found them as effective in New York City as they had been in Denver, he said. While other New York churches advertise now, he was really the first advertising clergyman in the metropolis, and he said that as many as 225 people were received into membership in his church in one day. Those who opposed the idea of advertising in New York have become enthusiastic, and are working with him.

"Hundreds of pastors run away from the scare-row—sensationalism," said the Rev. Dr. Reisner. "John the Baptist, Luther, Wesley, and Booth were all thus tagged in their day. Jesus drew a crowd by reports of miracles and then preached to the people.

"The preacher's greatness cannot fill a church. There must be an attractive service thrilled with religion and compellingly advertised.

"The church cannot be satisfied to condemn other attractions. It must compete, for the church's business is Sunday recreation which other institutions falsely promise to accomplish

UNIQUE METHODS GET RESULTS.

"It is preposterous to declare that the so-called 'simple' or 'Bibliorum' gospel, alone, will get the crowds. I tried preaching alone, and failed though I did my best. Then unique advertising methods were adopted, and the people filled the same church to hear me, the same preacher."

He said he had not lost a single efficient member of his church because of his advertising. He did it in the amusement columns of the New York daily newspapers.

The church advertising conference is a new department of the annual convention of advertising men and is attracting much attention among the delegates attending other divisions of the meeting. It appears to be the consensus of opinion that church advertising is only in its infancy, and that it is going to become so common that paid advertising space in the future will be one of the strongest allies of the church.

"You cannot preach to people until you get them into the church," said the Rev. Dr. D. E. Weigle, pastor of 'The Friendly Church,' Philadelphia. "If a man's soul is worth saving and if the only way to save that soul is by bringing it into vital contact with God by the means of grace, then no legitimate method should be despised, nor he cost financially be even considered.

"Any church that will enter upon a campaign of publicity in faith, and will adopt modern methods of communication with the world—then satisfy the crowd with the bread of life, adhering strictly and rigidly to the Word as the only unvarying rule by which to live, and to the Christ as the only saving power for a lost world—will be amazed at the success which will attend its efforts.

"It is not a new religion which we are advocating, but the old-fashioned religion, presented to the world through the modern and powerful agency of advertising."

Home Health Club

By Dr. David H. Reeder

Pellagra and Worms: In suggesting treatment for the numerous cases of Pellagra that have applied to the Home Health Club, I have found by experience that one of the first essentials of success is to give a thorough course of treatment for worms. I have found that the dietetic treatment failed in some cases and on inquiring sufferer, sobg cmfwyp y cmfwyp py more closely into the condition of the sufferer, worms were found to be present in large nnumbers. The old method of getting rid of worms was to use gantonin, but I much prefer the use of the call salts. The results are the same, possibly more certain and there is no danger whatever in the use of the call salts.

Scientific investigations have proven to the satisfaction of most physicians that Pellagra is a disease of starvation. In many cases where food is supplied in sufficient quantities and of good quality the starvation is brought about by parasites. The alimentary tract is thoroughly infested by Micro—and Macro-organisms, which thrive and multiply upon the Mucous and food of the sufferer. The following from an article by Dr. A. L. Nason of Maben, Miss., published in the December number of Clinical Medicine, ably corroborates my own experience. Dr. Nason has the advantage of personal contact with many cases while I can see but few. The tremendous power of a correct diet in any kind of human suffering is so well established, however, and the cell salts are largely looked upon as a food that the Home Health Club method has had no failures.

"When we clean the alimentary tract thoroughly then feeding does the work; but without it, it does not. Why? The answer is evident.

Have I tried to cure my pellagara-patients by feeding? Yes. Why did they break down again? This result was not due to the diet, but to a worm-infested alimentary tract: when this was cleared and kept clean and the patient fed on the same diet as before he got well, and has remained well since, although he has had the same diet as before.

I am sending you a photograph of four of a family of seven, five of whom are well; two of the family died. At the time the photograph was taken in 1911, the male weighed only 86 pounds while now (Nov 3, 1915) he weighs 220 pounds. Diet never would have cured him or his family for they were so heavily infested with ascares lumbricoides that dietetic treatment could be of no avail. The old man, to whom I gave 7 grains of santennin says this brought a gallon of worms; in fact, he says he will never tell how bad it was. He pulled 15 worms from his nose and mouth during the summer of 1911, and I was two and one-half or three months getting his alimentary canal free. I began treatment with 2 grains of santonin and increased this cautiously to 7 grains before any visible results were produced. The next day after a large quantity of worms passed he was like a bird let out of a cage. He took only tonics for most of the remainder of that year ((1911) and has taken nothing since (and paid me but little, since he is of the pauper class), thus helping to prove Dr. Goldberger's theory. Yet, we did not have Dr. Goldberger's dictary list until 1914.

Now, will worms take enough food in any form and from any source to starve the individual? Yes, everybody will say. Then I say so, too. But a family dietary is not the only cause of starvation. Look at the lousy calf, wormy hog or colt or horse or child if you please. D they not look starved annd yet eat ravenously. Clear them of the worms, then what happens? Do not all alimentary troubles give a skin manifestation and are we not taught, in treating skin troubles, to look well to the well to the well being of the alimentary tract?

Yes, starvation is the cause of pellagra, no matter what the cause of the starvation. But, dietary errors are not the only cause of starvation, or my horse would get fat and my lousy pig would look better.' I do not mean these animals have pallagra, but I mean they look starved, like the man in the photograph, and he was wormy but, when the parasites were removed he got fat, just as do the animals when they are "cleaned up"

This is just one illustration of manny cases of pellagra. Suppose your patient has hookworms—disease or amebiasis of whatever variety. All insane personns in the asylums who have Dysorhea, when treated with emetine, readily improve mentally. Then, is not insanity (Malancholia) one Emetine has always improved the mental condition in pallagra; so also has Dover's powder ,our ideal hypnotic. And Why? Because in these cases the ipecac is synergistic to the opium.

Now, a 16-month's-old child was brought me in July, 1915, displaying all the typical symptoms. I gave santonin, which caused expulsion of one roundworm in two weeks. There was no sign of pallagra. To-day the child seems perfectly well. I gave it an iron tonic and fed it.

"Clean out, clean up, keep clean and feed the pauper."

Dear Doctor: Baby, 3 months old, has had bowel trouble ever since birth; will not pass without help. I give castor oil every third night, also give enemas of warm water and soap. Sometimes they bove green and slimy. He is a breast-fed baby. I am troubled that way myself. Do you think he nurses it from me?—C.W.

(Answer): The baby's bowels must bes regulated through you. The old-fashioned herb remedy, Compound Centian, made according to the Thompsonian formula ill benoft the babe most. Castor oil too frequently given is too drastic for a child of that age. Direct medication should be eat. Sulph., 6x tablets, Two of these should be placed in its mouth two times daily. They will dissolve and be swallowed. You can get them from your local homeopathic doctor. One or two doses of Nat. Phos. in same manner would be very beneficial. These are not drugs but in reality foods, in sugar of milk and are demanded by the child's system.

Britain's Fleet Is Growing A Comparison

German Policy of Attrition on the Sea Has Resulted in Failure —Comparison of Losses

KAISER'S NAVY SMALLER

A comparison of British and German naval losses in the war, based on official figures, is given by Archibald Hurd, naval critic, in the London Daily Telegraph:

He first sets out the ships of the dreadnought era (displacements in parenthesis) which have been lost:

BATTLESHIPS.

Britain—Nil.
Germany—Nil.

BATTLE CRUISERS.

Britain—Invincible (17,250), Indefatigable (17,750), Queen Mary (27,000)—Total 3 of 63,000 tons.

Germany—*Boeben (22,640), Pommern (28,000), Lutzow (28,000), Blucher (15,000), xSeydlits (24,600)—Total, 5 of 118,740 tons.

*The Goeben is ineffective in the Sea of Marmora. The Blutcher was a contemporary of the Invincible. xThe Seydlits is probably as good as destroyed.

LIGHT CRUISERS.

Britain—Amphion (3,440), Arethusa (3,560),—Total, 2 of 7,000 tons.

Germany—Karlsruhe (4,822), Magdeberg (4,478), Koln (4,280), Mainz (4,280), Emden (3,508), Dresden (3,396), Konigsberg (3,348), Nurnberg (3,396), Leipsig (3,200), Rostock (4,820), Wiesbaden (5,000), Elbing (4,300)—Total, 12 of 45,238 tons.

MATTER OF PERCENTAGES.

The above statements show that Germany's losses in the most modern and effective ships—even if she fared no worse than she declares in the battle of Jutland—have been far heavier actually than ours since the war opened. But the real significance is only extracted from the figures, if they be considered on a proportionate basis. Ignoring the 1914-15 ship-building programmes of this country and Germany, about the carrying out of which there may be some doubt, the position in dreadnought battleships and battle cruisers built and building was on the outbreak of war as under:

BATTLESHIPS.

Britain—35, of 818,100 tons.
Germany, 18, of 450,250 tons.

BATTLE CRUISERS.

Britain—10, of 215,800 tons. Total 45, of 1,032,900 tons.
Germany—8, of 186,120 tons. Total 27, of 636,370 tons.

Consequently, while on this showing we have lost 6.6 per cent. of our strength in battleships and battle cruisers, Germany is the weaker by 18.5 per cent. of hers. In other words her proportionate loss has been three times as great as ours.

What is the position as to light cruisers which may be regarded as belonging to the dreadnought period? We possessed 38 and Germany 27. In the course of the war we have lost one of these, as well as the Amphion, slightly older; Germany has been robbed of 12. On that basis our loss has amounted to 5.2 per cent., while the enemy has been weakened by nearly 45 per cent.

But both fleets have sustained other losses of good ships belonging to the years immediately preceding the dreadnought era—vessels which were still effective. I have endeavored to prepare a list of such losses in the following table, taking as a basis pre-dreadnought vessels not older than 15 years and thus excluding ships belonging to the last century.

BATTLESHIPS.

Britain—King Edward VII. (16,350), Triumph (11,955), Russell (14,000)—Total, 3 of 42,305 tons.

Germany—Pommern (12,977)—1 of 12,977 tons.

ARMORED CRUISERS.

Britain — Natal (13,550), Argyl (10,850), Good Hope (14,100), Monmouth (9,800), Defence (14,000), Warrior (13,550), Black Prince (13,550), Hampshire (10,850) — Total, 8, of 100,850 tons.

Germany — Scharnhorst (11,420), Gneisenau (11,420), Yorck (9,350), Friedrich Karl (8,858), Prinz Adalbert (9,858)—Total, 5 of 49,800 tons.

LIGHT CRUISERS.

Britain—Pathfinder (2,940) — Total —one of 2,940 tons.

Germany — Bremen (3,200), Undine (2,672), Ariadne (2,618)—Total, three of 8,490 tons.

GERMANS WEAKER.

This appears to be a far less satisfactory statement than the earlier one. How does it appear on a percentage basis? In the years 1900-9 we laid down sixteen battleships (pre-dreadnoughts) to Germany's fourteen, so that our loss has been much greater actually and relatively than Germany's. But on the other hand, we had a very large reserve of slightly older vessels ,of which more must be said later on, and we initiated the building of dreadnoughts a year before Germany. Turning to armored cruisers we began in the same period 23, while Germany put in hand only 6. While our proportionate reduction has been only 34 per cent., in the case of Germany it has been about 83 per cent. In light cruisers of the older types she has also come off worst.

OUR OLDER SHIPS.

It is in the matter of the yet older ships that we have received the greatest injury and that fact is due largely, though not entirely, to the Dardanelles operations. Of battleships belonging to the last century there have gone the Bulwark (launched in 1899), Formidable, (1898), Irresistible, (1898) — 3 ships we could ill spare—Ocean (1898), Goliath, (1898), and Majestic (1895), and we have also had to deplore the Aboukir, Hogue and Cressy, of the armored classes ,as well as the Hermes, Hawke and Pegasus. But in spite of all that has happened, we possess to-day 31 pre-dreadnought battleships to Germany's 19; and 23 armored cruisers to one really effective ship of that type—the Roon—in the German fleet.

MORE VEGETARIANS AFTER WAR—MAYBE

Germany, by reasons of conditions, was forced some time since to curtail meat eating, and it is said in occasional letters that manage to pass two censors, says the Pittsburg Sun, that feast days are rarities and steak days even more so. In France there has been a marked decrease in the sale of meats, and so also in England, while Austria undoubtedly follows the lead of her ally. Now comes Russia, the last country of them all to be affected by shortened food supplies, and the Duma has passed a law calling for abstention from eating meat.

One naturally wonders what effect, if any, this change in diet will have. If only one nation were involved in the altered condition it would not make any perceptible difference, for when the end of the war came and things were normal, or approximately so, meat consumption would be resumed as a matter of course. But with four great nations, possibly five, for the situation in Italy can be no better than it is in France, all abstaining from meat to a greater or lesser extent, the effect may be otherwise. To be sure the common people of the countries mentioned never did indulge in meat regularly before the war, but now the rich, the fairly well off, and the poor are in the same boat.

In the United States the high price of meats has forced many families to eschew that article of diet as a regular feature of the meal. In many homes meat three times a week has replaced the daily service, and in others once a week is the rule. This breaking of old habits may possibly have a marked effect. After things are again moving in their old channel, assuming that they will have a disposition to resume former ways after the war, there may be a permanent decrease in the quantity of meat eaten.

Any lessening of the amount of meat consumed in America could result only from such nation wide exigency as the war. But, vegetarians to the contrary, it will require prolonged prohibitive prices and the breaking of lifelong habits to convince the meat eater that a sirloin, a rib roast, or a porterhouse has lost its charm to soothe the soul of a hungry man and to "bring the spring with its green and gold, and the grass in the grove, where the snow lies cold', whatever the weather may be."

Ques.: "Wait a minute, this means hundreds of dollars to you. Answer me this one—where is the time recorded in your plant?"

Ans.: "At the factory door, of course."

Ques.: "Then they do take exercise at your expense? Your employees, I mean. They can take a quite a promenade couldn't they, from factory door to department door?"

Ans.: "Promenade, nothing. Why, what, what's the point?"

Ques.: "Why not put a Time Recorder at Each Department door? Then your employees can take all the time they need in the halls or the lavatories or cloak rooms. But they can't get into the bench until they are all ready for work and just then they "punch the clock." How about it?"

Ans.: "Sounds good. Put me next."

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S APRON.

By Anabel Worthington.

The woman who is a bit hard to suit in an apron may find this one—on very interesting lines—just what she has been looking for. There is a certain degree of originality to it, with the waist back and belt in one piece. Banding makes an attractive finish for the square neck, the sides and the belt edges. A pocket in either side of the skirt section adds to the utility and decorative features of the garment, which is sleeveless. The fastening of this apron is where the belt ends meet at centre front.

The pattern may be had in sizes 36, 40 and 44 inches bust measure. To copy in size 36 will require 2¾ yards of 36-inch material and 5¼ yards of banding.

To obtain the pattern send 10 cents to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Address—The Examiner Pattern Service, The Examiner, Peterborough.

Price 10 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

Allies Make Further Progress in Their Advance on Peronne

Indications To-day Were That The French Would Achieve The First Striking Success of the Offensive Movement by the Capture of Peronne, an Important Railway Centre---Seven Batteries of Heavy Artillery and Many Field Guns Captured From The Germans.

HEAVY FIGHTING IN PROGRESS

LONDON, July 4.—Anglo-French forces made further progress in their great offensive last night and now hold practically all the German second positions on ten miles of a curving front from Montauban to the village of Estrees, south of the Somme.

The Germans have shifted large bodies of reserves from the north to the south bank of the Somme to defend the railway town of Peronne. In an amazingly rapid series of advances, the French, under General Foche, have captured several villages held by the Germans and thrown their advanced lines to within three miles of the outskirts of Peronne.

In seventy hours of fighting the Allies have wrested nearly fifty square miles of French territory from the Kaiser's hands.

All indications to-day were that the French would achieve the first striking success of the offensive by the capture of Peronne unless German reinforcements check General Foche's advance. The French forces south of the Somme are fighting like demons, and have fought their way through fortified villages and German defensive positions of the greatest strength.

With Peronne in the hands of the French, and the British exerting powerful pressure north west of the town, the Germans will face their gravest defensive problem since they retired from the Marne.

SIX VILLAGES CAPTURED.

LONDON, July 4.—The Allies continue to make more gains. Six more villages have been captured. Prisoners now number 12,300, with many guns. French troops are only three miles from Peronne. Some reports state the Germans muntions are scarce. There is heavy fighting all along the line. Seven batteries of heavy artillery and many field guns were captured from the Germans.

PARIS, July 4.—Capitre Wood and the village of Feullieres were captured by the French last night.

OTTAWA, July 4.—A Canadian flying division was formed in France and was active in the recent fighting.

SCENE OF ALLIED OFFENSIVE—The shaded portion of the map shows the advances made till July 3rd in the big Anglo-French offensive. The British attack opened along a 15-mile front from Commecourt southward and the French on the right attacked on a ten-mile front, four miles of which was north of the Somme River.

GERMANS MAKE HEAVY ASSAULTS AROUND YPRES

Last Night's Despatches Indicate an Attempt to Counter Attack on the Part of the Enemy—British Were Holding Strong According to Gen. Haig's Message.

ACTIVE NEAR VERDUN

LONDON, July 3. —The Germans are making heavy assaults to-night on the Ypres salient, but the British are holding strong. Night raids on the German trenches in other parts of the line are being carried out. Several detachments of prisoners were brought in. General Haig's message to-night indicates that all is going well with the British.

ACTIVE NEAR VERDUN.

PARIS, July 3, (9.30 p.m.).—All captured territory is being held in all parts of the French line, although the Germans are counter attacking vigorously. The Crown Prince's forces are again vainly active near Verdun.

A BITTER FEELING.

AMSTERDAM, July 3.—Cologne despatches from Germany say there is a bitter feeling against the military officials as a result of the allied victories. In some places open revolt seems imminent.

Austrian Offensive Is Repulsed By The Slavs With Heavy Losses

Enemy Lost Heavily in an Attempt to Stem The Russian Advance---British Gas More Deadly Than That Employed by The Germans---Results Create Panic in Berlin---British Are Still Holding Captured Territory.

ITALIANS CONTINUE OFFENSIVE

PETROGRAD, July 4.—The Austrians have taken the offensive in formidable force on the eastern front, but have been repulsed with heavy losses, the War Office announced.

BRITISH GAS MORE DEADLY.

NEW YORK, July 4.—A despatch from Zurich says:

Panic has been produced in Berlin by the steady advance of the allies in France, according to information received here yesterday. The newspapers are urging the people to be calm, but at the same time they print vigorous protests against the use of asphyxiating gas by the British, which is said to be much more deadly than that employed by the Germans.

BRITISH RETAIN POSITIONS.

LONDON, July 4.—Last night's War Office bulletins said the British were still holding all the ground taken from the Germans.

ITALIANS CONTINUE OFFENSIVE.

ROME, July 4.—Italians continue the offensive. Several square miles of territory were taken yesterday from the Austrians.

SITUATION IS SATISFACTORY.

PARIS, July 4.—War Office says: "The situation is satisfactory."

OUTNUMBERED BY WOMEN.

German Men in Government Service Now in Minority.

As a result of the men having been called to the colours, the number of women employed in Government bureaus and offices in Germany has gradually increased until now the female employes are in a decided majority, according to recent data published in the North German Gazette. The rate of increase in the employment of women in office work during 1915 is shown by the figures for the number of employes hired during each three months' period. Of these new employes the women formed 40 per cent. in the first quarter of the year, 43 in the second, 48 in the third and 58 in the last.

Another feature brought out by the report of the State Insurance Fund is the rapid increase in the number of young persons taking office jobs. While in the first few months following the outbreak of the war the number of new employes under 16 years old was smaller than that of those over 16, a sharp change in the average age of the applicants was noted in December, 1914, and the data for 1915 shows that the number of employes under 16 hired during that year was 134,681, against 93,813 who had passed that age.

STERLING GUM PRIZES AWARDED

Canadian Tells How He Won The $1000 Prize

7th Point Not Definitely Announced But May Be Later

New York City, July 1.—George Gill is now the highest paid writer in the world. For a six word sentence he has just received a crisp, new $1,000 check. This is one outcome of the largest prize contest of its kind which has ever been conducted.

In all, 7,777 prizes are being sent by the Sterling Gum Company to the lucky winners whose suggestions rank highest as solutions to the famous 7th-point mystery.

Up until the midnight of May 15th the phrases came by thousands from all parts of the United States and Canada. On the morning of the 16th commenced the sifting of replies for possible winners, a task which occupied many days. The judges who made the awards were John A. Sleicher, editor of "Leslie's Weekly"; Edgar Sisson, editor of "Cosmopolitan Magazine"; John M. Siddall, Editor of "The American Magazine"; Frederick L. Collins, Editor of "McClure's Magazine," and Robert H. Davis, Editor of "Munsey's Magazine."

In all over 314,000 suggestions were received for consideration. Finally after a great deal of comparison and deliberation the judges awarded the first prize of $1,000 to Mr. George Gill, of Toronto, Canada.

Mr. Gill is a paper ruler by trade, and as he is also a bachelor his $1,000 check ought to make him rather popular with the ladies before the leap year reaches an end.

His phrase which won this handsome recognition, is "The gum the sun brought out." Most people, no doubt, think that luck plays a large part in a contest of this kind, but to the experienced eyes of the judges careful thought and much re-writing were very apparent in the winning phrase. Mr. Gill's own story of how he originated the expression is interesting.

"For some time," he said, "I have been impressed with the absolute cleanliness associated with the production and the handling of Sterling Gum, and when I began to think of an advertising phrase this feature dominated every other. I had seen this Company's exhibit at the Toronto Industrial Exhibition last fall, where certain manufacturing processes were shown. I had also read the pamphlet distributed by them in which it was shown that the basis of Sterling Gum is the natural fruit of a tree. The first idea that I had was that the sap was 'nature's mouthpiece,' and I thought of 'Sterling Gum—Nature's mouthpiece.' But that hardly expressed the conception as I wanted it. Then I thought of how the sun makes the sap flow, and that it was really the sun that gives us the sap, and that this sap is a pure, clean product of nature. It is therefore perfectly true to say that Sterling Gum is given to us by the sun, hence it is 'The gum the sun brought out.'"

The Judges in making the award commended this phrase particularly for its simplicity and for the ease with which it will be remembered. Mr. Gill does not say whether he will drop his trade of paper ruling to take up the profession of writing. But Rudyard Kipling, Irvin Cobb and the other top-notch writers must take off their hats to him as the only man who has ever commanded close to $170 a word for his literary output.

A TRIBUTE TO NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING

The story of Mr. Gill's success, however, is no more interesting than the story of over 314,000 post cards which flooded into the offices of the Sterling Gum Company.

One and one-half years ago Sterling Gum was only one of many chewing gums. To-day it is a great national favorite. Solid merit coupled with persistent newspaper advertising has been the main factor in this success. The purity of Sterling ingredients, and the antics of "Old Seven, the Baffler," early aroused interest in this perfected chewing gum. And on the leading newspapers of the country fell the greater part of the task of introducing Sterling Gum to the people of the nation.

When the Prize Contest was formulated the bulk of the money spent to announce it was again turned into the newspaper advertisements.

Reaching out into the most remote villages, the power of the newspapers brought to the Sterling Gum Company the over 314,000 replies, a tribute not only to Sterling Gum, but to the intimate appeal of newspaper advertising.

Such is the romance of a good product when coupled with intelligent newspaper publicity.

NAVAL STOKERS MUST DIE AT THEIR POSTS

Of the men who are soul of the British navy none has a better claim to be lifted from the obscurity which enshrouds the "unwritten and unsung" than the naval stokers.

They are not "bluejackets"—that term applies to sailors only—and yet there are more stokers than sailors aboard his Majesty's ships.

Something more than ability to swing a shovel lustily goes to the making of a "stoker A.N." Recruits for this rating upon entering the service are sent to the "Clinker-knocker's College," otherwise the stoker's training school, for a course of instruction.

While there they are taught how to operate "picker" and "slice" and the right way of putting coals on a fire.

Between the right way and the wrong way of doing this lies a big gap of mischievous inefficiency. Stones and sand are used for teaching the "shovel-engineer student" how to avoid this. Fires have to be kept clear and bright or the flagship will soon be snapping out .. querulous "You are making too much smoke," and thus starting trouble for everybody "down below." Also a good head of steam must be maintained, without undue fuel expenditure, and the competency of the stoking governs these things.

BAD STOKING SMOKES THE SKY.

Having learned the rudiments of his profession in the schools, the "clinker-knocker" initiate goes to sea as a second class stoker, in which capacity he trims coal for the skilled first class hands.

When rated "first-class" a stoker's pay rises to two shillings and one penny a day (about 50c.) Now, let us see how he earns it, not by the sweat of his brow alone but by that of every part of his body that has a sweat gland in it.

Right down at the bottom of this huge battle cruiser, rushing through the water with a big "bone in her teeth"—so far down that quite a long lift journey must be made to reach the place—are row after row of glowing furnaces.

Before each of these are grimy, perspiring men, clad only in flannels and a pair of "fearnought" trousers. Hard at it are they trying to satisfy an apparently insatiable appetite. With sturdy practised swing they throw shovelful after shovelful of coal into the greedy maw that gapes hungrily in front of them.

One man after a quick look over the blazing interior, lays hold of a "pricker" or a "slice," thrusts it deep into the dragon's throat, and by a spasm of strenuous effort forces the monster to "spit out the crumbs," or to use the words void of imagery, he clears the fire by dragging out the red-hot clinkers.

GOOD STOKING MAKES RECORDS.

These by the furnace mouths are the expert stokers—the first class men—whose skill in keeping steam enables the ship's enormous engines to exert their thousand fold-horse power to the full—and sometimes a little bit more.

During an action the stokers have the least enviable situation of any one in the ship. Their chance of escape, should she be sunk, is so small as to be almost non-existent.

Although they can hear the guns firing and feel the concussion, they know nothing of what may be happening above, being quite cut off from the upper deck. Amid all the turmoil of the fight the stokers must remain incessantly at work feeding the fires so that the ship has the steam necessary to enable her to respond to orders from the bridge. And should mishap occur the standing regulation is that the stokers must draw fires before leaving their posts.

If the ship goes down they are almost certain to go with her, as they know full well. Yet they show no fear and may always be depended upon to stick to their duty to the last. Men who show such grit as this are surely worth a meed of praise.

Good stoking, in fact has advantaged our fleet more than once during the war. It helped Admiral Sturdee to run down the German squadron off the Falklands, and through it upon this occasion the Cruiser Kent was enabled to go two or three knots faster than she had ever done before and thus prevent the Nurenberg escaping.

CANNED STRING BEANS.

Prepare as if for table use. In another vessel have water slightly saltier than the water beans are in. When the beans are thoroughly heated through, or when they have commenced to boil, dip them out with a tea strainer and put in hot sterilized jars. When filled with beans fill jars to overflowing with the saltier water, running a silver knife down so as to get out all the air bubbles, fasten the tops on, and then turn upside down. When cold wrap in paper or put in the dark. I have found out that canned stuff does not keep so well if exposed to the light.

HOME HEALTH CLUB

By DR. DAVID H. REEDER

EMERGENCIES—One of the most valuable courses of training that has ever, so far as I can learn, been given to boys and young men is the emergency training of the Boy Scouts.

On June 3rd I with two of my young sons, marched through the streets of Chicago, with the other 130,000 people that made up the great Preparedness Parade. There were estimated to be over a million people merely as onlookers. Naturally in such a crowd, numerous accidents are expected to happen. In preparation for such troubles the Boy Scouts were stationed at various points along the line of march. Naturally a boy wants to be on the move, in the parade, here and there, everywhere, to see and be seen, but those sturdy little fellows stood manfully at the post of duty, ready and able to render efficient aid at the first sign of trouble. Fortunately, there were very few calls for their services. Traffic of all kinds ceased within what is known in Chicago as "The Loop District," for over 12 hours. The only vehicles of any kind were the U. S. mail wagons and the ambulance corps.

For the first time in their lives, and the life of Chicago, those that were born and lived here always, walked through the various streets without the risk of being run down. There was a serious and thoughtful expression on the faces of the people in that vast throng. The grim determination of our ancestors shone forth, and the same loyal devotion to the flag as our country appeared to be as much a part of the foreign born as the native born citizen. All were ready to lay down their lives if need be for "Sweet Land of Liberty," but they wanted those in authority to enable them to be ready for the emergency if it should arise.

The people throughout the entire country appear to be a unit for preparedness, not a unit for war, but for peace, and they believe that peace can best be maintained by being ready for any emergency.

The individual as well as the nation must be ready for emergencies, and unless he is prepared he is quite likely to suffer. From the Home Health Club standpoint every man, woman and child should be taught the first rudiments of emergency requirements in both accidents and sickness. A first aid outfit, consisting of bandages, antiseptic cotton, antiseptic dressing a tourniquet, and a few other obvious articles, such as surgeon's plaster, lotions for burns, etc., should be in every household. The Home Health Club books should also be there for ready reference, and if studied by all the family, someone will know what to do and how to do it.

CLUB NOTES.

Dear Doctor: I am asking your advice about my mother again. The tissue food is all usen up. Shall I get more? Her knees are still swelled and so stiff that she can hardly bend them, and there are big lumps on the inside of each knee. She wakes up at midnight and then she can't go back to sleep for the pain in her knees. Her neck bothers her and the knuckles on her hands are swelled, and I am afraid that her hands are going to be deformed. She took some cream of tartar but it made her sick at the stomach. She has lost some of her weight. I do not know how much, but her clothes are getting too big for her. The urine is much clearer. Now, what can I do for her to take away the swelling? Is it dangerous to put on cold water? I have not cared to try it. I rubbed on some of the liniment that you wrote about in a lecture but I am so afraid of making her knees stiffer. I forgot to mention that the tips of some of her fingers are cold some of the time.

J. H.

(Answer.)—In some respects your mother seems to have improved since you last wrote me, but in others her condition is more complicated. The rheumatic trouble is now of a more chronic character, demonstrated by such symptoms as swelling and stiffness of the knees and other joints. Deformity often takes place in such cases and the main purpose with the treatment I suggested to you a short time ago is to prevent such deformities from taking place. It would have been accomplished quite easily if the necessary treatment had been given her when the trouble first started. Now, there is some uncertainty about the matter. The fact that she has been able to reduce her weight somewhat, demonstrates that the treatment is having effect, but often that is insufficiet.

Chronic rheumatism or arthritis as it is also called, is rarely manifested except after middle age and it often follows acute rheumatism as in your mother's case. The pains are experienced mostly during storms, or there may be frequent attacks of five or six days duration or sometimes the pains may be almost constant. There is nothing that is certain to prevent further development of the disease, but the treatment already suggested will undoubtedly prove as helpful as anything she could try. The buttermilk diet has been of great assistance in many cases and she should keep it up. A plain and nourishing diet otherwise as well as an abundance of water and dry and hygienic surroundings, are beneficial. Vapor baths once a week are beneficial. Do not place cold applications on the joints. They will then become more stiff. Rubbing the affected parts with the herb ointment or with skunk oil or cocoanut oil, containing a little oil of lobelia and origanum will be found useful. Her bowels must be kept open, and the activity of the kidneys maintained. Lithia water can be used to great advantage. The kidneys may be aided by doses of ten drops of dwarf elder, given in water every six hours. Poke-berries, American sarsaparilla and prickly ash have all been found very useful, in cases of chronic rheumatism. These herbs are fully described in Vol. 5 of the Home Health Club books, which I am sure you would find very useful. You would also be wise to let her continue with the tissue foods for some time longer. As I said before her teeth must be properly attended to by a good dentist. Possibly Pyorrhea is present and if so should be treated. Her tonsils may also need attention. Be sure to tell about that in your next report.

PEONY CULTURE.

AS AN AMUSEMENT FOR OLD AGE, IT IS PROFITABLE.

Recently in New York City the American Peony society had an exhibition of blossoms in co-operation with the Horticultural society.

One of the famous old peony growers is Mrs. Pleas, now nearly 90 years old, who grew among others, two famous blossoms, "Jubilee" a beautiful white blossom and "Opal" an opalescent pink. Mrs. Pleas worked for thirty years with her peonies and commencing with the commonest stock, year by year discarded all but the finest seeds until she finally achieved the plants which have made her famous in the peony world.

One of the amateur growers, says the New York "Times" who showed specimens of Mrs. Plea's fine flowers, was Leo H. Bonnewits who brought the blossoms with him from Van Wert, Ohio, wrapped in wax papers. Mr. Bonnewits is a collector of new varieties of peonies. He has now 221 varieties and is interested in the Jubilee and Opal not only because of their beauty, but also because Van Wert has a monopoly of them.

"There are probably not more than 100 plants of the Jubilee in the country", said Mr. Bonnewits, "and Van Wert has at least eighty of these. Mrs. Pleas has five plants. A Mrs. Crawford bought one of these and no one knows where she and the plant went. That is the only one of the five unaccounted for. The others we know about. One man in Van Wert has a large number of them, and a woman grower has others."

Mrs. Pleas, (whose first name is Sarah A., though the peony people speak of her merely as "Mrs. Pleas,") loved peonies and had the patience to keep working with them until she perfected them after years of work. She began selling her plants eventually for a nominal sum of $1 and $2. They are now valued at $25 apiece.

An interesting exhibition at the show was one not in competition for prizes—the Japanese and European tree peonies of Professor A. P. Saunders, Secretary of the American Peony society. These are the shrub peonies, growing two and one-half to three and one-half feet high and are difficult to grow. The roots are imported, but Professor Saunders is about to make an attempt to raise them from seed. He had beautiful specimens on exhibition and is said to have the largest collection in this country.

One of the Japanese blossoms was very large, white and single, with immense petals and yellow stamens. Another, also showing the stamens, was pink, the petals like shaded satin. The buds were not small, like the little round ball buds of many of the other varieties of peonies, but cones of big loose petals.

LISTEN FOR THE BRONCHIAL WHEEZE—WHEN YOU BREATHE DEEPLY

It means that disease will soon attack the lungs. Wheezing is distressing to the sufferer and annoying to his friends. Nothing half so certain in bronchitis and throat trouble as "Catarrhosone"; it gives instant relief and cures even the worst cases. Bronchitis fairly flees under the magic influence of Catarrhosone which cures so thoroughly the disease never returns. Other remedies may relieve, but Catarrhosone cures bronchitis, catarrh, and throat trouble for all time to come.

Beware of dangerous substitutes meant to deceive you for genuine Catarrhosone which is sold everywhere, large size containing two months' treatment costs $1.00; small size 50c.; sample size 25c.

A LEGLESS FARMER.

As an example of pluck and energy, consider Myron L. Briggs of Battle Creek, Michigan. Mr. Briggs, who has no legs, does practically every kind of farm work, and is prospering. He is about 45 years old, strong and healthy. He hitches up his three-horse team, and cuts his own hay, wheat and oats, then goes out and cuts more for neighbors who have no binder. He can climb a ladder over the high cross beam into the hay mow, and throw down or mow away hay almost as rapidly and as well as any able bodied worker. He can hitch up his team and drive out into the field alone, and plough or harrow all day, using seats on each implement. He rides a two horse cultivator, and cultivates corn and potatoes by a hand-stick attachment that operates two cultivator gangs. Mr. Briggs lost both legs in a street car accident 16 years ago. For 18 months he lay in an hospital hovering between life and death. Then he slowly recovered.

More than a thousand women are employed in cleaning the streets of Vienna for which they receive from 55 to 60c a day.

FEES SYSTEM CENSURED.

County Council Agree With Findings of Judge Winchester.

The evils of the fee system for the payment of some of the county officials was thoroughly threshed out by the York County Council. The discussion was the result of the report of His Honor Judge Winchester, who had been appointed to examine and report to the County Council on this matter.

The report was adverse to the fee system generally, and recommended certain changes. Some members of the County Council expressed themselves strongly against the fee system in regard to the payment of constables. One member stated that traffic was not regulated by the constables, but that they hid behind bushes in order o trap the unwary motorist, and in this manner secured their fees and a portion of the fine imposed on the driver of the car.

Judge Winchester's report also stated that by these methods some constables were enabled to collect in fees as much as twenty dollars in one day. The report also disclosed other irregularities.

Lice on the rose bushes? Either nicotine or whale oil soap solution is the proper spray to use; but apply it early before the lice are hidden by the curl of the leaves. The solution must hit the lice in order to kill them.

A good plan for keeping tools in place is to draw an outline of the tool where it should hang on the wall, and paint this outline black so that when the tool is not in place its absence will be apparent.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

THE FIRST VIOLIN

By LOUISE B. CUMMINGS

Fraulein Bertha Hauck left Germany just before the breaking out of the pan-European war to come to America. She was to be followed by a lover, Gustav Schultz, a young musician. They were both of the more refined class of Germans, but not noble. Their finances were cramped, and it was impossible for them to marry and live among the people with whom they had been used to associate. In America they could earn a living as they would not like to earn it where they were known.

Bertha had enough money saved to enable her to cross the ocean, and it was decided that she should come over in advance of her lover, who was serving his time of military service, which would not expire for several months. Bertha was to look into the new country and, if possible, make an engagement for him with an orchestra. In this way they might be self supporting at once on Gustav's arrival.

Bertha arrived in New York, found friends who had come over years before and as soon as she had settled herself went out to look for an engagement for Gustav. She met the leader of an orchestra, who promised her that as soon as her lover arrived he would give him a trial. All was arranged, and the girl was expecting her lover to sail for New York when news came that Germany had declared war upon Russia, and the rush of German troops into Belgium commenced.

From that day forward the fraulein heard nothing of her lover. She knew that, since war had been declared, he would not be permitted to come away even if he had chosen to come. Then came news of the fighting in Belgium, followed by more than a year of warfare. Bertha heard nothing from Gustav nor from any of her relatives. She had no great expectation of hearing from her lover, but thought she should hear from her mother and sisters. That she did not was probably because the censorship had caused the destruction of letters that might have been mailed to her.

At last, after waiting a year, a letter came stating that Gustav had been reported among the missing several months before, and since nothing later had been heard from him he was undoubtedly dead.

Bertha mourned for him as lost. True, if he were dead his identification badge should have been found. But if a man is buried under tons of earth caused by explosion or blown into numerous fragments what good is an identification badge? Nevertheless the poor girl had a ray of hope that Gustav lived and that they would one day be reunited.

Bertha was very handy with her brush and had the faculty of designing cards and other things needed at social functions. In this way she made quite a snug sum of money and, being frugal, had held on to nearly all of it. She met a countryman of hers, an artist much older than herself, who paid her a great deal of attention and ended by proposing marriage. But Bertha's heart was with her lover, be he alive or dead, and she would not listen to any other man.

Bertha's friends endeavored to cheer her by trying to induce her to go about with them to amusements. She yielded so far as music and pictures were concerned, but would not go anywhere else. Finally by bolding up to her the fact that many scenes of moving picture plays were beautiful they excited some interest in them. When they told her that pictures of scenes in the great European war were given she was only too ready to see them.

She had been a number of times to see pictures embodying military service when one night the marching to the French rear of a number of German prisoners was given. What was her astonishment to see, pale and haggard, a bandage on his forehead, walking on a crutch while he held up one foot, Gustav Schultz. She at once became hysterical and was taken out of the building.

When she became sufficiently calm to tell what had moved her, inquiries were made in her behalf as to the time the picture which included her lover had been taken. An approximate date was given and was found to be nearly coincident with that at which Gustav was reported missing.

Thinking it possible that her lover was alive and in a French hospital, Bertha determined to go and seek him. She crossed the ocean to England and from there went to Paris. At Paris she learned at what camp the prisoners taken in the fight after which Gustav was reported missing were interned, and there she went. Upon examining the rolls she found her lover's name as an inmate of a hospital.

One morning while Sergeant Schultz was lying on his cot reading a newspaper, an autumn sun shining at a near window, he heard a cry, and, looking up, there was Bertha staggering toward him with open arms. In another moment she had clasped him and he her in an embrace.

Schultz was expecting that if he was ever returned to Germany he would be discharged from the service, for his foot had been so shattered that he would never be able to walk upon it again except with difficulty. He had exchanged a good foot for the iron cross, which he considered a fair exchange. Bertha's story excited a good deal of interest and sympathy among the French officers, who finally obtained permission for Gustav to embark for America.

He is now in New York, first violinist in an orchestra.

Devonshire Is a Great Land Owner

Although the bearer of a great title and the inheritor of numerous vast estates, the Duke of Devonshire has been greatly burdened by the expense of keeping up his properties and dignities, and some of his enforced economies have attracted wide attention.

Sold His Famous Library.

One of these was the sale of the famous Bevonshire library, one of the greatest private collections in the world, to Henry 5. Huntington, the California millionaire, for $1,700,000. The library is now installed in Mr. Huntington's home in Fifth avenue, New York.

Another of his economies was the sale of a herd of thoroughbred Southdown sheep, bred by his uncle, the previous Duke. Still another was the retirement of the Devonshire colours from the turf and his sale of the racing table maintained by his uncle, who was one of the most popular horse owners in England.

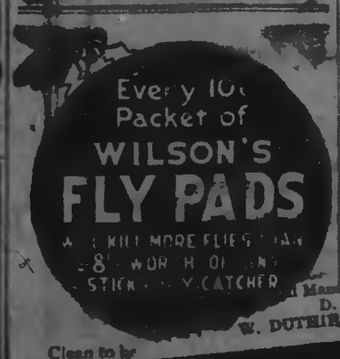
The enormous death duties exacted by the Government as the price of large inheritances, and the exhorbitant war taxes devised by Lloyd George when Chancellor of the Exchequer contributed to the Duke's financial difficulties. The fact that he succeeded as a nephew made the burden heavier, for the more distant the relationship the higher are the inheritane duties. A year ago he was appointed to the or less ornamental post of Civil Lord of the Admiralty.

Owns 200,000 Acres of Land.

Before succeeding to the dukedom he was the Right Honourable Victor Christian Wilbng Cavendish, M. P., eldest son of the second brother of the eighth Duke of Devonshire. His uncle died in March, 1908, but the new Duke was not admitted to the House of Lords until early in the following year, under a strong rule that provides an interval to make sure that the widowed peeress may not give birth to a pothumous heir.

He is forty-eight years old, with the aristocratic but heavy and rather melancholy face of the Cavendish family. The Duchess was, before her marriage, Lady Evelyn Fitzmaurice, daughter of the fifth Marquis of Lansdowne. They have two sons and four daughters.

Notwithstanding his financial embarrassments the Duke of Devonshire owns almost 200,000 acres of land. The greatest of his country estates is Chatsworth. In London he owns Devonshire House, the gloomy-looking, walled-in mansion on Piccadilly, fronting Green Park. He values the place, and is frequently rumoured that he is about to sell it to a syndicate to erect for an apartment house.



Fears End To Serbian Race

LOSSES BY DEATH IN WAR AND BY DISEASE ALARM WRITER.

Instead of sending the reorganized remnants of the Serbian army from Saloniki to the fighting lines the Allies ought to save them for the work of building up the greater Serbia that is expected to arise in the Balkans after the war is over, is the opinion of a number of Serbian writers as expressed in the columns of the Russian press. In printing excerpts form these articles the German newspapers take occasion to point out what they call the lack of harmony among the allies on this subject, asserting that while Great Britain and France are willing to sacrifice the last Serbian soldier, Russia with an eye to the development of the Pan-Slavic idea, wishes to preserve the few able-bodied Serbs left, and for this reason allows articles along that line to be published in the Russian papers.

Writing in the Russky Wiedomosti Moscow, R. Peschitch Gostuschsky, a Serbian writer, says:

"Out of a population of 2,900,000 in 1912, we Serbians put 402,000 soldiers in the field. Since that time further calls for men have not ceased. Surrounded by enemies we fought to the last drop of our blood, and defended ourselves on all sides, while dying from hunger. Now, Serbia, like Belgium, has been conquered by the enemy, and at the same time it has hardly any male population left. Part of our men have fallen, part have been captured, others have fled to Albania, where they have perished. Our retreating troops took with them to Albania 38,000 youths who were about to be called to the colours. Of these not even 10,000 reached Corfu. The rest perished in the snow banks of Albania, just outside the fortified camp at Valona into which the Serbians were not allowed to come for fear they might bring cholera into the camp. Thus perished the flower of the Serbian youth, together with the veterans of three wars. Only pitiable remnants were finally taken to Corfu and Bizerta.

"Once we dreamt of a Greater Serbia. And now? The assertion that the Serbian people are dying out is not at all exaggerated. Many hundreds of thousands have fallen in battles with the Turks, the Bulgarians, the Austrians, the Germans, and then the Bulgarians again. The survivors have perished from cholera, from spotted typhus, and in the snowbanks of Albania. So if a greater Serbia is to be created it will consist solely of women, children and untilled fields. We, the survivors are asking ourselves: — 'How, in what way, is the resurrection of the Serbian people to take place?' Why will a Greater Serbia be needed, when there are no more Serbians?' The last Serbian men must be spared, so that the future shall not be entirely lost to the Serbian people." already have been established in various parts of Holland. There are 240 classes and 4500 scholars, with instruction given by certified Belgian teachers. Secondary schools have been set up at the Hague, Amsterdam and Middleburg, and an atheneum at Flushing is attended by 125 pupils. There are technical schools for interned Belgian soldiers and for refugees, who are taught mechanics, shoemaking, joinery and other trades.

Grants are made to all these educational institutions by the Dutch and the Belgian governments.

BANE OF BRITISH ARMY.

Experts Have Not Wholly Replaced Old Style of Officers.

The very cream of the nation is in the trenches, but at the top all is as before, writes Alfred G. Gardiner in the "Century." "Buggins' turn," to use Lord Fisher's phrase, still governs the army. Buggins may be a fool, may be known to be a fool, but he has grown old in the service; he is popular with the mess, he has strong social connections, it would be a scandal not to give him his turn. The story of the Dardanelles reeked with this disease of Buggins. The story of France and Flanders is not much better. Men may be proved incompetent, but they do not disappear. They are not cashiered; they are not even promoted. The railways are controlled by soldiers, the air service is largely run by men who do not fly; nowhere does the more professional give place to the expert or the decorated antiquity to the man of brains.

It is as though a body of parish councillors have suddenly been called upon to administer an empire in the midst of an earthquake and are imperilling that empire by their insistence on their professional precedence. The question that men are asking in connection with Sir Douglas Haig is whether he is big enough to attack this disease and to bring the army the service of the best brains at his command, regardless of whether they are the brains of Buggins or of Buggins' coachman. I doubt whether he is the man for that heroic work; but I am certain that his success depends upon the ruthlessness with which he uses the surgeon's knife in what is notoriously the diseased tissue of the British army.

The Last Flight of Lieut. Innclemann

—Berlin, June 25.—The Lokal Anzieger prints a field letter from an eye-witness of First Lieut. Immelmann's death flight. Lieut. Immelmann had a record of fifteen enemy aeroplanes destroyed.

"It was 9 in the evening," says the letter, "when the rat-tat of aerial machine guns lured me out of my quarters, and I saw at a height of several thousand yards five aeroplanes in a hot fight; two fokkers and three English and French biplanes. The tiny, swift fokkers were like swallows in comparison with the big, lumbering but sure flying double-deckers. There was an increased liveliness aloft as the fokkers overtook the biplanes and bore down on them with frightful speed. Amid a mad rattle of five machine guns our hearts on the ground stood still. Now the fokkers have reached the enemy, but have turned themselves loose again. Then they pounce with fresh strength on the biplanes, now flying in confused circles. One of the fokkers has singled out his prey and doesn't leave him. While the big biplane only seeks to fly lower or higher, the fokker cuts off the escape each time. Suddenly the big machine reels.

"Hurrah; he's hit!" is roared from a thousand throats. I was watching closely, and noticed that the fokker too, was making curious tumbling motions, righting itself like an animal mortally wounded, then fluttering down, first slowly, then faster. A sudden jerk brings the machine again to a horizontal position. Thank God, I think, and breathe easier, when suddenly the fokker overturns completely, the tail falls away, one of the wings flutters off, and, with an uncanny whistling sound, the machine precipitates from 6,500 feet earthward and strikes with a dull thud.

"I ran as fast as possible to the spot. The motor had buried itself deep in the earth, burying the pilot under it. A crowd of soldiers quickly gathered.

"It's a Frenchman," say some. Another answers 'Unfortunately, it's a German.'" But he gets threatening looks from the crowd. Meanwhile some of us have with great effort succeeded in turning over the motor, and several officers appear and supervise the examination of the dead. Is it an Englishman, Frenchman, or German? None knows for certain.

"At last we have opened the leather coat. The first thing we see is the Pour le Merite decoration. Immelmann or Boelcke? An axious silence fell on all standing around. Then we found the Iron Cross and then the monogram, 'M.I.' on the shirt.

"Our poor Immelmann!' said a high officer present, and sadly we repeated it."

Rids Poisons From the Blood Clears Up the Complexion

Sallow Skin, Pimples, Pains and Aches Are Soon Gone When Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills Are Used

The doctor feels your pulse and looks at your tongue, but at the same time he is reading your condition in your face. The sallow complexion tells him that your liver is not doing its work, the pimples tell him that the kidneys are not properly purifying the blood, he realizes that the bowels are constipated and the system overloaded with poisons.

You can apply this test in your own case and may be able to add other symptoms, such as headaches, pains and aches through back and limbs, spells of biliousness and indigestion.

If you have not used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you will be surprised to find how quickly they will rid your system of poisonous impurities and thereby remove the cause of pains, aches and skin troubles.

Mrs. F. N. Hall, 102 Queen street, St. John, N.B., writes: "I am glad to say I have used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills with splendid results. I was greatly troubled with constipation and pimples on the face. I tried other remedies and used liquid arsenic three times a day for a year to get rid of the pimples but received no benefit. I began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and it was not very long before I was completely cured. The pills acted on the bowels, kidneys and liver and cleansed them of all impure matter. I think they cannot be beaten as a means of ridding a person of that tired aching due to weak kidneys, and I would not be without them in the house for any money."

RE-CANNING PROCESS.

I can peaches, pears and berries by raw canning process, writes a friend, as follows: Make a rich syrup and have it boiling. Sterilize jars and have them standing in very hot water. Pack prepared fruit in the jars, fill to overflowing with hot syrup, taking out the air bubbles with a silver knife. Seal the jars and fill the pan they are in with boiling water, turn another pan over them and stand aside until cool. Remove, dry and wrap in paper. I have had strawberries keep for five years that were done in this way.

BELGIANS COST DUTCH MILLIONS TO GRUB STAKE

The number of Belgian refugees in Holland has declined from 1,000,000, after the fall of Antwerp, to about 65,000, according to official information. Belgians continue to arrive in Holland from their native land, driven out by the hard conditions of existence there, but this accession apparently is counterbalanced by the outflow from Holland to France, Great Britain and the United States.

Of the 65,000 still enjoying Dutch hospitality, 15,000 are now accommodated in the four specially erected refugee camps or wooden villages at Ede, Nunspeet, Gouda and Uden. The others are living with private families.

Besides approximately $4,000,000 or $5,000,000 supplied to refugee Belgians through donations, the Dutch government has contributed about $5,000,000. A sum of $2,000,000 has been voted for the current year and unless peace arrives meanwhile, another $1,000,000 probably will be granted. An offer of reimbursement by the Belgian government has been declined.

Needy Belgians are free to enter the refugee villages. If private families maintain them the burgomaster is empowered to allow 14 American cents a day for each adult and 8 cents for each child.

The refugee camps, each of which is controlled by a government commissary, are well organized and equipped, and have churches, schools, shops, and post offices. The inhabitants receive meat, fish or fat daily. They are not compelled to work, but a small wage is offered as an inducement for them to do so; and wooden houses are being constructed which can first be used here, and then after the war, perhaps, transferred to Belgium to serve as homes there until the many ruined houses there can be rebuilt. This work is being paid for largely out of $130,000 raised in Denmark, with the English Society of Friends lending co-operation.

Excellent arrangements have been made for the education of Belgians. Under the direction of a Dutch-Belgian Commission, 48 primary schools

Ques.: "What does your pay-roll amount to?"

Ans.: "Oh, say $10,000 a month."

Ques.: "Quite a wad. Of course you insure it?"

Ans.: "Insure it? What's the idea Frank?"

Ques.: "Well—you see, you're paying out $120,000 a year. Now you insure your building, equipment, stock, etc., why not insure your pay-roll, against loss—to you."

Ans.: "Ask me something easy. What's the point and what's the cost?"

Ques.: "The point is that your pay-roll represents your purchase of the greatest of all raw materials—WORKING TIME. Its subject to loss every day—four times a day—or every time your employees come in and go out of your plant."

Ans.: "Yes, but I employ a time-keeper."

Ques.: "Of course you do. But he's human. Who checks your time-keeper? And who checks the man who checks him? You need a cold-blooded machine for that job—so there will be no favorites or no mistakes."

Ans.: "There isn't any such machine."

Ques.: "Isn't there? Probably your keenest competitor to-day is using it and is just that much ahead of you. And it will cost you perhaps $3 a month to use it, I mean the International Time Recorder. It's the cheapest and best pay-roll insurance you can buy. Gives you printed, unchangeable, records, made under lock and key, that become your weekly pay-sheets. If you want real, inside facts and figures on the system exactly suited to your business write International Time Recording Co., corner McGill and Notre Dame streets, Montreal, or to their Head Office, Anderson Street, Toronto, for latest folders and prices."

V.C. FOR INDIAN SOLDIER.

A Press Bureau announcement states that the King has conferred the Victoria Cross on Lance-Corporal Naik Lala, No. 501, 41st Dogras, Indian Army, for most conspicuous bravery.

A communication issued by the War Office states finding a British officer of another regiment lying close to the enemy, Naik Lala dragged him into a temporary shelter which he himself had made, and in which he had already bandaged four wounded men.

After bandaging the officer's wounds, he heard call from the adjutant of his own regiment, who was lying in the open severely wounded. The enemy were not 100 yards distant, and it seemed certain death to go out in that direction. But Naik Lala insisted on going to his adjutant, and offered to crawl back with him on his back at once. When this was not permitted he stripped off his own clothing to keep the wounded officer warmer, and stayed with him until just before dark.

When he returned to the shelter after dark he carried the first wounded officer back to the main trenches, and then, returning with a stretcher, carried back his adjutant. He set a magnificent example of courage and devotion to his officers.

Nearly Every Girl Can Make Herself Pretty and Attractive

SOME WHOLESOME TRUTHS EVERY GIRL SHOULD THINK ABOUT.

Probably you know just such a girl.

Perhaps she is sixteen — good to look at, and pretty— quite interesting because she reflects the graces and charm that give promise of happiness to herself and others. But she is not strong. The colour in her cheeks, once so rosy, has faded away —her eyes are listless—the buoyancy of spirit and vigour she once possessed are sadly lacking. Parents, friends, this girl needs Ferrozone— needs it that her blood may be renewed — needs it to restore the nerve force that growth, study and the development of her fresh youth have exhausted. This girl will become a queen with Ferrozone — which will restore her colour—bring back her old-time energy— give brightness to her eyes and vivacity to her spirits. In Ferrozone every girl finds strength—then she can do things. In Ferrozone there is endurance —that drives away morning tiredness and langour. For the girl or woman that wants to be happy, healthy, winning — who values rosy cheeks, laughing eyes and abundant good spirits, nothing can compare with Ferrozone. 50c per box, or six for $2.50. TELLS OF WORK DONE BY U-BOAT CATCHERS

Under the caption, "The U-Boat Catchers," there appears in the June issue of The Naval and Military Record of London an article in which the writer describes a visit to the trawler arm of the Grand Fleet. This division of the fleet is least heard from, yet it has perhaps one of the most important tasks of British fighting ships. Not only does this arm watch for submarines, but to it is also, to a great extent, intrusted the important duty of mining and mine-sweeping.

"As one of a favoured party of British and Colonial pressmen," the writer says: "I am being permitted this week a glimpse into that mysterious water known as the North Sea. The very name has become invested with a subtle charm for the people of Great Britain. For centuries we have been accustomed to regard it as the impregnable rapmart of our island home. After nearly two years of war we are only beginning to realise how our fighting men are exposing themselves — to develop the land analogy still further — in keeping that natural breastwork intact in the face of the enemy.

"I have been among the men of the navy who since the war started have worked continuously, so to speak, on the front of the parapet. They man no mighty engines of destruction; theirs are not the pinnacle of naval designers' genius. The frail craft that took these same men to their hard and oftimes perilous vocation on the fishing grounds of the North Sea in times of peace still fish for strange and wary prey. As bravely and unostentiously their crews earned their daily bread in the days before the war, so now, amid dangers a thousand times more terrible, they pursue in silence the great national task of keeping the seas around our coasts free from the menace of the mine field and the submarines. They form part of and parcel of a great organization, the growth of which is one of the romances of the war.

"The mine has come to play a greater part in the present struggle than was ever anticipated before the outbreak of hostilities. Germany's surreptitious mine laying started on the first day of war, and from that day an ever-growing system of mine sweeping has been in process of development around our coasts. To-day, in mine sweepers, mine layers, and anti-submarine craft of all descriptions, we have a subsidiary fleet of amazing dimensions. The efficiency of this department of the naval service is most striking. The results of its ceaseless work are apt to be judged rather loosely by the uninstructed, because they are negative rather than positive. One's thoughts are liable perhaps to dwell more upon the one ship that has been sunk than upon the hundreds which have been kept in safety, but there are some figures which convey in an unusually clear way the truth of the matter. All ships on the east coast are kept to a marked channel, and, like the policemen on point duty, the navy regulates and is responsible for the safety of traffic.

"On a certain part of the coast since the outbreak of the war the channel has been used by no fewer than 21,000 ships. Those who have kept to instructions and have been damaged number only three. In the month of March there passed a town on the east coast of England 1,537 steamers. Their nationality was determined as follows: British, 1,156; neutrals, 381. That shows that we are not driven off the seas yet," was the proud comment of a naval officer, who vouched for the accuracy of the figures.

"This, the base of the navy's fishing fleet, has much yet that will recall its past glories to the visitor of other days. Its quays will overhang the serried lines of trawlers and drifters, wondrously neat and clean after a proud eighteen months of membership of H. M. Navy. One approaches the outer ship of the line and notes the familiar types of cheery fishermen who march busily about her decks. The face of the old skipper himself, is an ample framework of bristling sidewhiskers, is oddly recognisable beneath the peaked cap which denotes his naval status. One steps aboard as an invited and privileged visitor, and is shown some of the new gear which the brave little trawlers now carries as equipment for her part in the great sea struggle. One notes with quickened interest things which passed unnoticed from the quayside. One begins to realise that inventive minds have been at work fitting this little craft for a mission in the war, the importance of which is not to be measured merely by her size. The veil is drawn aside from some of these mysteries, and the skipper, with a wink and a knowing smile, hints at certain arrangements of vast consequence and potency which it would not do for all idle people who lounge around the quayside to suspect. For some of these craft have been known to have been a tricky way with those gentry who bob out of the sea and commence an argument in shrapnel in the belief that the intended victim is incapable of reply. Cases have been known where the submarine has been worsted in the argument and has not survived the encounter.

"The men take a great zest in their submarine-catching exploits, and ably second the efforts of those who produce the new ideas which are constantly necessary to counter effectively the attack of a wily and admittedly courageous enemy. The dirty work which the ex-fishing boat has to carry through is not confined to anti-submarine work and mine-sweeping, though these are her most important duties. Between them they have made exacting demands on the capacities of the base as a naval dockyard. Over 800 trawlers and 420 drifters have been fitted out in this one port alone, and over 12,000 men have been employed in various branches of the service.

The mine-sweeping vessels have been responsible for the collection of no fewer than 460 mines, and one of them adorns the sea front as a trophy of war. A hollow metal sphere of considerably over a yard in diameter, it still retains its charge of T. N. T., having been rendered quite safe by the withdrawal of the detonator. The legend of its capture by the crew of a small boat still creates great amusement among the men in uniform. A patrol, the story goes, fell in with the salvage crew, who were towing the mine astern by means of a rope attached to one of the many spiked fuses that project from its side. The mildest collision with one of these horns on the part of a ship causes an explosion that would sink a battleship, and the innocent captor of the mine, if the story is to be believed, had actually survived an attempt to knock off the excrescenses with a boat hook. The mine now forms a part of a most novel museum, which includes pieces of the hull of German submarines, the periscope of another submarine, and pieces of bombs and shell, all of them possessing a more or less close local interest.

"To finish the inspection of the navy's activities in this region we visited a base of the Royal Naval Air Service, where two pilots made special flights for our benefit. Many of the well-known young pilots were there to explain their own machines, with an enthusiasm which was unmistakable. Among them was Flight Sub-Lieutenant Beare, the young airman who, mounted on a fast seaplane, recently chased a Zeppelin from the shores of England to within thirty miles of the coast of France. As he was gradually overhauling the airship Sub-Lieutenant Beare's petrol gave out, and he made a forced descent into the sea. He was eventually rescued by a Dutch ship and returned to England.

NOTHING LIKE IT FOR COLDS

Mrs. Holland Freeman, Sheffield, N. B. writes: "Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has cured my children and myself of severe colds. We are never without it in the house. There is nothing like it for colds and throat troubles and it is so soothing and pleasant to take, my children would drink a whole bottle if they were permitted."

TO RESTORE COLOUR.

Take a pint of soft soap, 2 tablespoonfuls of spirits of turpentine, and 1 tablespoonful of hartshorn. Put these into five gallons of rain water and wash garment in it. This may be used on woollen goods.

HETTY GREEN, WORLD'S RICHEST WOMAN, DEAD

Was 80 Years Old and Ill Two Months— Passion of Life Was Money-Making

$10,000,000 LEFT TO HER

AND IT KEPT ON ROLLING AND GATHERING UNTIL IT PILED UP A HUNDRED MILLION.

NEW YORK, July 4.—Mrs. Hetty Green, known as the world's wealthiest woman, who was 80 years old, died here yesterday. She had suffered three strokes of paralysis during the past to months, and for several weeks had been practically helpless.

Her death occurred at 8.05 o'clock at the home of her son, Colonel Edward H. R. Green at No. 5 West 90th street, adjoining the plain brick, four-storey house at No. 7, on the corner of Central Park west, where Mrs. Green had lived lately in seclusion, except for her son and several Japanese servants and trained nurses.

For several weeks Mrs. Green had been unable to walk, and had spent practically all of her time in a wheel chair. The nurses occasionally lifted her into her automobile, where propped up by pillows and protected by furs, the mistress of finance enjoyed a few afternoons in the park. Most of the time, however, she sat in the wheel chair at one of the front windows on the parlor floor of her house, and gazed out over the park, motionless for hours at a time.

Her son, Colonel Green, and her daughter, Mrs. Matthew Astor Wilks, who were the only children, had been with her much of the time, and it was recently reported that Mrs. Green had turned over all of her financial affairs to her son's charge.

The fortune she has left is said to be close to $100,000,000. Her eccentric extremes of economy led to a popular misconception of her as a "self-made woman". As a matter of fact she was born rich. In 1865 she inherited some $10,000,000, which accumulated upon itself until in fifty years it had multiplied nearly ten times.

She was born on November 21, 1835 at New Bedford, Mass. This old maritime city was founded by her ancestor, John Howland, a Puritan, who came over on the Mayflower and who named the place after Bedford, his family home in England. Edward Mott Robinson, who had also amassed a fortune in New Bedford, married Abby Howland, of whom Hetty Robinson, the future mistress of finance, was born. She was just 30 years old when her father died suddenly, leaving her about ten millions.

She married in 1867. Her husband was Edward H Green who was U.S. Consul-General in Manila, where he had made a fortune in the silk trade.

Hetty Green's one passion in life was making money. She was then father's assistant sixty years ago, and aided him in his investments. For only one brief period of her life did she really spend money — and that was when as a young girl she was a society belle, and a favourite in England on various visits. She was estranged from her husband because of her miserly ways.

Two children will divide the Green millions—Col. E. R. Green, her son, and favourite, and a daughter, Mrs. Matthew Astor Wilks.

Col. Green was said by her acquaintances to be the only person the woman financier really ever loved. He was associated with her in money making since childhood.

Her daughter's husband has relatives in Galt, Ont.

Mrs. Green, who was in her 83rd year, had been ill for several weeks. It was reported a week ago that she suffered a stroke of apoplexy in March. This was declared to be slight however, and Mrs. Green's physician said she was doing as well as could be expected, considering her advanced years.

FRENCH REVIEW ATROCITIES.

Latest Report Devotes 250 Pages to Germans' Alleged Cruelty.

PARIS, June 28.—The Government has issued the fourth volume of the report of the Commission for Investigating Acts committed by the Enemy Contrary to the Law of Nations.

The report is voluminous, consisting of 250 pages, with pictures of spreading bullets, saw-edge bayonets, and wounds made by such weapons. Extended affidavits are given under four heads: First, the placing of prisoners as a shield before the troops; second, the use of arms prohibited by international convention; third, "massacres of prisoners and wounded"; fourth, firing on ambulances and sanitary corps.

The affidavits recite details in a great number of cases in which atrocities are said to have been committed.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADIES' AND MISSES' RUSSIAN BLOUSE.

By Anabel Worthington.

Occasional cool days and the more frequent cool evenings suggest the necessity of adding a separate coat to the summer wardrobe. Properly, the design of such garment should be suited to the combination of materials. This belted Russian blouse, pictured No. 7,781, is very effective in plain and striped material. It is in the mode of "sports models," of a character not too practical and not too dressy for varied uses. A becoming soft fulness is given by gathering the shoulder edges. It is in the details that we look for novelties in a garment to-day, and in this coat we recognize the novelty to be in the collar, which has the front ends extending to form straps that cross and show a plait in their edges. The full sleeve is gathered to a wristband cuff. In harmony with the collar, belt and cuffs, a bias strip or fold is used at the lower edge of the garment, and, to advantage, however, it may be omitted.

The pattern is cut in sizes 32, 36 and 40 inches bust measure. To make in size 36 will require 2¼ yards striped material 36 inches wide and 1½ yards of plain material. Or, in all one material, 3¾ yards.

You may obtain the pattern by sending 20 cents to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

BRUSILOFF BREAKS GERMAN RESISTANCE

BRITISH ARE IMPROVING THEIR POSITION

Russian Right Wing Driving The Austro-Germans Westward

Heavy Fighting in Neighborhood of Barnovitch Favourable To Russian Troops---Three New German Batteries Including Two of Heavy Guns Captured by The French ---British Continue to Improve Their Positions North of The Somme Although Germans Strongly Reinforced Have Gained Foothold in La Boiselle---German Attacks on Verdun Are Repulsed.

WHOLE BATTALION SURRENDERS TO BRITISH

PETROGRAD, July 4.—Between Dubno and Sokal General Brusiloff's right wing has broken the Austro-German resistance in heavy fighting driving the enemy westward and capturing 1,000 prisoners and five machine guns, the War Office announced to-day. An intense battle is raging in the region of Barnovitch where the Russians after violent bombardment attacked the German lines capturing fifty officers and 1,400 men. The German War Office yesterday afternoon announced heavy attacks on Barnovitch, an important railroad centre, 68 miles north of Pinsk. The German artillery on this front is under the command of Prince Leopold of Bavaria, who pushed his advance eastward after the capture of Warsaw last summer. It is understood that he has a force of about 100,000 men strung in a thin line along the marshy region.

Quiet on French Front Near Somme

Booty Captured by The French is of The Greatest Importance—Six Desperate German Attack on Verdun Front Are Repulsed—French Refused to Budge an Inch and Enemy Loses Heavily in Fruitless Attacks

Examiner Special:

PARIS (French Official), July 4.—Neither the French nor the Germans made any infantry attacks along the French front north and south of the Somme last night, the War Office announced this afternoon. North and south of the Somme the night was calm, it was officially stated. There were no infantry attacks. It has been established that the booty captured by the French in the recent fighting is of the greatest importance, including three new German batteries. On the Verdun front six German attacks were repulsed.

Of the three German batteries captured by the French two are of heavy calibre. The War Office commented to-day upon the precision of the French artillery fire in the offensive movement on both sides of the Somme. North of Frise another German captive balloon was fired upon and destroyed by the French fliers last night. Between the Avre and the Aisne French reconnaissances penetrated first line German trenches and communicating trenches, said the official statement, and some prisoners were taken.

On the Verdun front, a German attack on the west bank of the Meuse on the southern slopes of Dead Man's Hill was checked by French fire. East of the Meuse a most violent struggle raged all night in the region northwest of Thiaumont. Six German attacks, one with liquid fire, failed. The Germans were annihilated by our screen and rifle fires, suffering heaviest losses. They did not succeed in making the French move an inch from their previous positions. In Fumin Wood the French made progress during the night throwing the enemy from a trench.

Germans Gain a Foothold in Village

Examiner Special:

LONDON, July 4.—German troops strongly reinforced captured a small portion of the village of LaBoiselle, east of Albert, in heavy fighting. This was officially announced to-day.

British Improving Their New Positions

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 4.—Although the French War Office announced to-day that the night passed with no important fighting on the French front, despatches from British headquarters reported that the British continued to improve their positions north of the Somme.

Germans Preparing For Further Retreat

Examiner Special:

COPENHAGEN, July 4.—Berlin despatches to-day hinted that the Germans are preparing for a further retirement before the Anglo-French offensive, but declared that no one in Berlin considers the situation at all desperate. All German correspondents report that the Allies probably have at their disposal the greatest supply of ammunition ever amassed behind any army.

Russians Took Over 2700 More Prisoners

Special to The Examiner:

PETROGRAD, July 4.—Latest official reports of the Russian defeat of the Germans under Prince Leopold indicates total German prisoners taken yesterday and to-day, 72 officers and 2,700 men, eleven guns and twenty machine guns.

SERGT. A. McBRIDE OF PETERBORO GETS THE MILITARY MEDAL

Good Work of Local Man at Front Results in Highly Prized Decoration---Has Been at Front Since First Contingent Went Over---74th Battery Needs More Recruits---To-day's General Military News.

That Sergt. Archie McBride a Peterborough member of the 4th Battery C. F. A., has been awarded the much coveted military medal for distinguished work at the front is the good news received by his wife who resides on Smith street. Sergt. McBride's name appeared in a list given out in Ottawa a little while ago but at that time local friends were not sure whether or not the name given was that of the Peterborough man. That such was the case, however, has been made clear by the letter received by Mrs. McBride. Sergt. McBride is very modest in his reference to the affair which gained his decoration but as he speaks of heavy casualties among his gun crew it is evident that the Sergeant won his medal under no very pleasant conditions. Sergt. McBride enlisted with the first draft sent from the 34th Field Battery to the first contingent and has been at the front with the 4th Battery since the first Canadian division reached France, being promoted on the firing line. His many local friends will be gratified to learn that he has received the military medal a new decoration authorized some time ago for gallant work.

KINGSTON, July 3.—The 146th Battalion left this afternoon for Valcartier Camp, after spending the past five weeks at Barrifield Camp. They were cheered by thousands of citizens on their march to the trains in waiting.

OFFICERS FOR 236TH.

COBOURG, July 3.—The following appointments have been made in the 236th Battalion: Lieut. C. S. Stewart, 46th regiment; Lieut. A. B. Mills, 57th Regiment; Lieut. E. W. Moss, C.C.S.T.; Lieut. F. H. Reid, 95th Regiment; Lieut. P. O. Thompson, 46th Regiment; Capt. W. L. Macdonald, C.O.T.C.

Mrs. John Fowler of 326 Water St., received a letter from Pte. Arthur Harrison of the 8th Mounted Rifles who was wounded in the left thigh with a shrapnel, he has had a successful operation in Whaincliffe war hospital, Sheffield. He was a constant boarder with Mrs. Fowler during his stay in Peterborough previous to enlisting.

Another member of the 8th C.M.R. officially reported missing has turned up a prisoner in the person of Pte. Cornelius Oxford, whose wife residing at 684 Union street has received a post card from him, written in a German prison camp. This is the seventh Peterborough member of the Mounted Rifles to be heard from as a prisoner.

Mrs. Arthur White, 348 Charlotte street, has three sons whose names have appeared in the casualty lists. They are as follows:—

Private Arthur White, 1st Canadian contingent, officially reported missing.

Corporal Albert White, 1st Canadian contingent, gassed, was admitted to Cambridge hospital.

Pte. Oliver White, 2nd Canadian contingent, admitted to number 2 General Hospital, Bristol, suffering from gun shot wound in the hand.

Cobourg Heavy Battery.

The Cobourg Heavy Battery now have authority to recruit another overseas draft for the Siege Artillery, four drafts from this unit having already gone overseas. The last draft which included several Peterborough men, have landed safely in England. This new draft offers a splendid opportunity to the better class of young men who wish to get to the front with the least possible delay, and with one of the most interesting branches of the service. Any information regarding the Battery will be gladly given by Major J. McKinnon, Officer Commanding, Cobourg.

Corp. "Bob" Ross, of the 4th C.M.R., writing to his mother, Mrs. E. Ross, Albertus street, says:

Well, I am all right so far, although we lost all our men but seventy-five last time in the trenches, and I was one of the lucky ones to get out. The Germans took our front line from us, but they did not hold it very long. We lost a lot of Peterborough boys killed and wounded. Bill Field got out all right. I was just talking to him. We lost all the bombers except seven, and there were just two of us in the second squad who got out. They sure did give it to us. When I wrote before I asked you to send some baseballs. Well I wish you would, as it is lonesome over here without doing anything.

Lieut. Gordon H. Grahame was among the Canadian officers who have just returned on the steamer Grampian, and he is at present in the city. Lieut. Grahame, it will be remembered, went overseas as a private in the 2nd Battalion, and was given his commission at the front. He was invalided home a year ago, and after some months' recuperation, returned to England last winter and has been attached to the 136th Battalion.

A number of recruits joined the colours in Peterborough yesterday. G. Alloway became a member of the 93rd Battalion, while three recruits F. Gandy, A. Mason and Wm. Withers joined the 74th Battery yesterday. The latter has a brother in the C. F. A. Several recruits for the Army Service Corps left Peterborough for Bar-

TWO SOLDIERS HAD NARROW ESCAPE FROM DROWNING

Ald. Duncan Suggests That a Log Boom be Placed Along the Approach to the Canoe Slide at the Peterboro Locks—Government Disclaims Responsibility.

COUNCIL MEETING

That the Government disclaims responsibility for the dangerous condition existing at the canoe slide at the Peterborough locks, was the information contained in a letter that was read at last night's meeting of the City Council. The communication, which was from Mr. A. L. Killaly, superintendent of the Trent Canal, owes its existence to a request that originated with the Council asking the authorities to adopt some protective measures. Ald. Duncan suggested that a log boom be placed along the approach to the slide which would have the effect of breaking the force of the current. He cited a number of near tragedies that have been reported of late. On Saturday last a couple of soldiers had a narrow escape from drowning. The Council will again interview Mr. Killaly and ascertain if it will be possible to adopt some precautionary measures, minus the responsibility which the Government declines to assume.

REQUEST GRANTED.

Reporting on the request of the Peterborough Light and Power Company to extend their gas main three hundred feet north of London street, on Park street, City Engineer Parsons said that the Company had no authority to proceed with the work, as they had failed to notify the city before April 1st, as required by the by-law governing such work. The request of the Light and Power Company was granted. The attention of the Company will be called to the requirement.

LOOK WHO'S HERE.

Mr. Robert Fair, representing a number of residents on Dickson street, waited upon the Council in respect to the request of the Bell Telephone Company to erect a number of poles on that particular street. Mr. Fair thought it was unfair that two sets of poles should be placed on the one side of the street. He was of the opinion that satisfactory arrangements could be made with Mr. Davidson whereby the poles could be placed on the other side of the street, and that Mr. Davidson would be willing to give a ten-year lease of the property involved. It was moved by Ald. McIntyre and seconded by Ald. Stratton, that Mr. Cameron of the Bell Telephone Company be asked to meet with the Chairman and the City Engineer, and Mr. W. Davidson and try to reach a satisfactory arrangement regarding the location of the telephone line on or east of Dickson street.

REFERRED BACK.

One hour was dissipated in a discussion of a by-law relating to the public health of the city. It refers to the collection and removal of nightsoil.

After considerable discussion the by-law was turned over to the Property Committee, whose ward it has been for the past three months. The Committee will be instructed to consider the by-law and report to the Council at an early date.

GERMAN STATEMENTS ARE NON-COMMITTAL

This is Considered as a Virtual Confirmation of the Success of Anglo-French Operations—French Successes Continued Yesterday.

HOLD THEIR POSITIONS

LONDON, July 3.—To-day's news is again a tale of the continued progress of the Anglo-French offensive. Heavy fighting is proceeding all along the line. The British maintain all their positions south of the Ancre River, where the battle still rages. They have captured La Boiselle, the garrison of which surrendered, and are fighting successfully around Ovillers and north of Fricourt.

The British people learned for the first time to-night that the famous French General Foch, who has won a great reputation during the course of the war, is directing the operations south of the Somme River. This has given increased confidence in the result of the allied offensive.

The French on the south of the Somme captured Herbecourt, Assevillers, Fuelleres and the second German line as far as the outskirts of Estrees. Continuing their advance in the afternoon, they passed beyond the second German line and took possession of Buscourt and Flaucourt. The ground conquered to-day extended to a depth of three miles, making a total depth of six miles since the drive was inaugurated. The total unwounded prisoners taken by the French alone exceed 8,000 and they have also captured seven batteries, three of large calibre, several abolished in casements not being counted.

The important German junction of Peronne is only a little over three miles distant from the French advance at Herbecourt.

The non-committal character of the German official statement issued to-day is considered in London as a virtual confirmation of the success of the Anglo-French operations. The Germans admit that the division of the forces abutting both banks of the Somme, which was partially withdrawn Saturday, has now been brought back to the second line. No data are yet forthcoming from either side as to the casualties suffered. According to the German communication, the Anglo-French losses were "extraordinarily heavy". According to unofficial British reports, however, the British casualties were less than had been expected.

All reports emphasize the tremendous nature of the British bombardment. The gunners worked so incessantly as almost to fall asleep at their guns, and when there was a slight recess in the firing line, they slept easily amid the thunders of the battle.

Great importance is attached to a newly-invented mortar, which plays havoc in the German trenches. Aircraft are taking an important role in the operations.

Thus far the new offensive appears to have had little influence on the battle around Verdun. The Germans are still showing undiminished vigor in the Meuse region, and the French are as steadily resisting.

TUESDAY, JULY 4, 1916

THE TIDE HAS TURNED.

Kitchener lies fathoms low, rocked by the ground swell of the deep, but "his soul goes marching on." When death called him he had finished the last and greatest bit of his work. The war machine he perfected is working with magnificent smoothness; the plans he laid are now being carried out by Haig's "contemptible little army." O Kaiser, British and French guns are blowing away another of the illusions hatched of your asinine conceit, and the whole covey will soon be bagged. The tide has turned.

THE ONLY TERMS OF PEACE.

The Germans of authority are still labouring under the delusion that Germany will be in a position to dictate terms of peace after this war; or, they are trying to lighten the heavy hearts of the German people and delude them into continuing to bear the heavy burdens under which their military overlords have been, and are, crushing them. In a book issued last week-end in Berlin, Prince Von Buelow, the former German Chancellor, sets forth the doctrine that Germany "must make itself stronger, and harder to be attacked upon our borders and coasts to maintain ourselves after peace comes." In the preface to his book the ex-Chancellor discusses the German future, and the shape a peace treaty must take to conform to German aspirations and interests. Without entering into the merits of his arguments and arrogant definition of claims, it is enough to say that the German view in these regards do not greatly interest the world. Germany's share in peace terms will largely consist in accepting what her conquerors dictate. Books may be published by the score defining the terms of peace which Germany will exact, and accept, but these has been made a declaration of the general principle of the terms which will be forced upon Germany's acceptance. Premier Asquith has laid down these terms in the following memorable words, which cannot be too often quoted and read:

> We shall never sheathe the sword until Belgium recovers in full measure all, and more than all, that she has sacrificed, until France is adequately secured against the menace of aggression, until the rights of the smaller nationalities of Europe are placed upon an unassailable foundation, and until the military domination of Prussia is wholly and finally destroyed.

Here is an answer, in a few strong words to Prince Von Buelow's book, or any other book that may be written. This answer is all the more important because it interprets in essence the settled and agreed-upon policy of all the allied powers, of the powers that are showing such splendid coordination of military effort to bring defeat to Germany. The circle of fire and steel that is closing in upon the Teuton powers is narrowing every day; the pressure and the onpush will not be relaxed till the "military domination of Prussia is wholly and finally destroyed." The beginning of the end is at hand; and though the final struggle may yet be long and hard, every day brings the triumphant end nearer.

THE KAISER EXCITED.

Teuton newspapers announce that after the German navy returned from its "great victory" over the British in the Skagerack, the Kaiser rushed aboard the flagship and "kissed Admiral Scheer on the quarter-deck." On all the other ships he kissed the captains in turn. A writer in the London Chronicle christens the Emperor "All Highest Supreme Osculator," and adds: "Her were kisses all—that his victims had to endure, for it is officially announced that the excited Kaiser delivered a speech on each ship, firing off a broadside of spittle harangues." It was Kiss Me, 'Ardy this way over an endless line, in which his riddled fleet can be fun for ever, but would be perform in case of a real sea triumph.—Syracuse News.

RESPONSIBLE GOVERNMENT.

The New York Herald insists that the Cabinet will be the issue in the coming Presidential contest. The people will only have second-hand hand in deciding the Cabinet. The Cabinet that will govern the United States in an administrative sense will be the personal creation of the President, who may be elected by the people. And the Cabinet will be, so far as the people are concerned, a fixture for four years. Constitutionally, the electors have their hands tied. They cannot, as we can, in Canada, through our representatives, discipline or dismiss an unsatisfactory cabinet. We have responsible—real, representative—government in Canada, and as bad as we sometimes think our governments are, we have if we choose to exercise it, control our own cabinets. From knowledge of possession our good cousins in the United States, with all their boasted privileges, do not know the meaning of responsible government.

SCIENTIFIC FARMING.

It takes a long time for the prejudice of—of—uninformation to die out among some members of the farming community. Though the mass of farmers recognise the value of scientific principles, scientifically applied to soil treatment with a view to increased crop production, there are some farmers who scout all ideas of the beenfits of science, and will, perhaps, do so to the end of the chapter. All our accomplishments, however, in any field of activity, are due to the application of the principles of science. Science is only another word for knowledge, theoretically and practically applied.

It is a matter of knowledge founded upon experience that underdraining of farm fields is an important agency to increased or successful crop production. We have never in any year had its value so practically demonstrated as in this year of exceptional rainfall. In Otonabee township the largest in the county and one of the most fertile and generally well-farmed, the crop prospects are better than elsewhere. This is generally due to the lie of the land—numerous hill slopes that shed water and thus overcome the handicap of too much moisture. But where these conditions do not prevail there are, side by side, good crops and poor crops, or no crops at all. The good crops are to be found on underdrained fields. On these the farmer has been able to get early or earlier, and therefore earlier plant his seed. In these cases many farmers, in spite of the excessively rainy season, have crops of splendid appearance, and promise. On perhaps adjoining farms of equally good natural soil these are later, straggling and struggling crops, or in some cases, no crop at all. A drive through the township shows many bare, brown fields, water-soaked, with not a seed sprouted except, perhaps, of the industrious and ever present weed.

The contrast is easily explained: The farm and fields with good crops have had the benefit of under-draining, earlier seeding, and, consequently good crop promise. On the more barren fields the absence of under-draining accounts for late seeding, or no seeding at all, and bad farm crops or no crops at all. In the first case the farm realizes splendid interest in the form of fine crops on his investment in field drains; while the other farmer stands to lose as much in the shape of poor crops as under-draining would have cost him; or, if not that much, he stands to lose every year ten times more in loss of crop profit than the interest on the cost of a system of under-draining. Under-draining is a paradox; it is good for an unusually wet season, and is also good for an unusually dry season. It works both ways and is worth a great deal every year, and in a few years worth many times its cost.

The times are past when the farmer could almost "wish a crop" on himself—that is with virgin soil and scant tillage reap good crops. He has now to fight against partially or greatly exhausted soil, weeds, and unfavourable climatic conditions, and unequal rainfall, caused by the general removal of forest growth. We should like to see farmers generally awaken to the importance of treating their farms according to the principles of science — knowledge gained by scientific deduction and actual experience. In no other sphere has the principle of providing the essentials of good crops and farming at profit, been so well demonstrated as in the matter of under-draining. Under-draining provides, in the form of soil porosity and aeration, the only openings through which the farmers' investment, the farmers' work, does not seep away.

THE TURN OF THE TIDE.

The great [illegible] on the front has relieved the pent-up emotions of the Canadian people. Great things had already been achieved by the British

INTERNATIONAL BUSINESS WHEN THE WAR COMES TO AN END

Quite naturally many of the American papers are viewing with considerable alarm the proposals of the Entente Allies to enter into a trade compact by which each will adopt a preferential tariff for Allied products. Since the United States is not one of the Allies, such an arrangement would, of course, considerably limit the foreign trade expansion which is now the dream of American manufacturers. Moreover, as Judge Gary, the chairman of the United States Steel Corporation in an article in the July "System":—

> If the plans which have been discussed for organizing a commercial compact between England, France, Italy and Russia are consummated, German manufacturers will be shut out of those countries, and Germany will be compelled to seek her trade solely in the market which we hope to secure.

In view of these possible complications, it is not surprising to find writers in the American papers deploring what they call the prospect of a trade war to follow the war of arms, and delefully predicting that it will prolong the bitterness of racial strife. Apart from the complications, however there is a marked improvement among manufacturers towards securing greater Government protection for American trade than at present exists. The argument for higher protection is summarized by Judge Gary, in the article we have quoted. He says that when the war is over the European nations will find the greatest ready money market in the United States, and may be expected, therefore, to make a heavy drive on the American markets. As to the keenness of competition which Americans may expect even in their own markets, he says:—

> It may be expected that the nations will take a new start, and, in many respects, a new course, and will begin immediately to build on a better, firmer and more permanent basis for success and high achievement. We shall see the most active and persistent efforts to rebuild and extend and to succeed in the international race for supremacy that the world has ever witnessed. From adversity, will come greatre prosperity than ever before, from necessity will spring thought, and study and effort that will enable the survivors to reach greater heights of success than has been supposed to be within reach.

Europe is now buying on national credit, but once the war is over she will be forced to buy on personal credit and will have but a fraction of the present buying capacity. She will need money and this money must come from the nations whose stores have not been depleted by war. Therefore it is to be expected that the cost of production, including wages, will decrease in Europe, and that every effort will be concentrated upon gaining gold abroad through sales at lower prices.

To prevent European nations from underselling Americans in their own market, he advises higher protection, an industrial efficiency such as few firms have yet attained and a stop to the extravagant or useless expenditure of many millions of the national wealth, by national, state and municipal governments. In regard to the latter, it is true as he says, that waste or extravagance in the use of public money increases taxes, and by the amount of such increase handicaps producers in competition with outsiders. It is evident that people everywhere are realising that a great reorganising and constructive era is upon us, and that those who lag behind will soon be helplessly outdistanced. There will be such a national housecleaning, following this war as the world has never seen. We in Canada may well take cognisance of the signs of the times and conduct ourselves accordingly—Montreal Herald.

soldier, but, somehow, all the valor and sacrifice of the past two years had been almost forgotten in the long year of deadlock and comparative inactivity on the western front. Forgotten was the glorious rearguard action from Mons to the Marne that saved France; forgotten the rebound at the Marne when the British caught the flower of the Germany army like rats in a trap; forgotten the stand at St. Julien, Festubert, Hooge. Two years of defensive warfare on the western front, with a heavy toll in killed and wounded, coupled with the costly enterprises in the Gallipoli, and in Mesopotamia, had begun to try the patience and endurance of the British people at home and in the Dominions. No adequate return had yet been shown for the tremendous efforts everywhere put forth in the organising of men, munitions, and money. The patience of Canadians was particularly tried by insulting jibes in a section of the American Press and the ribald songs at American vaudeville shows reflecting on the honour and bravery of the British army. It is only natural, perhaps, that a country which has produced the marching song, "I Didn't Bring Up My Boy to be a Soldier," should also be responsible for the unjustifiable taunt, "Everyone is fighting now but England." The suggestion that Great Britain was sparing her own men in this war comes with bad grace from men in the United States whose interest in the European war is so largely one of finance. In Canada it was known that the Kitchener tradition, of preparedness before striking, would be followed inexorably to the last detail. It is Kitchener's army, Kitchener's plans, and Kitchener's invincible spirit that are now pitted against the German army of defence.—The Globe.

WAR HELPS AS WELL AS HARMS.

In most comments on war, especially when they come from pacifist sources, the plausible assumption is made that it destroys in such great numbers the young and strong men of each belligerent as seriously to menace the quality of that nation's next and future generations. That some injury of that sort is done, especially by a war such as that now waged in Europe, is indisputable, but a despatch from Salonika to The London Globe calls attention to the fact that while war does destroy strong men, it also, by good feeding and outdoor living, under careful medical attention, gives health and vigor to many who in peace would be deprived of both.

And the 'selection' of war is not altogether blind. The combination of intelligence with physical perfection does not save the man shot through the head or heart with a bullet or blown to pieces by a mine, but it does count something toward survival, and the men who came through a war have qualities highly satisfactory to the eugenist.

And it is not only "hard and brawn" writes the observer of the British soldiers in Salonika, "that the army has given them. These is an expression of character and alertness in almost every face that was not seen among the pale-cheeked foot ball crowds of the old days. In fact, if we were sending a contingent to a Worker's Manhood Exhibition, it would not be easy to find a better entry than the Salonika army as a whole."

All this will be painful to the pacifists, and they can attack it as a one-sided presentation of the case, but it is no more one-sided than their own, and they cannot get by or gloss over the fact that fighting nations are the stalwart nations, while those that have [illegible] pride and [illegible] are physically.—New York Times.

Rev. Dr. Symonds Deals With Spirit Of Church Union

That the spirit of church unity which has been so evident in many directions during recent years would receive a great impetus after the war was the opinion of Rev. Dr. Herbert Symonds, vicar of Christ Church Cathedral, Montreal, in his second sermon on "Church Unity in Canada," preached yesterday morning. The nineteenth century had witnessed many movements toward union in the co-operation of various denominations for the pursuance of humanitarian work, such as was seen in the Y.M.C.A., the Y.W.C.A., the Evangelical Alliance and the Student Christian Movement, and he expressed the hope that the feeling would become so predominant that the Anglicans would treat with the new United Church of Canada when it was formed with a view of joining them.

Canada led the world in progress toward church union, and this was to be accounted for by the pressure of practical questions like the settlement of the Northwest, where large numbers of people of all classes and denominations had settled and had learned to understand each other better. Each denomination had been compelled to sacrifice something in moving toward such a spirit of union as was consummated at the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church but they had done so believing that the road to progress led that way. Although each denomination was jealous of its own characteristics its leaders had learned to distinguish between the essential and the non-essential, and nothing that really mattered had been sacrificed.

Turning to the attitude of the Anglican Church, Dr. Symonds pointed out that 35 or 40 years ago the Anglican Communion set down the four conditions upon which it would discuss union with any other communion. They were: First, Nicene Creeds; third, the two sacraments of Baptism and the Lord's Supper; and, fourth, the historic Episcopate. Nothing was said about the Prayer Book, and thus it may be concluded that the question of the form of worship was not raised at all. The real difficulty was the question of the historic episcopate and that was made the more difficult because the Anglican Church itself was divided on the question. But Dr. Symonds thought that when the United Church was an accomplished fact some way would be found by which an understanding could be arrived at, as it was a simpler matter dealing with one church than with three.

He pointed out that there were two main conceptions of unity. The one was a unity based on authority and unquestionable obedience all believed in by the Church of Rome, and the other was a unity that sprang from a free and voluntary spirit. The first was autocratic and recognised the Pope as absolute monarch, but the other was essentially democratic. In the political world, France, England, America and Italy had decided in favour of democracy, and in Russia the movement was under way, and Dr. Symonds believed that history would follow the same course in matters of religion. A free and intelligent religion must prevail among a free and educated people, and if a people could live happily under a democratic form of secular government he saw no reason why the same conditions would not apply to religion. In his opinion some form of federation would probably be the most hopeful project in combining both liberty and unity.

Erroneous Idea That Italy Has Not Borne Share

Thomas Nelson Page Says No Country Has Put Forth Greater Efforts In Comparison to Her Strength

NEW YORK, July 3.—Mr. Thomas Nelson Page, American Ambassador to Italy, left on board the steamship St. Paul to return to his port. He said upon his departure:

"In reply to your question, which indicates what I have so often remarked, the want of general information in America as to the part which Italy has taken in the struggle on the side of the Allies, I would say that nothing has surprised me more than the idea to which you refer—that Italy has taken a less active part than the other members of this alliance in the serious operations of the war.

"It is not for me to discuss either the policies or the parts that different members of the alliance on either side have played in this terrible contest, but certainly I can correct an impression as erroneous as that which I find quite general in this country as to the point you mention, for the facts are no secret among those who have had opportunities for knowing them.

"I may not give my own opinion on policies, but it is certain that the vital interest of Italy demanded that she should, at whatever cost of blood and treasure, take her stand with the Allies, and that on this depended not only her present but her future. It is also the conviction of all who have had opportunity for observation that no country has put forth greater efforts in proportion to her strength than Italy, or has met the losses and borne the sufferings which the war has caused with greater fortitude.

"A glance at the map, and even a little knowledge of the history of the relations between Italy and her chief opponents show any one the extraordinary difficulties which Italy had to surmount to make any—even the least—advance in the mountain region, in which Austria fixed the boundaries between them when she turned Venice over to France after the battle of Sadowa.

"No more difficult region to penetrate exists along any front on which the war has raged since its beginning, and in this region of mountain peaks and precipices, fortified to the last point of military science and skill by Austria, the fighting has been as continuous on both sides, and, on both sides has been conducted with as great valor and persistence as at any other place on the frontier, hardly excepting Verdun, though more troops have been massed here.

"Of one thing you may be certain—Italy, like every other country in the war, feels her vital interests—even might say her very life—to be at stake and is putting forth every effort in the fight. Of her courage and her endurance and fortitude there can be no question if one considers the history of the Risorgimento, than which there is no more glorious page in the history of the world, whether in ancient or modern times.

PALACES ARE HOSPITALS.

"And it is not only the men, but the women of Italy, also, who are doing their utmost. There is not a woman in Italy, so far as I know, of high or low degree, who is not doing her part for Italy. All social life has ceased in Rome, and the Roman ladies—and the same may be said of the ladies throughout Italy, are giving themselves up absolutely to the work of aiding their soldiers and of relieving the needs of the wounded and of the poor on whom the war has entailed so much suffering. I do not believe that there is a palace in Rome which is not now used as a hospital or in some way in this work of mercy, and as the King of Italy is at the head of his armies in the field, so his gracious Queen leads in every good work of relief and mercy, and with her engaged in the same work is the Queen Mother.

"Naturally the American leaders have been glad to give what they could in assisting this work of mercy, and we have an excellent organization in Rome, known as the American Relief Clearing House for Italy, a branch of the International organization, which receives and distributes all supplies which may be sent. Mrs. Page has a thoroughly organized Ouvrier carried on by her and the other American ladies in Rome for relief of the suffering, as is done in other countries.

"I am glad to be able on the eve of my departure for Italy to make the foregoing statements, because I think it may serve to correct what seems to me a great misapprehension here on the part of many of our people."

753 FRENCH TOWNS RUINED BY GERMANS

PARIS, July 3.—Seven hundred and fifty-three communes, or townships, have been partly or totally destroyed through military operations in France since the beginning of the war, according to statistics gathered by the Ministry of the Interior with a view to ascertaining the total damage caused by the hostilities. These communes are distributed over eighty departments of France, including those in Ardennes, still occupied wholly by the Germans, who are in possession of 2,544 towns of the total of 32,247 in France, or seven per cent.

Houses to the number of 16,000 have been totally destroyed and 29,000 partly destroyed in these communes. In 143 communes the proportion of houses destroyed exceeds fifty per cent., while it is eighty per cent. in seventy-four towns and less than fifty per cent. in the remainder.

Public buildings destroyed in 426 communes were 331 churches, 320 schools, 208 town halls, 200 besides other public buildings of various sorts and forty bridges. Of these buildings fifty-six had been classed as historic monuments, including the Town Hall of Arras and the Cathedral and Town Hall of Rheims. Three hundred and thirty factories, which supported 37,000 persons, were destroyed.

SCHOOL REPORTS

The following is the report of S. S. No. 3, South Monaghan. The percentage of the total marks taken by each student is given. The standing required to pass is 40 per cent. on each subject and 60 per cent on the whole:

From Jr. IV. to Sr. IV.—Roy Rutherford 89, honours; Olive Atchison 76, honours; James Gainer, 74; Teresa Thompson 71; Marion Dawson 70.

From Jr. III. to Sr. III. — Reg. Atchison 74, Florence Deyell 72; Olive Dawson 61.

From Sr. II. to Jr. III. — Willie Lawrence 87, (promoted on trial).

From Jr. I. to Sr. I.—Leola Huggins 84, honours; Frank Wood 81, honours; Cora Atchison 74, Edna Dawson 61.

I. M. Brunswell, Teacher.

At the Head of Its Class.—Dr. MacNamara, M.P., the secretary of the Admiralty, is very fond of children, and probably no living man has a larger fund of amusing stories about them than he has. One of his best is the following: "A little boy once asked by his teacher, 'What proof have we from the Bible that it is not lawful to have more than one wife?' 'Because,' answered the bright youth quickly, 'it says that no man can serve two masters.'"

WOMEN OF FRANCE MODELS OF PATRIOTISM FOR WORLD

The remarkable effect which the battle of Verdun has had upon the women of France is a subject of interesting comment in which such eminent authorities as Mr. Maurice Donnay have taken part. The remark made by Mr. Protopopoff, vice president of the Russian Duma, on the occasion recently of his presence in Paris, to the effect that the Allies would have much to thank the Kaiser for, is being freely used in connection with the noble attitude of the French women in 1916.

It is being generally stated in the allied countries that few knew the people of France before the war. A distinguished French writer, who has written much on his own country, also recently made the same observation. Few knew the people of France, and still fewer knew what admirable manifestations of patriotism the French women were capable of.

"The French women is no a revelation for all the world," says the noted Italian author, Signor Sarti, and it is time that this fact should be made known to all the civilized world and that the misty ideas, the legends and the erroneous notions which had formerly gathered around the French women should now forever be dissipated.

"The mist," he adds, "grew from the slums of Paris and spread. Those who lived in Paris before the war, and especially those who went there seeking amusement, often gathered the false impression that the French woman was light and rather insensible and they formed this judgment from the products of the Paris streets and from the heroines of the novels, plays and scandals which were scattered about. These observers were not aware that the women whom they saw in Paris public resorts, at the race tracks, in the casinos and music halls in the night restaurants, the smokers of opium and the tango dancers; the weaklings of the Latin quarter and the 'celebrities' of the cabarets, were for the most part not French at all, but were women recruited from all the countries of the world.

"Nor were certain famous artists who were advertised for this extravagancies typical French women. The real French women were practically never seen at the Cafe Maxim, in the Montmarte resorts, at the extravagant balls, at the eccentric festivals, or at the gatherings where the rights of women were advocated.

WAR SHOWED TRUE QUALITIES.

"When the war broke out the women of France stood revealed just as the French army stood revealed and just as the French people stood revealed. Not a single one of them remained with arms folded. Not a single one of them held back from the first duty of a French woman. Not one of them failed to answer the mobilization appeal which the country finally had to make to its feminine element.

"The spectacle has been touching and magnificent. The great German onslaught at Verdun marked the culminating demand on the resources of heroism and patriotism of the French woman.

"In France there are at present three associations of prominent women all gathered around the French Red Cross as a centre and under the orders of the military authorities. They have, however a certain autonomy. These are the Society for Aid to Wounded Soldiers, the Association of French Women and the Union of the Women of France.

"The first of these it at present operating 800 hospitals, ninety-three relief stations and seventy infirmaries at railway stations. It has already spent since the beginning of the war about 50,000,00 francs ($10,000,000). It has in service 15,000 nurses and 12,000 assistant nurses.

"Three armies of women of wealth thus constantly render assistance to wounded soldiers. Another multitude of women of the wealthy classes is working for the indigent families of soldiers, for the mutilated, for the blind, and for the disabled. Such is the work of women of means, but to whatever social rank they belong French women are showing an equal energy and a like spirit of self-denial. Those who are not working for the State are working for the public service and are teaching in schools and in art classes. Those who are not working for the army are working for commerce, for industry, for agriculture. For more than a year women have replaced men in a hundred varieties of business.

"Admirable and remarkable has been the response of the working women to the call for laborers in the government munitions factories. Women, young and old, have volunteered, have left the cities and have placed themselves practically under a military regime to work in the great foundaries and factories where arms and munitions are produced.

"In 1914 the general mobilization of the French army completely disorganized the economic constitution of the country, but immediately the feminine element started the wheels in motion and in the great centres the mothers, the wives, the sisters and the daughters of the men who had gone to fight for the defence of the country began to handle business, to direct factories, to keep accounts, and to perform work that previously had been considered as possible only for men. It was this prodigious feminine activity which saved the country from financial catastrophe and even from famine.

WOMEN SAVED FRANCE.

"The women replace the men in all the offices, in all the factories, on the railroads, in the navigation of canals and rivers, and in the work in the fields. Without them it would have been impossible to solve the agricultural problem.

"Mr. Viviani, when Premier, in a memorable proclamation praised the work performed by the French peasant woman during the first year of the war, and declared that it would be forever impossible to appreciate at their due value the services thus rendered to the state. To-day, when another year has almost gone by, the peasant women are working with agricultural machines, are taking care of the harvests, and are raising live stock.

"In Flanders women are cultivating the sugar beets, are loading them on canal boats, and are hauling these boats along the water to the sugar factories. At present natives of Algeria and Madagascar are being trained to aid the French women in their agricultural work, but the services which they have hitherto been able to render are of trivial importance in comparison with the work which the women themselves are doing.

"The employment of female labour is now so general that there is hardly any field of activity which is not crowded with them. They are even in the military barracks.

"Colonel Giuffray, in command of a regiment at Caen, recently made the experiment of putting women to work in the military barracks in place of soldiers, in the infirmaries, offices, kitchens and laundries. The experiment was regarded as a distinct success, a double advantage being thus obtained, as these women were able to earn a living for themselves and the men who had been employed in those services were sent to the front.

"In the greatest military hospital of Paris—that of Val de Grace—all the soldiers who were employed in the kitchens have been replaced by women of the Red Cross, and this example is about to be followed in other hospitals. It is, however, in the munitions factories that feminine labour has been utilized by the government in the largest way.

"Statistics issued by the War Department show that in January last 109,300 women were employed in the munitions factories. Since then the number has been greatly increased and it is stated that the courage and devotion of these women in working in the munitions factories has permitted several army corps of soldiers to go to the front to fight the enemy."

The Molasses Attitude of Mind

By Herbert Kaufman

Indifference is the invincible enemy of progress. There's no way to handle people who constantly sidestep issues, shift ground, yield for the moment, and forthwith lapse back into their old notions. Passivity is an impregnable antagonist. Like molasses, it can't be marked by any method, but absorbs every attempt to make an impression and resumes its placid, unchanged surface.

"Don't give a hangness" is impregnable. It doesn't want to improve. It isn't sufficiently interested. It has a seal mind—no argument can hold it.

"What's the use," and "It can't be done," and "if," and "perhaps," and "We're getting along well enough as it is"; these are the little leeches which drain the exuitant, red blood out of enthusiastic endeavor. Thousands of splendid plans die daily, only because of inert support. They can't get a try-out. Pessimism wet-blankets them.

You always stand a show with a man who takes a stand and combats you—when he's whipped, he's won.

But these human quagmires, these listless, slippery, complacent masses of so-called conservatives, simply smother the bulk of the world's new ideas. They're the trying problem of business men who can't get their broad conceptions executed. They're the curse of the republic. Their thoughtless votes continually elect the wrong men to important offices. How can we wrestle with jellyfish or build with blanc mange?

Enough dynamite will knock down a mountain but a mountain of dynamite won't disturb the equanimity of a quicksand.

Nothing is so utterly exasperating and discouraging as the self-satisfied multitudes who won't bother themselves sufficiently to be convinced of their necessities.

BIG BRITISH DRIVE NOW ON "LAST WORD IN WARFARE"

The British-French offensive in France, with its preceding five-day bombardment, is described by the military experts in that theatre of operations as the "last word in scientific warfare."

Here are some of the things the British and French did as a preliminary to their drive through the German front near the Somme:

Built 3,000 miles of railroads to facilitate moving munitions and troops and handling the wounded.

Put a metal surface on all the turnpikes.

Rebuilt or strengthened every bridge and railroad.

Concentrated 1,200,000 fighting men, backed by 500,000 auxiliary workmen, doctors, bridge and railroad builders.

Filled the whole region with hidden guns, new British guns, of the largest calibre, many of them 15-inch mortars, and manned these guns with French artillery experts.

Installed all over the region a new 'phone system with concrete poles, augmented by a network of telegraph wires and stations and field hospitals.

Buried ammunition everywhere, together with medicines and food supplies, so that, no matter where the troops moved, in an emergency, they would have shells and food without the trouble and delay of ordinary modes of transportation.

Concealed from the Germans the massing of the allied troops back of the front.

Arranged the big guns in arcs in such a way as to provide concentric fire from many guns on small areas of the German trenches.

In the preliminary five-day bombardment the British-French army fired 1,000,000 shells over a ninety-mile front.

GERMAN COMMENT ON THE ALLIES' DRIVE

AMSTERDAM, July 3, (via London)—The beginning of the Anglo-French offensive is announced by the German press under heavy headlines.

From th great Champagne battle of last summer," says the Cologne Gazette, "we know the imposing preparations with which the French general staff introduces such enterprises and we can be certain that on the enemy's side nothing will be lacking as regards technical means for piercing our lines. For seven days artillery fire was poured over our trenches and our brave troops must have greeted it as a deliverance when at last the enemy storming columns came on.

'MOMENT IS DECISIVE'.

"We should not be deceived by the fact that the enemy reports already speak of great successes. Only within the next few days will it be possible to ascertain how far the general attack has brought the enemy."

The Cologne Volks Zeitung refers to the difficulty of holding the foremost German trenches in the face of the enormous energy of the attack, but notes that the attacking forces have not yet succeeded in piercing the German front.

"Although Germany confronts the coming battle with confidence," says this newspaper, nevertheless the moment is without doubt fraught with significance and is perhaps decisive."

ENGLAND BEARS BURDEN.

England, it adds, now for the first time has to bear the main burden.

"The English Army in France" it continues, "is strong and well equipped. England's industry, after it was organized for the war, has scored great achievements in the manufacture of guns and shells, and, thus prepared, it believes it can now at last join the war dance on the soil of northern France. As regards the military fitness of the English troops it has now an opportunity to show what it is."

BIG LANDOWNERS SLAYING GERMANY, SAYS LIEBKNECHT

"VAMPIRE OF IMPERIALISM IS SUCKING BLOOD OF BELGIUM, POLAND AND SERBIA," HE DECLARES.

Berlin, July 3.—A demonstration in favor of Dr. Karl Liebknecht, the Socialist leader, who was sentenced to 30 months in prison for attempted high treason, was held here to-day despite the police precautions. In addition to his sentence of penal servitude Dr. Liebknecht was dismissed from the army.

Although the trial before a court martial was held in secret, it was learned that part of the charge was based upon a manifesto Liebknecht circulated, which was suppressed by the Government. This manifesto said in part:

Poverty and misery, need and starvation are ruling in Germany, Belgium, Poland and Serbia, whose blood the vampire of Imperialism is sucking, resembles vast cemeteries.

"Consider well this fact: As long as the German people does not arise in force through its own will, the assassination of the people will continue.

"Let thousands of voices shout: 'Down with the shameless extermination of nations.' 'Down with those responsible for these crimes!'

"Our enemy is not the English, French or Russian people, but the great German landed proprietors, the German capitalists and their executive committee.

"Forward, let us fight the Government, let us fight these mortal enemies of all freedom. Let us fight for everything which means the future and the triumph of the working classes, the future of humanity and civilization!"

The manifesto was written in April and secretly promulgated.

G. T. R. FIREMAN LOST BOTH FEET

LINDSAY, July 4.—Corporal Ernest Barr, a Belleville boy, who left with the 34th Battery, has suffered the loss of both feet by amputation, which was necessitated by the terrible wounds he sustained in the Zillebeke fighting in Belgium. The operation was performed on Thuraday, June 8th. He will be removed to a base hospital at as early a date as possible. Corporal Carr was a G.T.R. fireman by occupation. He had been very fortunate in all the big engagements of the past year and a half on the firing line.

Vancouver M. D. Was Bayonetted

Former Minden Man Met a Horrible Fate at the Hands of the Germans

VANCOUVER, July 4.—The bayoneting of Captain W. H. Haight, of this city, medical officer of the First C. M. R., British Columbia, at the hands of the murderous Huns, is reported to the minister of militia in a letter from Surgeon-General Jones, director in medical services. Surgeon Jones says:

"I have heard to-day a ghastly story about Captain W. R. W. Haight, medical officer of the First C.M.R. British Columbia). He was reported missing at first, but when the lost ground was regained the regimental aid post was found to have been filled with wounded.

"Haight had remained doing his duty, attending to the wounded. One and all, patients and medical officers, had been bayonetted and done to death in a most brutal manner. He was a very excellent young officer and won great praise."

The late Dr. Haight was well known in Vancouver, having acted as admitting officer in 1912 and 1913 and also being connected with the medical staff for a time in 1915. He left the hospital as surgeon to troops, being transported on the Empress liners between Australia and Marseilles, France, later returning to the hospital and after staying there a few months left last December for the front. He was 27 years old and a native of Minden, Ontario.

THIS MORNING'S POLICE COURT

At this morning's police court two cases came before Magistrate Rush and were disposed of with the usual fines.

A young Italian pleaded guilty to a charge of being drunk and disorderly and was given the usual option of contributing two dollars to the coffers of justice or of spending ten days on hiB.

A blacklister who was fined ten dollars yesterday for being drunk was up again this morning on a charge of having liquor in his possession whilst on the prohibited list. License Inspector Stewart had gone to the house of the accused and found a keg of Port Hope strong juice in his bedroom. His Worship after giving him a severe warning, assessed him ten dollars and ordered the liquor to be disposed of.

Italy and Russia are consummated.

PORTER S. WHITE'S NEW GROCERY STORE

Mr. Porter S. White has moved his stock of groceries, etc., next door south of his former premises. The new store has been fitted up in a much more modern manner, and refurnished with new grocery store improvements. Patrons of this store will find Mr. White's new premises very compact and convenient. In addition to a new and attractive white front entrance, there are two other entrances from the rear, leading off the Market Square, which will prove handy for farmers and buyers at the market. The interior of the new store is neatly and suitably shelved and furnished. A series of enclosed, sanitary bins has been installed behind the main counter, and other store equipments of an up-to-date character introduced.

In the lay-out of this new store abundant room has been found for a well-assorted stock of general groceries, provisions, fruits, vegetables, etc. The business office occupies a convenient recess near one of the rear entrances, and good lighting has been well provided for. The store front is set back about three feet from the usual store line to admit of a recess for showing goods away from dust, and to supplement an open window display.

THE NEW NAVY IS BEING BUILT HOUR BY HOUR

A correspondent of the London Times, with a fine disregard for some press censors, gives an insight into the steady creation of Britain's new navy, when he says:

I have seen on the Tyne and the Clyde the men who do these things, and more; the men who build and equip the fleets of Britain. The merchantman is a work of months, and the brains of many men go to her making, but the battleship is as different from the tramp as is an alarm clock from a ship's chronometer. The man who builds a battleship has to build a hull that has to stand not only the strains of the seas, but the titanic forces of the great guns, and the energy of engines equal to the horsepower of a fleet of tramps.

By the river bank is a towering mass of steel and iron. It is almost, not quite, a battleship. She has been launched from the ways about a month and now a hive of workmen swarm about her tall sides and huss and clatter in the great hull. She is the embodiment of all that man has put into this business of killing his fellows that he has taken up so seriously of late years. The bows, as sharp as a knife, curve upwards until one would almost think she would topple over. She looks as if she was made to cut the seas and spurn them past her sides and in reality that is what she will do. Her decks are iron for all wood planking has long ago been discarded. A shell landing on wooden decks would start fires and for this reason these new decks are of steel.

Now all of you people who have not seen these things take warning and remember yourself in time when you are next tempted to say, "What are we doing in the way of building ships? Why haven't we got submarines and other craft like the Germans?" Such doubtings are worse than heresy. They are rank injustice, for up there in the North there are men who are giving you their very life blood that you should be free. There is one firm there that has given the government 1,000 indicated horse power per day since the beginning of the year. To do that the men with the brains had to work long into the night, the men who used their hands had to sweat and toil for long shifts, but they have achieved their object, and will be able to say to themselves, "We have done our best."

The following is a balanced ration for a 1000-lb. cow producing three to four gallons of four per cent. per day: 30 lbs. of corn ensilage, 12 lbs. of alfalfa hay, 7 1-2 lbs. of your grain mixture made up of 2 parts ground oats, 1 part bran, 1 per cent. salt.

Egg testers are to be easily had from manufacturers and dealers in poultry supplies. A home made tester is simply made with a box, paper or wood, of a sufficient size to hold a lamp, candle or lantern, with a hole in the top directly over the flame. In one side of the box cut a hole, smaller in size than an egg, directly opposite the flame.

PRESENTATION TO TEACHER

Pupils of School Section No. 8, Douro, Say Farewell to Miss Dalton

On Friday last the pupils of S. S. No. 8, Douro, assembled to bid farewell to their teacher, Miss L. Dalton, and for the purpose of showing their appreciation of the work taken by her. The afternoon was pleasantly spent by a short programme by the pupils and closed by the presentation of a silver butter dish by Esther McCarthy, while Nellie McCarthy read the following address:

Dear Teacher,—We, the pupils of S. S. No. 8, Douro, feel that we could not allow this opportunity to pass without showing you the honour and respect you so richly deserve.

We are indeed sorry to learn that your stay could not be prolonged, but we trust that your work in the future will be as successful as it has been for the past year.

During the short term with us you have faithfully fulfilled your duty as teacher, always willing to aid us in our numerous difficulties and encouraging us by your instructive, congenial words, and enlightened the school room during the many dark days by your kind and loving smiles which were always to be seen in spite of the many worries and troubles caused by us. We indeed tried your patience on many occasions, but owing to your cheerful disposition you bore them patiently, which imprinted on our minds lessons never to be forgotten. You not only won the love and good wishes of your pupils, but the community at large. We therefore avail ourselves of this opportunity to present you with this trivial gift, not alone for its intrinsic value but as a token of our love and good wishes and to impress more strongly on your mind the many pleasant memories while among us.

Signed on behalf of the section—

Nellie McCarthy,
Esther McCarthy,
Marie Nolan.

BROTHERS' DEATH FEW HOURS APART

BELLEVILLE, July 4.—Dr. James Franklin Mather and his brother, Adam Mather, died, the former in California, whither he had gone for his health, and the latter in this city, both on Friday evening last. Dr. Mather was a graduate of Queen's Medical School, and practiced in Perth and Belleville. He was of middle age. Adam Mather was a real estate agent and a produce merchant in recent years. Their deaths were only a few hours apart.

HUNGARIANS IN ITALY ASK TO DEFEN DHOMES

ROME, June 27.—The Trentino correspondent of the Roma Giornale d'Italia writes that the Austrian retreat is partly due to the profound dissatisfaction existing among the Hungarian contingent on the Italian front. Following a Russian offensive these contingents requested their officers to inform the commander-in-chief that they preferred to defend their own country rather than invading Italy.

A high Austrian officer taken prisoner declared the Russian advance had caused the despatch of several Hungarian regiments to the eastern front.

TURNBULLS

Whole Battalion Surrendered at Fricourt

Examiner Special:

LONDON, July 4.—A whole battalion of German infantry about 1,000 strong, surrendered to the British during the fighting near Fricourt yesterday.

LONDON, July 4.—The German battalion captured consisted of 630 men and officers, of the 186th Regiment of Prussian infantry. Rushing up to fill the gaps the entire battalion was caught by a devastating fire upon the shallow trenches behind which they attempted to fight. They threw up their hands in token of surrender.

Attacks Repulsed Is Berlin Claim

Special to the Examiner.

BERLIN, July 4.—British troops in strong force attacked German positions at Thiepval and La Boiselle last night, but were everywhere repulsed with heavy losses, the German War Office claimed this afternoon. The British did not repeat their attacks against the German right, north of Ancre Brook. South of the Somme strong French forces attacked at Barleup and Belloy, but were everywhere repulsed, with heavy losses. Bitter fighting occurred in the village of Herbecourt, west of Peronne. The French penetrated the village but were afterward ejected.

Lincoln Sentenced To Three Years

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 4.—Ignatius Lincoln, ex-M.P., and alleged German spy, to-day was sentenced to three years' imprisonment on a forgery charge, which he was extradicted from the United States. It is not known when he will be court-martialled as a spy.

Berlin Claims The Russians Were Beaten

Examiner Special:

BERLIN, July 4.—The German War Office claims the Russians have been defeated by the Austrians in a severe battle in Galicia.

Sofia Bombarded By French Areoplane

Special Wire to The Examiner.

BUCHAREST, Roumania, July 4.—Sofia, capital of Bulgaria, was bombarded by a French aeroplane squadron to-day. The Roumanian Government has prohibited all exports to Austria, and has seized 250 cars and six locomotives interned here by the Austrians when the Russians advanced into Bukowina.

The Enemy Plans New Submarine Policy

Examiner Special:

COPENHAGEN, July 4. — Germany is about to embark on a new policy of indiscriminate submarining, Captain Persius, German Naval critic, writes in the Berlin Tageblatt.

Germany's object, Persius says, will be to force England to respect international law. Germany has enough submarines to harm British trade considerably, and prevent the shipment of munitions to France, he declares.

LOCAL PEOPLE LEFT ON PILGRIMAGE

The annual pilgrimage to St. Anne de Beaupre under the auspices of the Archbishop of Kingston, passed through the city to-day at noon, and many local people availed themselves of this excellent opportunity of visiting the famous shrine of St. Anne, situated below Quebec on the banks of the St. Lawrence. A long train of coaches left the C.P.R. station at 1.30 p.m., while many others left by G.T.R. and will make connections at Montreal.

HAYING BECOMING GENERAL LOCALLY

In a few sections of the country haying was commenced last week and should become general during the next four or five days. The crop is exceptionally heavy in most places and not a few farmers will bulge their barns and stack the rest outside with a covering of some kind. By the way the "choo-choo" season of hay fever is about due, affording an excellent excuse for holidays far from the annoying pollen, if this explanation is a correct one.

EXCURSION GREAT SUCCESS

The excursion under the auspices of Court Stanley, A.O.F. on Dominion Day to Mt. Julian, Stoney Lake, was a most successful and enjoyable event. Over 200 people were on board the steamer "Stoney Lake" when she left Peterborough. Mt. Julian was reached at one o'clock and the excursionists had a pleasant three hours' stay at this beautiful spot. The weather conditions were delightful.

SIR WILFRID CRITICIZES

FRENCH POPULATION OF HULL THINKS HE BOUGHT TO AVOID THEM.

OTTAWA, June 28.—There is some adverse criticism of Sir Wilfrid Laurier to-day among the French population of Hull. They are having an all-week celebration of St. Jean Baptiste Day and an elaborate programme is being carried out. Henri Bourassa delivered a harangue on bilingualism Sunday night, and Sir Wilfrid was down to speak last night. He cancelled the engagement, the reason assigned being that he had an acute dental trouble necessitating the removal of two teeth yesterday. The recovery has been quick, however, for on Saturday the Liberal Leader is to address a recruiting meeting in the Eastern Townships.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

Griffith Up in Arms Against "Bean Ball"

Manager of Senators Takes Drastic Means to Bring Attention to Acts of Boston Pitchers

When Clarke Griffith was hit in the face by "Sam" Agnew at Washington Friday, the manager of the Senators then and there became a martyr to a cause that for three years has been what many think a disgrace to Boston baseball, if not to the entire American League, says the New York Herald. On the face of it the riotous happenings at Washington, started by Carl Mays, who hit George McBride with a pitched ball, and ended by interference of police, would seem to be the only one of the many incidents of the national pastime wherein players under stress of excitement lose control of temper and forget surroundings. But such is not the case.

It would be unfair to Griffith to say that the whole proceeding was premeditated by him, as that would in a way convict Griffith, and in this case at least Griffith is acting in the role of a reformer. Also Griffith is using desperate means to attempt a correction of Boston's fault that has long been dangerous to the good health of opposing ball players.

Among the players there is a strong conviction that Boston Red Sox pitchers have been intentionally using a "bean ball" with the purpose of frightening opposing batters. Hubert Leonard is said to have proudly boasted of "dusting off" such men as "Ty" Cobb and like stars. On many occasions batters have only been kept out of a fist fight with Leonard by prompt interference of cooler heads. New York 'fans' will remember a recent incident at the Polo Ground when Leslie Nunamaker threw a bat at Leonard, and did it because Leonard just missed hitting Nunamaker on the head with a pitched ball.

GRIFFITH AIRS VIEWS.

Only a few days ago Griffith gave his views of such criminal actions, as he termed them. He said at that time he had spoken to Byron Bancroft Johnson about the actions of the Boston pitchers but had never received any satisfaction from the president of the league. Griffith then promised that he would forcibly bring the matter to the attention of Mr. Johnson, even if he had to take drastic action himself. And it seems he has taken this drastic action:

"I have warned 'Bill' Carrigan not to allow his pitchers to take any liberties with my players,' said Griffith. 'I informed Carrigan that any attempt to use the 'bean ball' would be the signal for action on my part.

"I fully intend to take care of my players and I do not think I would be doing my duty if I stood aside, and allowed Leonard and others to deliberately throw at the head of a man. I certainly will be ready for war the first time it is tried. Just what I will do I am not certain of myself, but I surely think that the instant one of my players is hit by a pitched ball I will take a bat and hammer some sense into the head of the Boston pitcher.

"For three years now Boston pitchers have been trying to 'kill' the other players of the league. Maybe this is too strongly put, but surely they have driven the opposing players away from the plate by unfair tactics. There is nothing sportsmanlike in seeing how close one can come to hitting a batter just to frighten that batter.

"I want Mr. Johnson to establish a rule against such procedure. He could stop the Boston tactics immediately if he would. But to date he has only seen fit to ignore the demands of the seven other managers in the league."

Undoubtedly this was the state of mind of Griffith when Mays hit McBride in the game of Friday. And undoubtedly this started Griffith on the warpath and resulted in his being hit in the face by Agnew.

Whether or not the action of Griffith will accomplish his purpose time only can tell, but it is certain that Mr. Johnson will get a full report of the fight from the umpires at the game. Also he possibly will get a more complete report from Griffith. That Griffith is right is the opinion of many disinterested critics of baseball.

TY COBB PULLS OFF A GRANDSTAND PLAY

This Time Throws His Bat at the Stand—Is Put Out of The Game

Jennings Comes to His Rescue and is Also Banished by Umpire.

CHICAGO, July 4.—Detroit lost its fourth straight game to Chicago Sunday, when the visitors were defeated in a twelve-inning game, 1 to 0. In addition the visitors lost the services of Tyrus Cobb and Manager Jennings through the agency of Umpire Nalnin. Cobb was in the seventh inning, and with [illegible] call two and three on him, Russel shot a swift one straight into the mitt of Schalk. The umpire called it a strike, whereupon Cobb addressed a few remarks to him and threw his bat into the grandstand. At the spot where it struck no spectators were seated, having withdrawn a moment before on account of a drizzling rain. Manager Jennings came to the rescue of his player, whereupon each was banished.

PETERBORO CLEANED UP AT PORT HOPE

Local Horses in the Money in Both Races

In connection with the demonstration at Port Hope on the 1st of July several good races were run off, in which local owned horses won all the prize money but first in the 2.30 race. The following are the results:

2.35 Class, one mile heats:
Susie Hal, Dr. Johnson, of Peterborough 1 2 1 1
Jimmy Direct, F. Montgomery of Peterborough 2 1 2 2
Sadella, R. Elmhirst, Keene. 3 3 4 3
Sadie Bell, J. Noden, Corono 4 4 3 4

2.30 Class, Half-mile Heats.
Sir Walter, Dr. Johnson of Port Hope 1 1 1
Dr. Johnson, R. Jones, of Peterborough. 2 3 2
Ora Medium, F. Montgomery of Peterborough 3 2 3
Pathseeker, G. Redpath, of Camborne 4 4 4
Little Jerry, J. D. McIntosh, Cobourg 6 5 5
1.09, 108 1-2, 1.09.

Necessary Explanations—The following notice was recently exhibited in a certain large church: "The service on Sunday morning it at 11 o.m. The supposition that it is ten minutes later is a mistake. Young men are not excluded from the week night service. The seats in the front portion of the church have been carefully examined. They are quite sound and may be trusted not to give way. It is quite legitimate to join in the singing. The object of the choir is to encourage—not discourage—the congregation."

The Proper Truss For Hernia

Those who have been disabled by rupture and who have had to resort to a truss of some kind for relief, but who have failed to receive the help they hoped for, will be interested in the visit of the Truss Specialist who is to visit Peterborough to-morrow. The construction of certain trusses have been the cause of much unnecessary suffering. Henry O. Massey in speaking of instrumental supports, makes use of the following language: "Many surgeons and almost every surgeon's instrument maker, have thought proper to vary the form of the truss, and to prescribe different rules for the duration and force of the pressure, but almost all have agreed in determining that the pressure should be made upon the abdominal ring." It is contended, however, that this is precisely the circumstance in which so many trusses have been defective, and that is the frequent failure of the purpose for which they are designed. When made according to the above principle, that has led to such a variety of the mode of truss construction. The special advantages of Dr. Smith's truss will be fully demonstrated by the specialist to-morrow at E. L. Payne's drug store, corner of George and Simcoe streets.

Where his Duty Was.—A Scottish parish minister met the laird's gamekeeper one day and said to him—"I say, Davidson, why is it I never see you in church?" "Well, sir," replied Davidson, "I don't want to hurt the attendance." "Hurt the attendance! What do you mean?" asked the minister in surprise. "Well, sir, you see," replied the gamekeeper, "there are about a dozen men in the parish that go to church when I'm not there, and would go poaching if I went to the church."

CHAMPION GOLFERS OF GREAT BRITAIN SELL THEIR CLUBS TO AID WOUNDED—To aid the three hospitals in Southend, a golf match was arranged between Edward Hay, ex-champion, J. B. Batley, international champion, and other golfers. After the game, which netted over $500 for the hospital, the clubs used by the players were sold at auction and brought $250 additional funds for the hospital.

Suffragette Was In The Lime Light

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, July 4. — Ten thousand hearers standing in a broiling sun to-day saw the reference to the Mexican problem in the Fourth of July speech by President Wilson at the dedication of the new home of the American Federation of Labour when he declared patience, candor, and the desire to get together constitute the solution of all difficulty.

As the President concluded these words, Mabel Vernon of Nevada arose from a chair in the grandstand, and, waving a woman suffragette banner, shouted, "If you sincerely want common understanding you will get out of committee, the national suffrage amendment."

Italian Cheated The Gallows—Was Alone a Few Minutes

GUELPH, July 4.—Tony Legatto, the Italian who was to hang to-morrow morning for murder, cut his throat with the handle of a tin cup this morning and bled to death. The watchmen were away for a few minutes when the condemned man seized the opportunity to suicide.

PRESENTATION TO BRIDGENORTH TEACHER BEFORE ENLISTING

Mr. L. W. Copp, teacher of the Bridgenorth school, resigned his position at the end of the term to enlist for active service overseas. The following address was read to him with a presentation from the scholars:

To Mr. L. W. Copp:

Dear Friend and Teacher,— Now that the time has come when we must bid farewell, we, your friends and pupils wish to take this opportunity of expressing our regret that your stay among us has been so short. But while you have not been long with us, we can assure you that the deep interest you have taken in your work, the example you have held up to those under your special care, and the high ideals you have endeavoured to instil into the lives of our young people have won for you a warm place in the affections of all, the influence of which will long remain with us.

We remember your kindly energies which were directed in every possible channel for good. In the Epworth League, the Sunday school, the club and the services of the church your help has been greatly appreciated and we trust, fraught with blessing to yourself as well as to us.

While we lament the conditions that have brought about this greatest of the world's struggles, we are thankful for, and proud of the noble self sacrifice that has been and is being manifested by so many of our young Canadians. We congratulate you on the breadth of vision that enables you to look upon the call of the Empire as a call of duty to humanity and right, and as you go out to engage in the arduous duties of active service our prayers shall be for your safety in the times of danger. Anything we could say or do would convey but little of the feeling of regard we have towards you, but as a slight token of our esteem we ask you to accept this gift, and may it prove a useful one as well as a reminder of your many friends in Bridgenorth.

Signed on behalf of the school and young people of the section,
Jean Kelly,
Mamie Mann,

PAPER UNDER MILITARY GUARD

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., June 28.—Lieut.-Col. Chambers, chief press censor for Canada, arrived here on last evening's train from Ottawa and was met at the station by Lieut.-Col. Jones commanding the 237th Overseas Battalion, and Chief Vincent, of the city police. A quarter of an hour later a guard from the 237th marched to the office of the Sault Express and took possession of it by direction of the chief press censor, under authority of the Order-in-Council of June 10th last.

Sentries are on duty at both doors of the newspaper office, and the editor will be kept under suspension for three months. The job printing plant will continue.

CAUSE FOR ACTION.

This drastic action of the censorship authorities is due to the publication of an anti-recruiting article printed in the Express on the 23rd instant, which, according to the chief press censor, contained statements calculated to cause disaffection to His Majesty, to assist annd encourage the enemy, and to prevent embarrass and hinder the successful prosecution of the war. The article complained of said that Canada had sacrificed enough men and that Britain should get many others required from India. The Express is a Liberal paper, established in 1887, and is published by C. N. Smith, a former member of the Legislature.

AN ANCIENT ROMANCE.

The book of Ruth is the greatest pastoral idyl in literature. It is founded on loving kindness, the loving kindness of the Moabitess revealed by her family, and the loving kindness of Boaz, the wealthy Israelite, to Ruth his kinswoman. It also contains the germ of that great-heartedness which is the centre of the gospel of Christian love. It is a book which opens with tears and famine and ends with the sound of wedding bells. The story turns upon the straightforwardness of Boaz, who showed kindness and manliness to Ruth, a member of a nation that was Israel's foe, and in that kindness founded a new house, the house of Jesse and David, the royal line that begat a greater than David. It was the first mingling of the blood of the Jew and the Gentile, symbolic of the cosmopolitan width of the Christian religion. It was the sign that that religion was not to be founded upon wealth, or upon social caste, but upon the large, wholesome love of the human heart. Boaz is immortal among Bible heroes for his kindness, his plain every-day generosity, his sense of protection and care for the lonely, unprotected Moabitish girl, his dead kinsman's wife, who in her poverty gleaned in his harvest field after the reapers. Boaz gave order to glean even among the sheaves of barley, and by his large-heartedness gained a wife, and more than that, made a place for himself in that immortal company who are renowned for naught but for being kind.—Christian Herald.

Cadorna Triumphed By Joffre's Strategy

MILAN, July 3.—A vivid story of how Cadorna paralysed Austria's giant plans of invasion in Northern Italy was told to-day in the Corriere della Sera by Luigi Barzini.

The narrative opens with a frank confession that despite the infinite care exercised in the Italian calculation of enemy forces, published at the outset of the Austrian offensive, that estimate turns out to have been considerably too low. Evidence since gathered upon the battlefields of the Trentino plateaus demonstrates that the Austrians massed over half a million men in the tourtuous territory vetween the Adige and the Brenta.

Cadorna never for a moment expected his troops to be able to withstand the terrific Austrian onslaught by standing on their advanced positions. He was well aware that he must adopt tactics similar to those whereby Joffre stemmed the tidal wave of the German invasion. Therefore he arranged the withdrawal of somewhat asalagous to Joffre's, but on a very much smaller scale, fitting his definite barrier line on the eastern and southern verge of the Asiago plateau at the branching of the Novegno River, and upon the ridge between the Adige and the Val Arsa streams, with his supports on the east at Lisser and on the west at Pasubio, and Coni Zugna.

Cadorna on May 21 issued order to start the constitution of a brand new army. The next night the troops intended for its formation were on the march from camps and depots at every part of the war zone and beyond. All roads and railways in this region of Northern Italy right up to the very stations under bombardment by the enemy seethed with military movement. Thousands of civil engineers worked at the construction of new wharves and railway side tracks for loading and unloading. For four days and four nights the Italian State railways surpassed by one-third of their maximum theoretical capacity by transporting some three-quarters of a million troops, over 20,000 officers, 1,000 wagons, and about 100,000 quarupeds. The second grand new army was marshalled on spot ready for action and that day sure signs apepared of the Austrian advance being definitely checked.

Forthwith Cardona flashed the order to every sector of the Asiago plateau: "Up men and at them."

The next day, June 3, a like command let loose a tremendous attack toward the Col Santo.

Meantime there was being performed a miracle of motor cars and motor lorries. In a single night an entire division was transported to the Carnic Alps and to the Pasubio region in automobiles, 300 motor lorries being allotted for the convenience of each brigade. Often times along improvised tracks whole batteries of cannon were rushed up to the Trentino Alps in this fashion.

In these ten days five double-line overhead electric railways were erected for the transport of the Lisser range of thousands of navvies, who toiled incessantly at the imperative construction of new roads. To solve the burning problem of an adequate water supply for the combatants a new artificial lake was created by damming the outlets of a stream. Four hundred-odd cistern motor lorries would provide for the transport of water alone.

Throughout the fiercest phase of the battle from June 16 to June 27, General Cadorna hurried hither and thither to the scene of the struggle, and often was under fire while personally supervising operations.

ROYAL BANK WILL OCCUPY NEW PREMISES

The Present Bank of Ottawa Offices and The Corner Store to be Made Into One

Work has commenced on the new premises to be occupied by the Bank of Ottawa, which have just been vacated by Mr. Porter S. White. As soon as the Bank of Ottawa vacate their present offices the whole building, including the corner, will be turned into banking quarters for the Royal Bank. The plans and specifications show that the new bank will be one of the most commodious, convenient and handsome buildings in the city. The whole of the ground flour will be refitted and refurnished for the Bank and the second floor will be made into offices. When the work is all completed the new home of the Royal Bank in Peterborough will be one of which the city will be proud.

THURSDAY WILL BE A HOLIDAY FOR CRESSMAN EMPLOYEES

The employees of the Cressman Co will enjoy a complete day's vacation on Thursday. It has been the custom of this firm for several years to declare the first Thursday in July a store holiday. The doors will be closed the entire day. This action on the part of the firm is greatly appreciated by the staff, who are enabled to enjoy an extra day's vacation.

Stoney Lake Boats Busy on the Holiday

An Exceedingly Large Number Spent The Holiday up the Lakes

Excursions up the lakes on the 1st of July were largely patronized. The steamer Stoney Lake took up the excursion under the auspices of the Ancient Order of Foresters, and as is always the case on this excursion, there was an exceptionally good time. The committee spared no pains for the pleasure and comfort of those on board.

The steamer Empress took the regular trip, meeting the trains, and the Manita took the whole water trip from Peterborough to Stoney Lake.

The excursion under the auspices of the Orangemen was also well attended. They went over the Lift Lock to South Beach and had a most enjoyable outing. Altogether there must have been between 700 and 800 up the Lakes for the holiday.

Will Take No Further Action

At last night's meeting of the City Council it was decided to take no further action in regard to the appeal from the decision of the Court of Appeal in the matter of the award of the arbitrators respecting the arbitration between the city and the Peterborough Light and Power Company.

Allies Prepare Way For Another Infantry Rush Against German Lines

Guns That Broke Down The German Defensive Works and Cleared The Path for The Attack Launched Saturday Have Been Moved Up and are Directing a Terrific cannonade Against The German Third Line of Defense---Offensives on all Sides Have Settled Down to Systematic Grinding of The Austro-German Lines.

ADVANCE ON PERONNE

LONDON, July 5.—The supreme offensive of the Allied armies on the western front has entered its second phase with the British and French guns preparing the way for another infantry rush against the German lines.

The guns that broke down the German defensive works and cleared the path for the attack launched last Saturday have been moved up and are directing a terrific cannonade against the German third line of defense. The artillery spread along a wide front yesterday.

Opposite the British front the German artillery is making a stronger reply than during last week's cannonading.

German reserves continue to press forward to reinforce the Somme lines. Thus far the Kaiser has not shifted troops from any other sector of the western front to meet the Allied attack, the reinforcements, it is believed are coming from the central reserve supply which the German General Staff in the past had shifted from one from to the other in successful offensive. On practically all fronts where the Allied armies are now engaged in the "Great Squeeze" the offensives have settled down from spectacular strokes to the systematic grinding in of the Austro-German lines. The British are not jealous over the French successes. They realize that the clever French strategy in flanking the Germans north and south of the marsh lands, abutting the Somme has much to do with the striking French victories in the advance on Peronne.

Two More Towns Captured By The French Troops

British Forces are Held up by Heavy Rains---Russians Have Advanced into the Carpathians and Cossacks are Well into Hungary---Germans Still Attacking Around Verdun ---Allies Hold all Ground Gained.

LATE WAR DESPATCHES

LONDON, July 5.—French troops capture two more towns on the way to Peronne, while the British hold up by heavy rains, strengthen captured positions. It is a fight in the open now.

COMBINED LAND AND SEA ATTACK.

PETROGRAD, July 5.—Combined land and naval forces near Riga are attacking the Germans heavily. Von Hindenburg's forces are heavily pressed.

The Russians have advanced into the Carpathians and the Cossacks are well into Hungary.

CAPTURE A FORT AT VERDUN.

PARIS, July 5.—The Germans have captured Fort Thiaumont for the fourth time, but the French are counter-attacking with vigor.

FOURTEEN THOUSAND PRISONERS.

LONDON, July 5. — Nearly fourteen thousand German prisoners are now in the Allies' hands from the present offensive on the western front.

ALLIES HOLD ALL GROUND.

PARIS, July 5.—Heavy rains interrupted operations to-day, but the Allies hold all ground gained and have fortified against all counter attacks.

GERMANS KILLED SINCE WAR BEGAN.

LONDON, July 5.—In the Commons yesterday it was officially announced that 690,268 Germans have been killed in action or died of wounds since the war began.

THE KOENIGSBERG WAS DISGUISED AS "FLOATING ISLAND"

New York, July 4.—Bringing what is practically the first detailed news of the fight in East Africa, Charles Cotter of Ames, Okla., who had spent four years at Nairobi, British East Africa, arrived here yesterday aboard the steamship San Guglielmo, of the Sicula Americana line.

Mr. Cotter said that when the hostilities began there were 1500 British Europeans as against 4000 German Europeans.

"The Germans equipped 40,000 natives," and taught them to use arrows dipped in a poison a drop of which in an open wound means [illegible].

"The British armed 60,000 natives, besides whom there were on the British side a regiment of Royal Fusiliers fully fitted outband equipped by Wm. Northrup MacMillan, a ranch owner.

"In one battle 700 out of 1100 of these soldiers were killed. Nevertheless the British won.

"Three regiments of East Indians were sent back to India; they were too cowardly to go into the brush in which all the fighting in that part of the world is done."

Mr. Cotter said that the cruiser Koenigsberg, which had sunk the Pegasus off the coast of Zanzibar, was sunk while going up one of the big African rivers disguised as a floating island.

"She had palm trees on her deck and other large plants of the torrid zone," he said, "and if it had not been for the British aeroplanes she probably would have got by in that disguise. As it was she was assaulted both by land and from the aeroplanes and was quickly destroyed."

Mr. Cotter's son, Wayne Cotter, is a mechanician with a troop of 500 Americans in the East African camp.

"My son is in charge of 1500 American motor trucks out there." Mr. Cotter said.

Another passenger on board the San Guglielmo was Alfonso Pugliatti, Duke of San Giorgio, Professor of Italian. He travelled in the service of the Italian government.

"I visited England, France and Italy," he said. "In all these countries I found the spirits of the people very much brighter than they had been a year ago. England is optimistic. In Italy you would hardly know there was any war on at all."

For Summer Camp or Bungalow—the ready-cooked, ready-to-eat food—that keeps in any climate, that supplies the greatest nutriment in smallest bulk, is Shredded Wheat Biscuit, the ideal Summer food, because it supplies everything the human body needs in a form that is easily and quickly digested. Combines deliciously with fresh fruits. Always clean, always pure, always the same price.

INTERPRETATIVE DANCING

I saw a barefoot lady dip,
And kneel, and rise, and pose and hover
As if to pin a pillow slip
Upon a line that stretched above her.
"This must be comedy," I said—
"Some esoteric, highbrow fooling—
The nymph, who moves with classic tread
Is hanging out the family washing!"
The programme told me I was wrong.
The dance was labeled "Slumber Song!"

I saw a maid, with flying feet,
Whose clothes were singularly airy,
Go running through a field of wheat,
With all the fleetness of a fairy.
When I had guessed a while askance
At her abbreviated habit,
I thought: "The title of this dance
Is 'Girl in Nightie Chasing Rabbit.'"
My guess was wrong. The programme said,
"A Russian Peasant's Prayer for Bread."

Six damsels, very sparsely clad,
In white, diaphanous confections,
Came tearing in, and ran like mad
In many different directions.
"Ahh!" I cried, "I think I get
The meaning of the scene before us.
The title of it, I will bet,
Is 'Some Incompetent a Hospital Chorus.'"
But my conjecture went astray.
The dance was "Woodland Birds in May."

Miss Ruth Clendaniel of Still Pond, Md., who is learning to be a farmer, proved to be the best judge of horses at the recent Devon Horse Show.

PINT OF WHISKEY TO BE MAXIMUM SALE

Forms Must Be Filled Out by Physicians—Used Only Once.

No more telephone orders for whiskey!

The License Board has distributed to all dentists, physicians, druggists and veterinary surgeons in the Province of Ontario a blue book, which will govern their conduct in the matter of requisitions for liquor. Hitherto a doctor could 'phone up a drug store and tell the attendant to give a patient a certain amount of liquor. Sometimes the druggist was deceived by this method, and the License Board is bound that such practices must cease. The blue book contains a form which must be filled out by the physician and signed by the person to whom the liquor is delivered saying plainly how much liquor is required and what the disease is.

Only six ounces may be prescribed for internal use, but a pint may be obtained if the patient is to be bathed. The prescription may be filled only once, and must be filed for purposes of record.

The blue book also contains sections of the Ontario Temperance Act for the convenience of the physicians and druggists of the Province, defining their powers and duties and the penalties for infractions of the law.

It was sent out to all interested parties in the Province.

Paper jars make very good coverings for jars with food in them.

LONDON, July 5.—The Rumanian Government seized 250 cars and six locomotives belonging to Austro-Hungarian railways which were sent into Rumania while the Russians were advancing in Bukowina, says a Reuter despatch from Bucharest. All exportation to Bulgaria has been suspended.

British Raids The Last Word in Scientific Warfare

Paris, July 5.—The plan of operations now being used by the British troops on the French front, and which the French seem to be adopting is "the last word in scientific warfare," declares a French officer who has been in close touch with operations since the beginning of the war.

"The nocturnal expeditions of British patrolling parties into German first line trenches," he said, "which seem to many of the uninitiated without result, become the essential feature of the attack on lines fortified as those held by the Germans on this front. The first thing in order is the destruction by heavy artillery of the concrete shelters, perfected with consummate science. The second is to reconnoiter and make sure that the destruction is complete, for a single machine gun left intact under a shelter can alone stop an infantry assault. The third is the destruction of the barbed defences and it is only then that infantry can be prudently ordered to attack.

"The only means of gaining the absolute assurance of the first object attained is to go to the spot, and in these operations the British troops are showing the Germans as well as the French something new in the siege operations.

"Personally," added the officer, "I think important results will be obtained."

The sporting aspect of these raids, and the indefiniteness of the results so far made known puzzle the public, which anticipated rapid developments. Military experts caution against the hope of immediate and sweeping success, as the demolition of defence works is a long operation and must be effected over a wide front before an advance can be undertaken. It is calculated that 70,000 shots from field guns are required to make sufficient breaches in barbed wire defences to permit a single army corps to go through, while the fire of the heavier guns necessary to level trenches and destroy concrete shelters and machine guns is far more extensive.

A LUMBER MAN'S OPINION.

"I was troubled with palpitation of the heart and sleeplessness," writes Wm. Pritchard, Lumber Inspector, Lumsden Mills, Ont., "and used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food with very great benefit, as my whole system was strengthened and built up." Dr. Chase's Nerve Food forms new, rich blood and restores the feeble wasted nerve cells.

VERDUN USED TO WAR.

Verdun has a famous history in past wars. As early as 400 A.D., says the Christian Herald, it was a Roman camp, named Virodunum. It was almost destroyed by barbaric invasions, and was not refortified for a century. Clovis captured it in 502 A.D. After various vicissitudes it fell into German hands in the eleventh century, and became a city of considerable size and importance. In the sixteenth century it was taken by the French. Again in 1792 it fell in the Germans hands, but was retaken by the French shortly afterwards. It so remained until 1870, when it was captured by the Germans after a brilliant siege.

A HOST OF AIRSHIPS BEING SENT ACROSS

Enormous Demand for Them, and Britain is Meeting It—Two Dozen in Day.

LONDON, July 5.—Major Baird, representative of the Aerial Committee in the House of Commons, said to-day that the demand for flying machines at the front was enormous. Recently as many as 24 flew across to the field of operations in one day, he added, in illustration of this demand and the manner in which it was being met.

In admitting that in one case an airman had taken a British machine by mistake to a German hangar in Belgium, Major Baird commented that these mistakes occurred on both sides. Recently, he said, the Germans had presented the British with a brand new Fokker.

Home Health Club

By Dr. David H. Reeder

I met a school girl who was naturally very pretty. I say naturally, because nature gave her a strong, robust body, a clear complexion, beautiful health and a well formed face. On account of eye strain she was almost hideous. The lips were drawn up just as a snarling dog shows his teeth. A frightful frown with deep wrinkles was on the forehead at the corners and below the eyes. The eyes themselves I could not see at all. The lids appeared to be held tightly only a slight distance apart in order to shut out as much light as possible and still be able to see.

Very few people notice this condition of the face in cases of eye strain. They recognise that something is wrong but never stop to analyse the cause. Parents are much to blame in such cases. Whenever a child is seen to squint habitually when reading or when in the sunshine, when it frequently carries the hand or arm over the eyes to protect them from the light an oculist should be consulted at once. Permanent damage may follow neglect of this simple precaution.

One of my boys told me one day that his teacher at school had scolded him because he could not answer a question that was written upon the blackboard and for punishment sent him to a seat near her desk. As he drew near he could read the question which before, he could not see. The teacher at once recognised the cause of his failure and gave him a permanent seat near the front. Previously she had thought him stupid, but he was soon at the head of his class. As soon as he told me of the occurence I took him to an oculist and found that his vision was not good at a distance. Properly fitted glasses put him on a level with his classmates and removed a great handicap. Moreover his vision had improved and it is not now necessary to wear the glasses constantly.

Eye strain is frequently a cause of extreme nervousness and also digestive disturbances. Many people suffer with carsickness by reason of eye strain. I always advise those that so suffer to avoid looking out of the car window also to avoid reading or doing any other thing that requires close attention of the eyes.

Most people are more comfortable and have better health and greater efficiency if they have their eyes carefully fitted with glasses as soon as they begin to notice a slight change in their vision and this occurs with nearly all at between the ages of 40 and 50 years.

Dear Doctor:—I have been a close reader of your lectures for a number of years and have been much benefitted by them. Now, I come to you for some information in regard to the disease called Pellagra. What are the first symptoms? How are the patients handled as the disease progresses? Is it contagious? Any information in regard to this will be thankfully received.—Mrs. M. C.

(Answer) During the last year there has been a great deal of discussion regarding Pellagra and its origin. Some state that it is probably caused by eating damaged corn. Others claim that eating corn has nothing to do with cases of Pellagra at all. Many, however, are strongly for that theory. I have had no good chance to personally watch such cases, and I do not feel competent to state one way of the other.

There is no doubt but that Pellagra is prevalent mostly in the temperate zones, where Indian corn is one of the principal articles of diet. It is of toxin origin affecting mainly the digestive tract, cerebro spinal centres and the skin. The disease occurs in both men and women, and has usually been observed in adults. It first makes its appearance in the spring or early summer, continues during the summer and may subside as winter approaches. The first symptoms are loss of appetite, thirst, vomiting, intestinal disturbances, mostly diarrhoea, the tongue is furred, and pains are frequently complained of. Perhaps the chief symptom is a general lassitude, accompanied with dizziness, noises in the ears, headache and sleeplessness. Anemia often follows. The skin may redden the same as in Erythema, although it often assumes a dark muddy color the last of the summer. During the two years of the disease the nervous system becomes involved and shows unmistakable signs of weakening.

In the southern states Pellagra is prevalent to a great extent and some of our present doctors are trying to discover the true cause. Lately, in fact within the last few months one theory has been put forth which seems to be very plausible and has been verified in a number of cases, that is that Pellagra is caused by worms. The whole alimentary tract must therefore, be thoroughly cleaned out. Santonin is used by many doctors for expelling worms and with good results. Personally I prefer other means. Tissue foods for instance which I have often spoken of are very valuable for that purpose. A salt water enema should be taken at regular intervals.

According to my idea regularity in the diet must have the first consideration. If a true diagnosis can be made at an early stage there is every likelihood that the patient will recover if hygenic surroundings are right, and if he gets the proper diet. Of course, a great deal of attention must be paid to the digestive organs. Olive oil has been recommended by many and it will undoubtedly do much good taken in tablespoonful doses daily. The food selected should be very light and easily digested. It should be given in small quantities, but taken perhaps more frequently than three times daily. In order to keep up the wealth and strength of the patient, milk eggs and meat broths are usually indicated. Some vegetables and bread, especially whole wheat may also be given. The room occupied by the patient must be sufficiently large to permit pure, fresh air, together with free ventilation. Dampness should be avoided and a room to which the sun gains free access, at least during several hours of the day should be selected. Massage and rubbing with salt are beneficial.

Private Jones, according to Tit-Bits, was summoned to appear before his captain.

"Jones," said the officer, frowning darkly, "this gentleman complains that you have killed his dog."

"A dastardly trick," interrupted the owner of the dog, "to kill a defenceless animal that would harm no one."

"Not much defenceless about him," chimed in the private, heatedly. "He bit pretty freely into my leg, so I ran my bayonet into him."

"Nonsense!" answered the owner, angrily. "He was a docile creature. Why did you not defend yourself with the butt of your rifle?"

"Why didn't he bite me with his tail?" asked Private Jones, with spirit.

BAD DREAMS ARE SYMPTOMS

Ill Health the Cause—Many Alarming Symptoms of Women's Ailments—How Cured.

Paterson, N.J.—"I thank you for the Lydia E. Pinkham remedies as they have made me feel happy and healthy. Sometime ago I felt so run down, had pains in my back and side, was very irregular, tired, nervous, had such bad dreams, did not feel like eating and had short breath. I read your advertisement in the newspapers and decided to try a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It worked from the first bottle, so I took a second and a third, also a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Purifier, and now I am just as well as any other woman. I advise every woman, single or married, who is troubled with any of the aforesaid ailments, to try your wonderful Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier and I am sure they will help her to get rid of her troubles."—Mrs. ELSIE J. UNDER THE SKIN OF MEN.

Did you ever set down and talk with men
In a sort of serious way
On their views of life and ponder then
On all they have to say?
If not, you should in some quiet hour
It's a glorious thing to do,
For you'll find that back of the pomp and power
Most men have a goal in view.

They'll tell you then that their aim is not
The glint of the yellow gold,
That not in the worldly things they've got
Would they have their stories told.
They'll say the joys that they treasure most
Are their good friends tried and true,
And an honest name for their own to boast
And peace when the day is through.

I've talked with men and I think I know
What's under the toughened skin:
I've seen their eyes grow bright, then glow
With the fire that burns within,
And back of the gold and back of the fame
And back of the selfish strife,
In most men's breasts you'll find the flame
Of the nobler things of life.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

BEGUN ON A PHONE

By OSCAR COX

There is nothing so pleases a girl as to get behind a screen where there is no possibility of being discovered and treating one of the opposite sex as she would never dream of treating him were her identity known. Ralph Harding, a youngster who was, to say the least, by no means bashful, was called to the telephone one day—a party wire—and a soft feminine voice asked, "Is this Mrs. Partington?"

"No; this is not Mrs. Partington."

"What is your number?"

"My number is 846, party W."

"Oh! I've got the wrong letter. I called 846 R. Excuse me."

How much often depends upon a trifle!

"No excuse needed, I assure you, indeed, I must ask you to excuse me."

"What for, please?"

"Keeping you talking longer than is necessary to your purpose. The sound of your voice is pleasant to the ear."

A slight chuckle informed Mr. Harding that he had not given offense. The chuckle was the only reply, but it encouraged him to go on.

"We are frequently called to answer calls of 846 R. I suppose it is very easy for an operator to make a mistake in a letter."

"Quite so."

"Are you on a party wire?"

After some hesitancy the lady answered in the affirmative.

"Do you have the same letter as I?"

"My letter is 'M.'"

"And your number?"

Again the chuckle, but no other reply.

"Beg pardon. My question was thoughtless."

This was not true, as the girl well knew. If he had the number and the letter it would be possible for him to learn her identity.

"It wouldn't be proper for me to be chatting over the phone with a stranger," said the voice, "if he knew who I was, but since I am unknown I suppose it's no harm."

"How do you know that I'm not a very disreputable person?" asked Harding.

"By your voice. There is nothing that bespeaks refinement or the want of it so surely as the inflection of one's words. I defy any one not born and brought up in the highest class to assume the accent of one of that class."

"Thank you. You are repaying me for what I said to you with interest. Isn't it strange that I can hear you speak as plainly as if our lips were only an inch or two apart?"

Another chuckle.

"But, not being able to see you, I am obliged to rely on my imagination for a picture of you."

"What do you think I am like?"

"One of Titian's pictures—fair skin, dark eyes and a tinge of mellow sunset in your hair."

"I'm not like that at all."

"Well, then you're a brunette."

There being no reply, Harding asked if he was "getting warm," as the children say in hide and seek games. But the lady, who was evidently guarding herself against identification, declined to favor him with a reply.

"I wish you would give me something by which I could find out who you are," he said.

"I am a lady."

"And, while a lady may talk to a strange man unknown, she would cease to be a lady if she became known, I suppose."

"Exactly."

"Very well, there is a chance, according to your definition of a lady, of your ceasing to be one."

"How is that?"

"If ever I meet you and you say a word to me I shall know you by that voice of yours, which has a melody in it I have never heard in a woman's voice before."

"Oh, my good gracious!"

"Therefore pray that I shall never meet you."

"I will. You're simply flattering me. I don't believe you could tell me by my voice at all."

"We may test that, and without your giving me any clew to your identity except what I have, your voice."

"How?"

"I'll tell you my name and where I live and give you any other information of myself that will enable you to meet me, you remaining unknown to me. By this you may contrive a meeting without my suspecting it. If I don't recognize you by your voice I am much mistaken. Is it a go?"

She did not say whether it was a go or not, but he gave her his name and address. She asked him to name some persons he knew, and at his giving a certain name she said he need not go any further, thereby giving him a point, and he resolved to be watchful whenever at the home of the person named. Then they said "Goodby," there were two clicks, and fate had arranged for a wedding.

Some months later Harding was invited to dine at the house of a friend—not the one the girl of the telephone had given him reason to suspect as a mutual friend. Before going in to dinner, hearing a voice behind him, he turned, looked a girl in the face and said:

"I am pleased to renew our acquaintance begun on the phone."

The girl blushed to the roots of her hair.

The wedding took place ten months later.

"ANURIC!"

THE NEWEST

DISCOVERY IN CHEMISTRY

This is a recent discovery of Doctor Pierce, who is head of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute at Buffalo, N. Y. Experiments at Doctor Pierce's Hospital for several years proved that there is no other eliminator of uric acid that can be compared to it. For those easily recognized symptoms of inflammation—as backache, scalding urine and frequent urination, as well as sediment in the urine, or if uric acid in the blood has caused rheumatism, it is simply wonderful how surely "Anuric" acts. The best of results are always obtained in cases of acute rheumatism in the joints, in gravel and gout, and invariably the pains and stiffness which so frequently and persistently accompany the disease rapidly disappear.

Go to your nearest drug store and simply ask for a 50-cent package of "Anuric," manufactured by Dr. Pierce, or send 10 cents to Dr. Pierce for a large trial package. If you suspect kidney or bladder trouble, send him a sample of your water and describe symptoms. Doctor Pierce's chemist will examine it, then Dr. Pierce will report to you, without fee or charge.

Note:—French scientists affirm that "Anuric" is thirty-seven times more active than lithia in eliminating uric acid, and is a harmless but reliable chemical compound that may be safely given to children, but should be used only by grown-ups who actually wish to restore their kidneys to perfect health, by conscientiously using one box—or more in extreme cases—as "Anuric" (thanks to Doctor Pierce's achievement) is by far the most perfect kidney and bladder corrector obtainable.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets are the original Little Liver Pills. One little Pellet for a laxative—three for a cathartic.

The Cause of Appendicitis Now Definitely Known

The commonest cause of appendicitis is constipation. Every doctor says so. When you require physic, don't use a cheap drastic pill—get Dr. Hamilton's Pills, which are made from the private formula of one of the greatest physicians. Dr. Hamilton's Pills strengthen the stomach, regulate the bowels and prevent any tendency to appendicitis. In one day you feel the tremendous benefit of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. By purifying the blood and cleansing the system they prevent headaches, lift depression and drive away weariness. No medicine so successful as Dr. Hamilton's Pills. FINES AT PICTURE, THEN ENDS LIFE

Mrs. Byington Sent Bullet Into Portrait of Father and Mother Before Committing Suicide.

Mrs. Stewart W. Byington, long prominent in the social life of Flushing and the wife of an insurance broker with offices at No. 59 John St., Manhattan, shot and killed herself in her home at No. 229 Franklin Place, Flushing.

For several months Mrs. Byington, who was thirty-five years old, had been working many hours daily with the various clubs with which she was associated, in war relief and other work, and three weeks ago she suffered a breakdown and was sent to an up-State sanitarium for a rest.

As she seemed to have recovered fully Mrs. Byington returned to her home Sunday. Her two children, George and Harriet, were at school when Mrs. Byington went to her bedroom on the second floor and sent a bullet into her right temple.

A maid downstairs heard two shots and found Mrs. Byington lying across the bed. She called Dr. John F. Dick, who found she was dead, and notified Coroner Ebert. As the maid had heard two shots and two discharged cartridges were in the pistol, the Coroner conducted an investigation to determine what became of one of the bullets.

After a long search the Coroner found that Mrs. Byington, before shooting herself, had sent a bullet through a gold framed picture of her father and mother, hanging just above her dressing table. Why she did that is a mystery.

Narrative of War Full of Thrills

"A Soldier of the Legion" (Houghton, Mifflin) is a narrative of the great French offensive of September, 1915, written by Edward Morlae, an American, whose father fought in the Franco-Prussian War. Those who have read Ouida's 'Under Two Flags' and Conan Doyle's 'The White Company' will wonder at the futility of imagination in the presence of a cold recital of fact made by a man who fought with the new legion of France. It was made up of 3,200 men "drunkards, thieves, murderers; those who loved fighting and those who loved France." All nationalities were represented, Russians, Turks, Bulgars, Serbs, Hindus, Italians, Greeks, Jews, Americans, negroes and, strangest of all—one German. Of the latter the author merely comments 'God knows why.' It was an olla podrida of nations, an international stew. And what glorious fighters they were! The American contingent was made up of such men as Wm. Thaw, who afterward joined the aviation corps, and cast lustre on his native country. Others in the regiment were J. J. Casey, a New York newspaper artist; 'Bob' Scanlon, a negro prize fighter; Alan Singer, a poet; Dennis Dowd, lawyer; the Rockwell brothers, newspaper men of Georgia; Bob Soubiron, a professional automobile racer, and last, but not least, Friedric Wilhelm Zinn, of Battle Creek, Mich. That boy was a fighter. His body lies in a shallow grave inside the German lines that he helped to take for France.

Sergeant Morlae (it had been forgotten that he was an officer) tells about all these fine fellows and their deeds in a book that one may put in his outside coat pocket or a woman may keep in her handbag and read occasionally while riding in a 'bus or in the subway. It is printed in good, big type on thick paper and by reading intensively one may go through it in an hour and a half. But that is not the way to read it. It is a series of mosiacs and may be picked up at any moment, opened at any page and read with interest and understanding. It is a good summer book, despite its terrible shadows and the sad contemplation it brings that three-fourths of the heroes are now dead, and that the legion itself lives only in a cross decorated flag that has been reverently placed in the Louvre.—New Yrok Herald.

THE DIVIDED HOUSEHOLD.

There was an old woman who lived with a duck—
A querulous, yet philosophical duck;
And they lived in a chanty, this curious two,
And the slits in the roof let the rain trickle through.

The woman complained: "It's a fine how-de-do!"
But the duck only gabbled, "I differ with you,
For rain is but water broke up into bits
So it can be sifted right down through the slits;
And water, good woman, you really must see
Is very essential for creatures like me;
And the slits in the roof, of which you complain,
They give you the sunshine, and give me the rain."

"Oh, bother," the woman replied with chagrin,
"You talk very nice; and the rain coming in
May be to your benefit truly, but yet,
That's really no reason why I should get wet."

"And surely no reason, I take it, why I should go without water," the duck made reply.

And so they kept on, I regret to relate,
Refusing themselves to a gleeful state,
Unable to bring each other the proof
Of the good or the bad of the slits in the roof.

And so honest people will often complain
And want all the sunshine, but none of the rain,
While ever what others are getting they grieve,
They lose all the good of the things they receive.

FELT LIKE A NEW PERSON

After Taking Only One Box Of "Fruit-a-tives"

EAST SHIP HARBOUR, N. S.

"It is with great pleasure that I write to tell you of the wonderful benefit I have received from taking "Fruit-a-tives". For years, I was a dreadful sufferer from Constipation and Headaches, and I was miserable in every way. Nothing in the way of medicines seemed to help me. Then I finally tried "Fruit-a-tives" and the effect was splendid. After taking one box, I feel like a new person, to have relief from those sickening Headaches".

The Captain's Vision, The Corporal's Instinct

BY CHAS. F. THWING,

President of Western Reserve University, Cleveland.

The commander's vision is of the campaign. The corporal's instinct concerns the hour's drill.

The commander's vision is of the army. The corporal's instinct concerns a squad.

The commander's vision is of the year or years. The corporal's instinct covers the day.

The commander's vision is of the tendency, the movement. The corporal's instinct touches the immediate duty.

The commander's vision relates to principles. The corporal's instinct relates to the detail.

The peril of the commander is twofold; his vision may be so far off that he fails to see the intervening condition; and also it may be so close that he gives too great heed to the nearest neglecting the horison. In the one case he becomes the visionary, the mystic; in the other he assumes the place of the corporal.

The corporal likewise is beset by twin dangers; he may forget he is a corporal, and think he is a captain, and he also may so attempt to do the work of the private soldier that he forgets his official rank and consequent duty. Yet neither commander nor corporal should forget the other officer. The commander should recognise that there are details, and the corporal should remember that there is a campaign and an army.

Like differences held in every service. The manager of the newspaper has his vision, his plan. The reporter has also his simple duty to see truly, and to tell truthfully.

The president of the railroad is to consider the people and their rights, the owners of the property, the law and its requirements. The trainman, and the ticket seller is to recognize his place and function.

The superintendent of the factory is to forecast the future in his makings, purchases and sellings. The weaver, and the dyer is to do the work as best he can.

Each is to remember the other. The manager, the superintendent, the president adds to his efficiency by recognizing the man at the other end of the great, complex work as having responsibility without inspiration, and who, therefore needs sympathy. The reporter, the trainman, the operator, should not forget that there are officers, who, if they do have great power, bear also equally great responsibilities "Useless each without the other"; useful each with the other.

DEMANDS BY BRITISH LABOUR.

Food Price Regulation and "Conscription of Riches" Urged.

LONDON, July 3.—A special trade union congress of 900 delegates, representing 3,000,000 organized workers, met in London to-day and passed a resolution asking the Government to take steps to regulate the prices of food and fuel. The resolution expressed the view that price regulation could be enforced only by a department of the Government with power to commandeer and distribute food and fuel, fix freight rates, requisition home-grown crops and establish standard prices for fuel. The movement of the resolution said prices had increased 50 per cent., owing largely to the rise in freights and the greater cost of coal.

The congress also adopted an alternative resolution in favour of Government ownership of all merchant shipping. Still another resolution declared that if the Government offered objection to the proposals of the congress immediate steps would be taken to press for such advances in wages as were necessary to maintain a proper standard of living.

The congress also adopted a resolution asking for an increase of 50 per cent. in old age pensions during the period of high prices.

There was some adverse criticism of the manner in which the Munitions and Military Service acts have been administered, but a motion calling for their repeal was defeated overwhelmingly.

The congress also passed a resolution moved by William J. Thorne, Labour member of Parliament, calling on the Government to take steps for the "conscription of riches" by large increases in the tax on incomes of more than £3000 yearly.

TEUTON PUBLISHING CALLED A MYTH

"The German government has absolutely ignored the request of Ambassador Gerard for information concerning the character of punishment inflicted on the commander of the submarine that attempted to sink the steamship Sussex, says the Providence Journal.

"The demand, as indicated by yesterday's despatches, is now about to be repeated officially by Secretary Lansing direct to the German Foreign Office. The German government will ignore this demand entirely or declare to our government that it is an improper request and that we should take her word for her statement that the punishment inflicted would be ample.

"The reason for this attitude is that Germany has been notified by Ambassador von Bernstorff that information has reached the government of the United States proving the whole Sussex defence of the German government to be a deliberate fraud from beginning to end and every explanation, from the story of mysterious sketches made aboard the submarine to the declaration that the commander of the boat had been punished, has been a wilful falsehood.

"The truth is that the officer who commanded the submarine which tried to destroy the Sussex — a first lieutenant— has never been on German soil or in communication with the German Admiralty or government since the day the wholesale murder of channel passengers was attempted.

The officer has been imprisoned and still is imprisoned in the city of Edinburgh, where he was taken by way of the port of Rosyth the day after the Sussex was torpedoed. With him is confined his second in command—a junior navigating officer and the only other commissioned officer on board the submarine.

"Furthermore, the entire crew of the submarine, with the exception of two seamen who were drowned, is imprisoned at Brest. It is believed, though this is not authenticated, that the submarine itself is in some French port. The vessel was driven into the shallow waters off the French coast by British and French destroyers immediately after the attack on the Sussex and was beached, and her officers and crew captured.

"These facts are all believed to be in the possession of the government at Washington, and it is because of this positive proof that the entire German attitude toward the United States has consisted of an almost incredible series of falsehoods that Secretary Lansing is about to move to uncover the facts by pushing the demand for details concerning the alleged punishment inflicted upon the submarine commander."

Heart's Action Was Weak And Circulation Poor

He Was Always Tired and Nervous and Had Pains in Feet and Legs —Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Cured

The heart is a wonderful worker, plodding away year in and year out, forever pumping the blood through the body. So long as the blood is rich and nourishing it renews its own waste and keeps up a vigorous circulation of the blood through the arteries and veins of the human system.

But when the blood gets thin the nerves are starved, motive power is lacking, the heart's action weakens and the circulation is slow. The hands and feet feel cold, there are cramps and pains in the legs and through the body, digestion fails, you become nervous and irritable and do not rest or sleep well.

This letter will give you some idea how admirably Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is suited to overcome derangements of this nature. It is, above all, a creator of new, rich blood, and with the blood in good condition the nerves are soon restored and bodily organs resume their natural functions.

Mrs. E. A. Hutchings, "Prairie View," Elva, Man., writes: "Before using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food my husband had tried almost every remedy recommended as a tonic. He suffering with cold feet, poor circulation of the blood, and was always tired. He had pains in his feet and legs, and could get no rest or sleep at night. After the first box of the Nerve Food we could see an improvement, and now after using it for six months, he is an entirely different man. He eats and sleeps well and has no pains in his feet and legs. It has built up his health wonderfully, and we can recommend it as a splendid nerve tonic."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, 5 for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN

THE QUALITY OF FRIENDSHIP

Ralph Waldo Emerson was a good soul, else he would not have said, "The only way to have a friend is to be one." It doubtless would distress the sage of Concord beyond measure were he capable of realizing that there is a well-founded suspicion that the art of friendship is dying out among us.

The friendship of the ancients was very exacting. In modern times we should look a long while for such mutual regard as that of Damon and Pythias.

Friendship in our crowded days covers a wider area, but as in the case of all extensive development it has lost its intensity. Instead of friendships we have visiting lists. Not those whom we love, but those whom we would propitiate, we invite to dinner. Those who would propitiate us invite us in turn and permit us to eat their food and air our views.

We live, alas, in the suburbs of each other's hearts.

The man without friends, or at the least without one dependable friend can accomplish very little in this world. Depending on his own strength alone, his mightiest endeavours are as nothing. At harvest time he gathers nothing but leaves.

But the man with friends—strong friends, true friends and loyal friends—who have confidence in his integrity and ability to do things, has great power. When he leads they will follow him, and all working together unitedly bring victory. This is the reason why some men achieve great success with moderate abilities while their more brilliant competitors fall short.

This is true in every business and profession. It does not matter so much whether a man has enemies or not as that he has true friends who will never desert him.

To have loyal friends is worth all else. To have friends who can be depended on is to gain success in life.

But there is one thing to be borne in mind: To have true friends you must be one. The quality of loyalty you get depends on the quality you give.

• • •

The world need never shed a tear for its sainted dead. They are safe as the harvest is when the farmer has bound it into sheaves and stored it away or as the roses are when the gardener has wrapped their roots in straw and housed them from the storm. They are safe as the larks that fly singing from the green earth out of reach of the huntsman's snare and the aim of the cruel sportsman. They are safe as warriors who march beneath worn battle flags no more, but sit down with conquerors to festivals of song and wine. They are safe as young lambs are when shepherds fold them from the blast and carry them over rought places in tender arms. Weep for the living all you choose; let your tears be unsayed above the dying bed where your starlings lie like wreaths of fading snow beneath the glance of death; but if you believe in God and hold any faith in heaven, shed not your tears for the blessed and happy dead. Christianity gives the lie to its belief when it garbs itself in sables and mourns without comfort for those who have exchanged the inn for the palace, the wilderness for the land of peace and plenty.

• • •

The real business of life is the making of a happy home. When you come to sift the whole chaff of existence, everything goes to the wind but the happiness we have had at home.

• • •

All about us are beautiful homes which are mere pauper houses, so far as happiness is concerned, because of some one member of the family who is a petty tyrant, a nagger, a peace destroyer.

• • •

In hours of exuberance and exultation or joyous merriment; in reflective moments when the soul is swept with memories, pleasing or plaintive; in the silence of religious meditations; or in our little recesses from the homely duties and commonplace labours of the day, or week, they befriend us with their delightful solace, these thoughts of home and a happy family circle.

• • •

There are six secular nights in each week. Out of the six some men spend one at home and five at lodge, while others spend five at home and one at lodge. In which class shall we register your name?

• • •

We are coming to understand that all the prayers and baptisms and communions which the churches can bestow upon us will not make us Christians, so long as we think mean, uncharitable thoughts of one another, and permit our minds to be filled with malice, envy, jealousy gloom and despondency.

• • •

Work is a moral and physical uplifter. It is a panacea for sorrow; idleness brings moral decay and furnishes an incetive to crime. The avalanche of crime that is sweeping over our beautiful land is largely due to the fact that too many would rather steal than work. The life of duty, not the life of mere ease or mere pleasure, is the end of life which makes the great men and women. The best prize that life offers is the chance to work at work worth doing

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

CHILDREN'S DUTCH ROMPERS.

By Anabel Worthington.

Fashion is lavishing much favoritism on the children's summer garments—no doubt with consideration for mother fixes—to satisfy the longing for something that will be easy to make and launder and which will at the same time be cunning and dainty for the only boy or girl in the world. We are made to feel this way when we "take in" the scheme of the Dutch rompers pictured, No. 7,765. This little garment may be made of all one material, or, as the illustration shows, it will be attractive in dark and light goods. The one piece bloomers buttons to a waist that slips on over the head and which is cut on lines that give proper adjustment; the note of contrast given with the broad collar and sleeves' cuffs in dark goods adjusts for trimming. Material of some resistance with be chosen if this is intended for a play garment.

The pattern is cut in sizes 2, 4 and 6 years. In size 4 it may be developed with ¼ yard light color material and 2¼ yards of dark. Or in all one material 2¾ yards will make the width of the goods in either case to be 36 inches.

You may obtain the pattern by sending to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Address—The Examiner Pattern Service, The Examiner, Peterborough. Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

Women's Institute.

The Belmont Women's Institute held their regular monthly meeting on Wednesday afternoon, June 21st at the home of Mrs. Geo. Smith.

The meeting was presided over by their president, Mrs. J. A. Bexsmith, whom all were glad to welcome home again. There was a large attendance, including many visitors.

The principal part of the session was taken up in arranging for a meeting to be held on July 4th, when a speaker from the Dept. of Agriculture will be present, and also in devising ways and means whereby money could be raised for patriotic work.

Mrs. Jas. Morrison, president of the Ladies' Aid of the Presbyterian church, and Mrs. Wm. Vance, president of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Anglican church of Havelock, favoured the ladies with very helpful addresses along patriotic lines.

The meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem. Refreshments were served and a very pleasant social half hour was spent.

Mrs. Jos. Seabrooke, Sec.-Treas.

The members of the Ladies' Aid of the Methodist church met at the residence of Mrs. P. Haig on Friday afternoon, June 23rd, and presented Mrs. DeMille with a handsome chair and the following address.

Mrs. C. W. DeMille:

Dear Sister,—We, the members of the Ladies' Aid of the Methodist church learn with deep regret of your near departure from our mist. Though you have been with us but a short time, by your ceaseless labours of love and untiring good works you have endeared yourself to each and every one of us. We have assembled here this afternoon to enjoy once more the sunshine of your society. Your presence will be greatly missed from our monthly meetings and we realize that it will be difficult to fill your place. As a slight token and appreciation of your labour, we beg you to accept this chair, and we ever pray that Heaven's choicest blessings may rest upon you all.

Signed on behalf of your friends,
Mrs. Harrison Wing,
Mrs. W. B. Ritchie.
Mrs. Roy Campney.
Mrs. W. Holcombe.

WAR MAKES A TOWN BOOM.

Viewed from the commercial aspect the old adage, says the Louisville Times, might well be changed to "War hath her victories no less renowned than peace." Everybody is familiar with the industrial activities of various branches of specialized business, but probably few are acquainted with the fact that the European war has made a flourishing seaport on the north coast of Russia.

Archangel, the city electrified by the gigantic conflict, looks toward the pole across the bleak Arctic Ocean. Beyond being a good port the town never was noted for very much except severe frigidity. With the outbreak of the war and the closing of many European ports, Archangel became of strategic importance.

Ships from lands which had never sent a vessel to Archangel now come laden, with strange wares, for the war has created new channels of trade in the Russian Empire. The population has grown until one could almost call the neglected port a "boom town." The number of vessels going and coming last summer almost rivalled the record of New York, and an increase is expected this summer. The shipments of wheat are colossal and the imports cover many articles hitherto unknown to the customs officers. An electric street railway has been installed, and real estate is soaring.

The fate of the war besieged city at the termination of hostilities is a matter of conjecture, but it is hardly likely likely that the commercial position which the town has achieved within the the last year and a half will ever be sacrificed.

FRENCH ARE WITHIN THREE MILES OF PERONNE

British Make Progress At Important Points

Drive Against Foe On Both Sides of Somme is Resumed

French Troops Capture Soimont Farm and all the Territory Between This Position and Hill 63 Fell Into The Hands of Our Allies---One French Army Corps Has Captured Sixty Guns---General Haig Announces Further Gains For The British Army.

GERMANS STILL ATTACK AT VERDUN

PARIS (French Official), July 5.—French troops advanced their lines to within less than three miles of the City of Peronne, one of the immediate objectives of the great Allied offensive, in the resumption of the fighting on a large scale north and south of the Somme last night. French artillery is to-day pounding at the German defences of Peronne.

German attacks on the Verdun front continued with the greatest violence last night despite the tremendous pressure of the Allied offensive along the Somme. The Germans made a powerful attack between Avocourt and Hill 304 using liquid fire extensively. The attack was repulsed by the French fire, the enemy suffering heavily. East of the Meuse, a violent cannonade continued throughout the night, particularly in the region of Thiaumont and Chenois Wood.

French troops last night resumed their great drive against the Germans on both sides of the River Somme. During the night we carried a German trench line east of Curlu, north of the Somme, it was officially announced to-day. South of the Somme following further gains, French infantry captured the Sormont Farm situated on the left bank of the river. All the southern region between this farm and Hill 63, on the road between Flaucourt and Barleux, fell into the hands of the French. The position at Belloy en Santerre, captured by the French Monday, was attacked by the Germans during the night. They captured the eastern part of the village, but were afterward ejected by a counter attack. The Germans are still holding part of the illage of Estrees, southwest of Peronne, where the struggle is most violent. All German counter attacks broke down under French fire. The total number of unwounded German prisoners in our hands thus far is over 9,000. The number of guns captured is yet unknown. A single French army corps, operating south of the Somme captured sixty guns.

American Steamer Sunk In Collision

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 5.—The American steamer Jacob Luckenbach has been sunk in a collision in the Channel. The crew was saved.

Further Progress For British Troops

Examiner Special:

LONDON, July 5.—British troops made further progress at important points last night in heavy fighting between the Ancre and the Somme, General Haig, the British Commander-in-Chief, reported to-day. At Thiepval, northeast of Albert, two determined enemy attacks were repulsed, the enemy suffering heavy losses, said the official statement.

German Officers and Men Surrender

Examiner Special:

LONDON, July 5.—A German counter-attack at Thiepval this morning was repulsed. Several German officers rushed up to the British lines surrendering with 160 men. "We are more use to Germany alive after the war than dead," they said.

Throws Responsibility on Enemy Countries

Examiner Special:

LONDON, July 5.—Viscount Bryce, former British Ambassador to the United States, threw back upon Germany the responsibility for prolonging the world war, in a luncheon address before the Pilgrim Society to-day.

Bryce made direct reply to a letter recently sent him from America urging that he use his best efforts in behalf of peace. He answered that Germany is not willing to agree to any reasonable settlement at the present time.

Germans Withdraw Troops From The Verdun Front

Examiner Special:

LONDON, July 5.—The Kaiser is withdrawing troops from the Verdun front to meet the supreme offensive of the Allies which continued to gain ground on both sides of the River Somme in last night's fighting.

Despatches from the British Headquarters this afternoon announced the appearance of German units from the Verdun battle ground on the front north of the River Somme. The news was regarded as vastly more important than the French and British official statements, reporting further gains in most furious fighting last night. Statements from the German, British and French War Offices this afternoon agreed that the Allied drive was resumed on a great scale last night with heavy fighting on both sides of the Somme.

Sir Douglas Haig, British Commander-in-Chief, reported at two o'clock this afternoon that the British have captured further important enemy positions in heavy fighting between the Ancre and the Somme River.

Russians Continue Pursuit of Retreating Austrians

Examiner Special:

PETROGRAD, July 5.—Pursuing the retreating Austrians southward the Russian army that over-ran Bukowina has reached the spurs of the Carpathian mountains, and is engaged with enemy rearguards.

The official statement to-day represented Russian successes in Volhynia against the Austro-Germans. West of Kolki a German trench was captured. The railway station of Ekimovitchi has changed hands several times, but is now held by the Czar's troops.

MANY CHILDREN IN ATTENDANCE AT PLAYGROUNDS

Varied From 100 to 125 at Central School and From 225 to 300 at the King Edward—Children all Appreciate the Games

SOME NEW EQUIPMENT

That the children of the city appreciate the supervised playgrounds is evidenced by the attendance yesterday at both the Central and King Edward school grounds. Tuesday was the second day upon which the grounds had been opened, and the attendance at the Central School varied from 100 to 125, while at the King Edward there were from 225 to 300 children on hand, and every youngster apparently had a good time. The equipment at both schools is being added to, and it should be understood that the grounds are open to all children. The Central School grounds are under the supervision of Mr. Gilbert and Miss Littlefield, while the King Edward grounds are in charge of Mr. Tillotson and Miss Dora Smith.

New "World" Films at Red Mill Are Good

Martha Hedman in "The Cub," a movie story with a newspaper setting, is the first of the new World films presented at the Red Mill theatre in the series which they have begun this week. It is a snappy film full of action and interesting situations, and if it is a criterion of the other pictures from the World studios the patrons of the Red Mill are assured of an excellent run of features. Martha Hedman is one of the stars of filmdom, and will be seen in "The Cub" for the last time tonight. The Red Mill features are changed bi-weekly.

CASUALTY LIST OF PETEBORO SOLDIERS CONTINUES TO GROW

Pte. Leo Fountaine Wounded and Pte. Thos. Rose Dangerously Ill---Total of 92 Since June 1st--Sports at Barriefield Had to be Postponed on Account of Heavy Rains ---Troops From London go to Borden Camp---To-day's Military News.

Two more Peterborough casualties are reported this morning, making a total of 92 Peterborough names on the list since June 1st.

This morning official word was received that Pte. Leo. Fountaine, a well known local boy who went overseas with the 39th Battalion a year ago, has been admitted to the Royal Victoria Hospital, Netley, on June 30, suffering from multiple gun shot wounds in the face. Pte. Fountaine is a brother of Pte. Frank Fountaine, who recently enlisted here with the Army Service Corps. Pte. Fontaine was born in Peterborough. His friends will wish him a speedy recovery.

Word also was received this morning by Mr. Alfred Rose, 200 Antrim street, that his son, Pte. Thomas Rose, who went over with a draft from the 59th Battalion last year, is reported dangerously ill and admitted to No. 17 casualty clearing station on July 3. Pte. Rose, who was born in Canada, was a member of the 57th Regiment for two years. Another brother, Pte. George Rose, is also overseas, and a third brother, Charles, was a member of the 93rd Battalion for a couple of months, but was discharged a short time ago on account of having trouble with his eyes.

Charles W. Dobson makes the following acknowledgement of the receipt of a parcel of socks and concludes his letter with a message of thanks for the ladies of the West End Knitting Club of this city. The letter, which was addressed to Mrs. George Ball, 391 Smith street, reads as follows:

Dear Mrs. Ball,—Well, I have received your parcel of lovely soft socks, and I must say they have been out to France and back. I didn't get the parcel until 16th, so they have had a good ride for their money.

Well, I suppose you have heard that I got in the way of one of Fritz's big shells and got hit on the fingers of my right hand. Two are broken pretty badly. I have had a dozen pieces of broken bone taken out of them, but I am lucky to be as well as I am. I happened to be one of the luckiest of the bunch that took part in the scrimmage, as a great many were killed outright; but I did not come out here to be killed any way. Mother was saying that I was reported killed. They must have got my name mixed up with some other one.

Please thank the ladies of the West End Knitting Club for me.

CHARLES W. DOBSON.
Number 453831.

The following from the Kingston Whigh refers to Lieut. Harry Rogers of Peterborough, son of Mr. R. B. Rogers:

The originator of that mythical mascot of the 8th C.M.R., which went under the name of "Dave" last year at Barriefield, has done his duty and made the supreme sacrifice. According to a letter received by Lieut.-Col. W. J. Brown, G.S.O., from Lieut.-Col. J. E. Munro, commanding 8th C.M.R., Lieut. Rogers, one of the finest officers who ever trained at Barriefield camp, has died of wounds. Hundreds of military and civil friends will regret his passing.

Kingston, July 5.—Although only organized some few days ago, the Kingston Depot Artillery Brigade, which moves this week to Barriefield Camp, already has 193 men. The recruiting machinery has started and this number should now increase rapidly. The strength of the batteries of all ranks is as follows:

72nd Battery—47.
73rd Battery—56.
74th Battery—43.
75th Battery—37.
Ammunition Column—11.

The Kingston Whig says:

In spite of the fact that the summer farm work, the general prosperity of the country and many other beneficial conditions through the country do to assist in recruiting men for the Canadian Expeditionary Force there is still a steady flow of recruits to the overseas units in this average keeps up until the fall when a renewed interest and activity may be started, this military district will certainly make a good name for itself. More men are always needed but there should be no pessimistic feeling when some 400 men enlisted for overseas during the last two weeks in this military district. There are eleven battalions drawing men, although in three of them at least very few are needed.

Barriefield, July 5.—The camp dentists are doing a splendid work in looking after the teeth of the soldiers at Barriefield Camp. During the month of June 2,291 operations took place and during that time fifty dentures or plates were made while there are 750 less teeth in active service now owing to that number of extractions having taken place.

There is an emergency parade every morning to the dental building where all soldiers suffering from dental trouble may have their cases properly attended to by qualified dentists. The most important branch of the work, however, is the regular inspection of every tooth at the camp. This is progressing regularly.

Barriefield Camp, July 5. — With sincere regret a circular letter had to be sent by headquarters on Monday morning announcing, that owing to the condition of the grounds, following the rain, the sports programme planned for Monday afternoon in celebration of Dominion Day had to be postponed.

Great plans had been made for the events and many men were disappointed. The camp grounds was opened to visitors and many availed themselves of the opportunity of inspecting the camp where some 6,000

CARRANZA'S NOTE PACIFIC

Demand For Withdrawal of American Troops Not Reiterated

Special to the Examiner.

WASHINGTON, July 5.—President Carranza's long expected note was delivered to the Government here to-day and proves completely pacificatory in tone. Carranza emphasizes the statement that Mexico promoted friendly relations with United States, both by word and deed. The embarrassment caused by the presence of American troops in Mexico was again emphasized, but the demand for their withdrawal was not reiterated.

VENTILATION AT THE COLLEGIATE TO BE REPAIRED AT ONCE

Mr. R. Deane reported to the Board of Education last night that the ventilation system of the Collegiate Institute could be repaired for $900. He stated that Mr. Ackerman had been of the opinion that the work would cost about $1,000, and several years ago a Toronto tender of $3,000 was refused. Mr. Hill said he did not know what the Committee proposed to do, nor had the matter been considered. Mr. Deane replied that the tender from Mr. Penn Alexander had been received by the Secretary of the Board just previous to the meeting.

Mr. Hill—"Where are you going to get the money?"

Mr. Eastwood—"That is what we want to know now."

Mr. Hill—Refer it back to the Property Committee."

Mr. Crane—"Give them power to act and get the money."

Mr. Gordon observed that the Board last year had spent money it didn't have; (This is a "bull" of course, but it is Mr. Gordon's).

Mr. Eastwood moved, seconded by Mr. Deane, that the Council be asked to pass a by-law authorizing a debenture sale to realize $1,200 for the ventilation repairs and painting.

EGG-O SELLS "LIKE HOT CAKES"

So fascinated have the ladies of Peterborough become with Egg-O Baking Powder that the demonstrator has decided to remain for the rest of the week. It is "selling like hot cakes" is what the clerks in Chanal's store report.

As above stated Mrs. Greer, the intelligent demonstrator, has a happy faculty of showing the merits of this new household help She gives lucid lessons, free, daily, in the making of bread, biscuits, and cake; and the products of her deft manipulation have earned praise from the lady spectators. Every afternoon, at 4 o'clock hot biscuits are made.

DRIVE HAS ALREADY NETTED 14000 PRISONERS

All Efforts to Prevent the Consolidation of the Ground Won by The British Fail—Prisoners are Beginning to Reach England.

FIGHT IN OPEN NOW

LONDON, July 4.—The two British official despatches issued to-day record little change in the situation on the British front. They show that the Germans have brought up strong reinforcements from other parts of their line, and are stubbornly contesting every yard of the British advance. Torrential rains to-day, however, hampered the offensive operations, and the British action was confined mostly to consolidating the ground already won.

The French have captured three more villages, and are on good roads to Peronne. But there is yet no decrease in the violence of the German attacks in the Verdun region. The villages captured are Barleux and Belloy-en-Santerre, which the French hold in their entirety, and Estrees has also fallen into their hands, with the exception of a small part where the Germans are still resisting. In the region of Estrees alone they took 500 prisoners.

Up to the present the Anglo-French captures in the Battle of the Somme total more than 14,000 prisoners, 12 heavy guns and 26 field guns. This booty represents for the man in the street a very satisfactory result of a little over three days' fighting.

Despatches from German war correspondents indicate the realisation that the Central Powers are losing the initiative, which their favourable position on the interior lines enabled them to hold throughout the long course of the war. Moreover, in commenting on the enormous resources in munitions and war material the Entente Allies have been able to pile up through the wearying months of preparation, they equally recognize that a profound change has occurred in the relations of the belligerents.

FIGHT IN OPEN FORMATION.

The battle rages on such an extended front that the correspondents find difficulty in sifting the main currents of the operations. The Associated Press correspondent, in a pregnant phrase, records what is perhaps one of the most significant features, when he notes "the amazing change from trench-tied warfare to that of an army in progress." The same striking feature comes out in an interesting review of the operations obtained in an interview with Major-General F. B. Maurice, who predicts an immediate development south of the Somme, where, he says, the fighting is now in open-field formation.

All official despatches speak confidently of the satisfactory situation on the British front, a notable incident being the surrender of a complete Prussian infantry battalion with officers to the British near Pricourt. German prisoners are beginning to arrive in England, 1,500 being landed at Southampton to-day.

LAST OF DEFENCES CAPTURED

"Only German soldiers in open field formations now stand between the French and the River Somme," said Major-General F. B. Maurice to-day, referring to the part of the river which flows northward to the east of the sector along which the French have made their greatest gains. The last of the enemy's defensive works in that sector have been captured by our allies"

In giving the Associated Press a summary of the results attained by the allied offensive on the western front, Major-General Maurice, who is a director of military operations of the Imperial General Staff, continued:

WEDNESDAY, JULY 5, 1916

A GOOD FEATURE.

We have occasion to be, at times, critical in regard to our education system. We have cause, or think we have cause to find fault with our overloaded curricula of study or shirking; to find fault with the subordination of pupil study to examination exigencies, government or department created; to find fault with dealing with school building problems is not the best way.

But there are some features of our local educational conditions that call for congratulation and commendation. At the meeting of the Board of Education, last night, Mr. W. H. Hill, chairman of the Appointments Committee, presented its report. This report showed that the services of all the Collegiate Institute and Public School teachers had been retained—with one exception, and that due to voluntary resignation.

This is encouraging to those interested in education and in the efficiency of our schools. It indicates the existence of one of the most important conditions of efficiency in teachers—permanency of service. It indicates that teachers have given satisfactory service and their services are appreciated. Self-evidently permanency of service is conducive to, if not the only condition of securing the best results. The annually changing personnel of municipal councils—meaning generally "green" hands, always "on the job," explains a good deal of the municipal inefficiency of service we deplore, and—pay for. Given good teachers to begin with, efficiency is promoted by continuance of service, involving personal acquaintance and acquaintance with the conditions. Stability of occupation in the case of teachers tends to attract good teachers. We may have to pay high salaries; but we get results; good results we are willing to pay for, and they can't be got without being well paid for. As a rule in this world service, or anything else, is worth what we pay for it. If we pay good salaries we generally get value in good service; cheap service is generally cheap in every sense. The wisdom of the proverbial injunction to praise the bridge that carries one safely over the stream is illustrated in the policy of the Board of Education, which retains the service of good teachers, with the natural result of making them better teachers. Appreciation stimulates to deserving it.

HOT WEATHER HYSTERICS.

The Toronto News would try to make political capital out of its grandmother's death — credit the Hearst government with making her live to eighty and blame the Opposition for killing her before she reached ninety. It is now claiming for the Hearst government, credit for prohibition which the government resisted as long as political exigencies made resistance safe. It knows, or if it doesn't, everybody else knows, that it was the Opposition policy enforced by argument and advocacy for years that, literally, drove prohibition upon the government—not "absolute prohibition" as the News claims, but a prohibition act that does not quite prohibit; has leaky spots in the statute that permits drink to find its way to the stomach through the stew of liquor the act permits in the homes of citizens. The prohibition act, according to the organ is not perfect if it is "absolute." It cannot be enforced if the North Perth seat is lost—if one cent out of 111 pegs against the government. One would think that North Perth, in the eyes of the News was the axis of the empire, of Imperialism, a strategic position that has the relative importance the possession of Pegasus would have in the western drive of the allies.

The News enumerates the dire results that would come from a defeat of the government in North Perth, for this reason:

(1) A victory for the Opposition in North Perth will encourage the liquor interests to resist prohibition.

(2) A victory for the Opposition in North Perth will lead Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his associates to believe that German voters throughout the Dominion are hostile to the war and can be consolidated against the Borden Government.

(3) A victory for the Opposition in North Perth will stimulate Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Mr. Bourassa, Senator Landry and the Quebec Provincialists to believe that Ontario is not anxious to maintain the school regulations but with the rest of the Dominion can be made subservient to a solid Quebec and Ultramontane control over education established throughout all the English Provinces.

There is no need to consult the law calendar to show that the "silly season" is on—the columns of the News show it. Its hystrical concern, its panicky feeling over one little by-election indicates that it is afraid that the Conservative majority in North Perth of 1,117 at the general election will be converted into a minority, and that the Conservative majority in the Legislature of 57 will be cut down by one, and that the government and the province, the country and the empire will be shaken to their foundations. Its anxiety and its rabid partisanship rise superior to all the enervating influences of the silly season, to the mighty struggle of the nations; to the critical battle now raging in the west of the continental battle front. It is more important to win a little parochial political victory than to smash the Kaiser. It may be foolish to write of these things at this time, but it is not more foolish than the writing that gives the occasion.

CIVIC IMPROVEMENT.

Civic improvement has a wide meaning. It involves promotion of cleaning up movements, garden improvement, street tidiness and other practical forms of securing the city beautiful by civic and individual action; and with present conditions, it involves promotion of legislation to make things easier to do. It appears that Ontario is behind most of the other provinces in the matter of legislation that will make straight the ways of civic improvement. Nova Scotia has a most active, not to say belligerent, civic improvement league, and the province deserves its reputation of leading all the provinces in housing and town-planning, legislation a condition that stiffens the backbone and helps the work of civic improvement leagues. New Brunswick is also alive to the importance of this sort of legislation; Prince Edward Island is also alert; and Quebec is considering town-planning legislation. Manitoba, Saskatchewan and British Columbia also are dealing with the subject of town-planning legislation. We have Ontario alone, as the laggard in the matter of legislation, that lies at the back of civic improvement enterprises. We have the authority of that invaluable quarterly, "Conservation of Life," issued under the authority of the Conservation Commission, that town planning movements are slow in Ontario—

> "Owing to the absence of suitable legislation, and keen disappointment is felt in many parts of the province, that the government was not able to introduce a town-planning bill at the last session of the legislature. There is no province in which there is more urgent need of legislation and none in which public opinion has shown itself so strongly in favour of it. It is to be hoped that something will be done to meet the public demand when Parliament resumes its sittings, but meanwhile several important schemes have to be deferred."

It is unfortunate that our legislators are not wide awake enough to give the lead to public opinion in regard to systematic dealing with the problem of city planning. The matters involved are important. With efficient town planning we have the elements and foundation of system, whose lack is the curse of the municipalities of Ontario. We have lack of system in dealing with our streets and public places, a condition that involves large expenditure for temporary and otherwise unsatisfactory results. We don't get half value for our money. We have lack of system and failure of civic and private coordination of effort in dealing with the tremendously important matter of public and private sanitation. We have lack of system and failure of coordination in dealing with the beauty of our streets and public places.

Peterborough has the natural, the physical, conditions of making it the most beautiful city in Canada; the natural facilities in the form of drainage tend to make it one of the healthiest cities in Canada. It has the natural facilities, in the form of soil, surface configuration, lending themselves to ease of drainage to permit of Peterborough having the best streets at the lowest cost of any city in the dominion. We have the conditions and the public spirit and taste of the citizens to permit of Peterborough being a Dominion leader in all these things if we had only leaders in our civic life, who would take an interest and show the way and make it easy. But we have no public body in the shape of a commission or something of the kind to be, the leading and, essentially, the driving force. We are muddling in haphazard methods; we foolishly follow in material matters, the Scriptural injunction in regard to moral matters—"Take no thought of the morrow." In all these matters we let circumstances compel us to action; emergent compulsory action, that is unsatisfactory in result because it has no plan, no foresight. These may be considered strong assertions, but let any one consider them in relation to civic conditions and he will admit that if anything is wrong about them they err on the side of moderation and mildness.

THE PROBLEM CONFRONTING THE UNITED STATES RAILWAYS

We hope Sir Robert Borden and Hon. Frank Cochrane met W. M. Acworth when they were in New York. Mr. Acworth is an Englishman with an international reputation as a railway authority, who has devoted much time and study to the railway problems of the United States. His latest utterances, published by the National City Bank of New York, will no doubt attract widespread attention. They may be acclaimed by some financial journals as an argument for higher freight rates, but that will not impair their real value or lessen their significance.

Couched in courteous terms, they compliment American railway enterprise, but make it plain that the American railways are facing an utter breakdown. Mr. Acworth says the American roads have been giving good service at fairly reasonable rates, but he says they are not keeping up with their business, and will soon be unable to servey the country efficiently. Double tracking, involving in some cases almost entire reconstruction, is imperatively demanded, and all the roads must in Mr. Acworth's opinion make large expenditures without delay upon replacement, terminals, equipment, maintenance and betterments.

How much will be needed?

Mr. Acworth does not name any amount beyond saying that James J. Hill declared years ago that the roads ought to be spending upon these accounts one billion dollars a year. We know that the late Charles Francis Adams, an ultra conservative, estimated that one billion dollars was urgently needed at once for terminals alone. Were the question put up to him we have no doubt that Mr. Acworth would frankly declare that to save themselves and retain their efficiency the roads must raise three or four billion dollars.

The next step in his demonstration is to show that the railways cannot raise any such sum; that they have pretty well reached the end of their tether in the matter of financing. Europe he says, will absorb no more American railway securities and the American public will not buy them. The long term, low interest railway bond is not in demand because it is no longer considered as a permanently safe investment. As for railway stocks, the public is not likely soon to forget the looting of the New Haven, the Rock Island and other enterprises.

Mr. Acworth is polite enough to suggest that in some way the roads may struggle through if public opinion will permit freight rates to be increased, and the public will once more confidingly buy railway stock issues. But this, we think, is mere verbal complaisance; the sort of talk a physician might give a patient in the last stages of consumption. The roads cannot greatly increase their freight rates, and they will not get many people to buy their securities. But unless they can raise a huge amount of money by the issue of more capital they must confess to an utter breakdown, and some other agency must be found to do the carrying business of the country. Can anyone doubt that the federal government will step in and do the work? A big strike and tie up might force the government to act immediately, but apart from that it must be plain that the nationalization of railways is near at hand in the United States.

The almost certain nationalization of the American railways is a factor to be considered in dealing with our Canadian railway situation. Few people either here or in the United States realize what is coming. Mr. Acworth might give our government some valuable pointer. Why not put him on the board of consultation?—Toronto World.

FARM AND GARDEN.

Continually cleaning up to keep clean is what pays in poultry keeping.

The Norway spruce is probably as valuable a tree for a wind-brake as can be obtained.

The dipping of sheep is an annual duty for every sheep breeder to follow, or should be so considered.

Dusting the hens and the chicks should never be considered in the same class as the housewife's dusting.

Keeping an eye on those who are succeeding with their poultry will go a long way toward helping those who are not.

If you need more horses buy mares. As a rule there is less depreciation in value in a mare as the years go by than in a gelding.

Experiments show that permitting potatoes to sprout before planting gives a real advantage, increasing the yield in some instances.

A handsome lawn in the country is quite as attractive as one in the town, and when you want to sell your farm it makes a big difference in the price.

Bees are not only money makers in themselves but they render an invaluable service in addition to the production of orchards and clover-seeds.

Whitewashing the inside of the poultry house, nests and brood coops is pleasing to the eye as it is cheerful and helpful to the fowls.

Don't let the steers go back in condition in the spring; a loss in thrift and weight means half the summer pasture used to restore former condition.

When the colour has been taken out of black goods it may be restored by the application of liquid ammonia.

NEW CHEESE BUYER SWEPT LOCAL BOARD THIS MORNING

R. A. Hodgson of Montreal Bought 2859 Cheese at 15⅞ Cents—Mr. Gillespie Refers to Use of Boxes.

R. A. Hodgson of Montreal swept the Cheese Boards offering of 2859 boxes, this morning, at 15 7-8 cents, thereby making a favorable impression upon the salesmen with his appearance among the buyers.

The factories boarded as follows:

Ormonde	160
Young's Point	145
Lang	190
Indian River	65
East Emily	135
Trowern	165
Mount Pleasant	70
Norwood	235
Fleetwood	195
Killarney	116
Total	2,859

Mr. Gillespie opened at 15 cents, and with Messrs. Cook, Flavelle and Hodgson, raised to 15 7-8, at which price Mr. Hodgson secured every factory.

Mr. Gillespie called the attention of the salesmen to the danger of using wet boxes in packing their cheese. [illegible] reported the factories, and [illegible] that considerable moisture [illegible] the quality of the cheese. Mr. Hodgson stated that delivery to [illegible] should be made only in covered waggons, which provided protection against any rain storm that might come up.

The Board adjourned for two weeks.

BOARD WANTS COAL DURING THE SUMMER

Mr. R. Hicks informed the Board of Education that while he could fill his contract for coaling the schools he could not promise to carry it out immediately or during the mid-summer months, owing to circumstances growing out of the strike. The Board desires that this work of filling the bunkers of the various schools be carried out during the vacations, and empowered the Property Committee to do whatever it deemed wise. Mr. Hicks' price was $4.60 a ton, and J. E. Fitzgerald $5.05.

Every woman that lives in any other state than Georgia, West Virginia, and Arkansas, can be admitted to the bar of the United States Supreme Court and plead and practice there.

Minor Cases In Police Court

Magistrate Dumble resumed his duties at the police court this morning after a few days' holidays, and was greeted by the usual number of offenders who came up before him. A resident of Lindsay was charged with driving a horse while he (the driver) was under the influence of liquor, and therefore not in fit condition to handle a horse. He was taxed the usual two dollars and costs, amounting to $5.75.

A Finlander who had spent some time in the Cobalt mines, also fell into the hands of the local police while making a very sad attempt at navigating his way up George street, thereby causing discomfort to the more sober pedestrians. He was assessed the usual fine.

"I guess I'm in for it," was the manner in which a citizen of Tweed pleaded guilty to the charge of being disorderly on Charlotte street. He was fined ten dollars.

A resident of Weaver street appeared on a charge of drunkenness and was fined two dollars.

BOARD OF EDUCATION ADJOURNED TILL SEPTEMBER

In the absence of Mr. B. F. Ackerman, Dr. Burnham was appointed chairman of last night's regular meeting of the Board of Education, and at its close Mr. John Crane moved an adjournment until September, following the usual custom of applying the idea of midsummer vacations, not only to the schools but to their trustees also.

Mr. W. H. Hill's motion, of which he had previously given notice, was passed, providing for an amendment of the Rules and Regulations that six members, instead of eight, constitute a quorum. With the reduction of its membership, six is now a majority.

COMMITTEE ON APPOINTMENTS

Mr. Hill presented the report of this committee, recommending as follows:

That Miss C. M. Caldwell be appointed on the Public School staff to succeed Miss Bristol, who has resigned, salary to be according to schedule and duties to start 1st September next.

That Mr. Robert Northcutt be appointed Janitor of the Queen Alexandra School to succeed Mr. B. C. Yelland, who has resigned, salary to be according to schedule and duties to commence 1st of July, 1916.

That the basis rate per class room paid to the Janitors of the various schools (up to 8 rooms) be increased from $70.00 to $75.00; such increase to date from 1st July, 1916.

That in view of the efficient services rendered by Miss Mary F. Erskine as Assistant Principal at the King George School during the term ending 30th June, she be granted an honorarium of $100.00.

That the following teachers be re-appointed on the Public School staff for the ensuing year at salaries according to schedule adopted by the Board. (Followed the names of all the Public School teachers of last year, except one).

That the following special teachers of Manual Training, Art and Music, employed jointly by the Board and the Department of Education, be re-appointed at salaries according to schedule: Mr. A. F. Hagerman, Miss McRae, Miss Rannie.

COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE STAFF

That the following teachers be re-appointed on the Collegiate Institute staff at salaries according to schedule: H. R. H. Kenner, C. Fessenden, A. D. Hone, L. J. Pettit, S. J. Graham, S. J. Stubbs, C. E. Jamieson, F. J. A. Morris, C. S. Brown, V. R. Henry, Miss S. A. McBride, Miss M. Williams.

Your Committee submit herewith an agreement between the Department of Education and this Board in connection with the class-rooms used by the students of the Normal School for observation and practical instruction in the art of teaching, and recommend that the same be adopted, and that the Chairman and Secretary be authorized to execute the same on behalf of the Board.

Mr. G. N. Gordon challnged the last clause, suggesting that as a precautionary step it be deleted until the Board was assured that Peterborough was receiving as much from the Government for the use of local schools by Normal School students as was paid in other cities of the province where similar facilities were provided.

Mr. Hill replied that Mr. Duncan Walker informed him that the Government had a uniform grant or allowance of $25 a room for this service to Normal Schools.

In seconding the motion Mr. Eastwood observed that the point secured to be well taken, and suggested that the Secretary might write the Department for confirmation.

REPORT OF SUPERVISION COMMITTEE.

Mr. Crane presented the following report of the Supervision Committee:

As authorised, your Committee advertised for tenders for Text-Books and Supplies, and also for Collegiate Institute supplies for the ensuing year and have awarded the contract to Messrs. Trebilcock Bros., their's being the lowest tender.

Made a Big Hit in Niagara

La Tena Shows Delighted Big Crowds—Will be Here on July 12th

The Niagara Falls Gazette, speaking of the La Tena shows, which will be here on July 12th, says:

There's a show in town to-day. Even if you didn't see the tents and the teeming life about them, and if you missed the parade in the morning, you couldn't fail to understand that "there's a circus in town," because the attitude of the small boy betokens it. He's the best barometer on the circus question there is.

And it's a very good show that's in town, too. It's the LaTena wild animal show, but contrary to the notion many are carrying, it is not an animal show exclusively, but a regular show with clowns, trapeze performers, slack-wire walkers, tumblers, etc.

And it is a good, clean show, as well. There is no gambling or other questionable devices permitted on the ground. If this circus cannot get the money through its amusement features, it don't get it—that's all.

A very meritorious street parade was held this morning, the pageant traversing a goodly portion of the town and proving an excellent advertisement for the show.

Many Saw Show This Afternoon.

There are three rings in the big tent and as each is occupied with first-class artists, equal to those of the big shows, the eye of the beholder is kept busy taking in all the wonderful stunts. The trained elephants, lions, bears, seals, leopards, and tigers in the performance this afternoon were the best ever seen here and did many astounding things that proved them to be possessed of a high order of intelligence and under perfect training.

Mons. Felix Morales proved to be the sensational feature of the afternoon and easily demonstrated his right to the title of "The greatest head balancer in the world" when he walked to the top of the tent on a wire and then slid down to the ground on the wire while standing on his head, a distance of one hundred and forty feet.

One of the best features was the high jumping of two very fine high-jumping horses. Flying Joe, ridden by Miss Etta Myers, holding a record jump of 7 feet 2 inches, and Major McKinley, ridden by Miss Jess Nichols, with a record of 7 feet.

Capt. Picard's highly educated seals and sea lions do a wonderful act. Walking on a tight rope, playing musical instruments, and doing many almost impossible balancing feats.

A pleasing feature for the kiddies as well as the grown ups in the three baby lions in the menageries. They are just three weeks old and the cutest things you ever saw.

At the close of the big show a great exhibition of Wild West riding, lasso throwing, rope spinning, riding bucking horses and many other features of the wild and wooly West, is given.

FISHING ON LITTLE LAKE

According to reports and stories received from local fishermen, the "finny tribe" seem to exist in a fair abundance in Little Lake so far this year. Wharfinger Runnet of the new wharf has seen several fine specimens of the watery tribe landed by local followers of Isaac Walton. On last Monday a "south-ender" landed one which tipped the scales at 20 pounds, which weight certainly constitutes a large fish. The water on the lake has been real high so far this year, although the high water is not regarded as a help to good fishing.

Only $2,000 Temporary Repairs For South Central School

Board of Education Presented a Divided Mind But Majority Ruled —Dr. F. C. Neal Presents the Modern School Requirements.

SHOWING OF SOUTH CENTRAL

The proposed repairs to the South Central school were considerably revised at last night's meeting of the board of Education, when it was decided to install new hot air furnaces for the sum of $650.00, and to improve the ventilation and plumbing systems at an expenditure of $700.00, the entire alterations to cost $3,000.00 instead of $15,000 as had been previously planned.

It will be remembered that the Property committee of the Board had called for tenders for the rather extensive improvements that had been decided upon, but the lowest tender proved to be nearly $3,000 in excess of the $15,000 which had been provided by the City Council. The committee, Mr. Denne explained, would not undertake the responsibility of spending money which the Board did not have, nor of letting a contract when the lowest tender so much exceeded estimated cost. Hence, they applied for a special meeting of the Board, but Mr. Hill, Mr. Crane, Col. Miller and Dr. Burnham refused to sign the requisition, Mr. Denne stated, and action was thereby held up.

The Committe's Report.

The report of the Property committee as presented by Mr. Denne was as follows:

As authorized, your committee advertised for tenders for the proposed repairs and improvements at the South Central school, and as the same were greatly in excess of the amount estimated, your committee recommend that the Board make temporary repairs that will answer for one or two years, viz., that the sum of $650.00, estimated to replace the present furnaces with new hot air furnaces, plus $700.00 for repairs to the plumbing and ventilating, be spent, and that the Board consider expropriating the entire block and the erection of a new school building.

Opposed to Report.

Discussing the report, Mr. Crane stated that he did not approve it at all. The South Central could be made a good school serviceable for valid to come, right with the expenditure of $15,000. This proposal, he said, was better than that of the Property committee. A new school would mean about $30,000 for property alone, and even with that expenditure the grounds would not be sufficient.

Mr. Hill supported Mr. Crane. To expropriate the entire block would be too expensive. The lots immediately east of the school might be purchased. This was a cue to Mr. Denne, who submitted options on the lots for $3,000. Mr. Hill suggested that consideration be given to the idea of doing the summer's alterations by day work.

Mr. Gordon's View.

That $15,000 or $30,000 would not render the school suitable and fit for the congested district of which it is the centre, was the opinion of Mr. G. N. Gordon. He also commented upon the action of those members who had refused to call a special meeting when the Property committee sought to dispose of the problem as quickly as possible when they found they hadn't enough money to accept any of the tenders. Mr. Gordon said he did not regard it as necessary to purchase an entire block for a new school, but he was strongly of the opinion that the South Central school should be one of the best in the city.

Dr Neal's Assertions.

This was Dr. Neal's first opportunity to discuss the South Central school. He was in New York when the question was previously considered. If the school is merely repaired, he said, its accommodation will not be increased; secondly there will be not increased efficiency. There will be no room, no provision for domestic science or manual training. Dr. Neal pointed out the changing tendency in educational system. The recognition of applied science in the United States where the Gary system is being introduced, and in England, was a notable feature of the present attitude toward schools.

Physical Considerations.

Since he had come to Peterborough Dr. Neal stated that his experience had proved to him that the condition at this school were not favourable to the physical welfare of the pupils. He had investigated the statistics received at the city hall during the past five years, showing the number of deaths, except from accident, of school children between the years of 5 and 14. The percentage of deaths he had found as follows:

South Central—35 p.c.
Central—27.2 p.c.
King Edward—16.6 p.c.
Queen Mary—10.3 p.c.
King George—25.5 p.c.
Queen Alexandra—6.4 p.c.

An Important Question.

The number of deaths at the South Central was really larger than represented because the attendance was not as large as at the other schools. Dr. Neal stated that he did not imply that the school itself had anything to do with the situation, but the general environment was not good. The South Central school conditions should be as good as, or even better, than any of the school in the city. The question of the physical condition of the children was a most important one as had been manifested by the discovery in England that a large proportion of the men unfit for military service was accounted for by improper physical conditions and attention between the years of one and ten.

Dr. Neal urged that the South Central school be made compact, a perfect unit in itself. It was a fact that equipment of each of the other schools in the city was two or three times the value of the South Central.

Tax-Rates Not High.

Turning to the financial side of the question, Dr. Neal stated that Peterborough had one of the lowest tax rates in the country and is spending a smaller proportion of its revenue for schools than most cities of its size. A new school might increase the rate, but even then it would not be greater than the rates in other cities of the same size in Ontario.

"I have yet to meet a taxpayer who is in favour of repairing the school, or a contractor who regards that action a wise one."

Mr. Eastwood.

Mr. Eastwood merely repeated what he had contended from the outset, that he could not see the wisdom that prompted patchwork. The district of the South Central school was populous, and an important school area, and it should have the best accommodation that money could buy.

Mr. Crane—It is being said that the $15,000 we proposed to spend would be merely thrown in a hole. I can't see that.

Mr. Crane moved an amendment to the motion, seconded by Mr. Hill, that the original instructions of the Board be carried out by the Property committee. It was apparently supported by only the mover and seconder, and opposed by [illegible], Mr. Gordon and Dr. [illegible] motion remarked that the [illegible] carried, whereupon Dr. [illegible] in that he was presiding and [illegible] voted for the amendment. Mr. [illegible] had refused to vote with Mr. [illegible] and Col. Miller absent, the situation presented a necessitary [illegible].

Mr. Gordon claimed that Dr. Burnham had spoken too [illegible] that the point was not pressed as [illegible] supported the amendment which carried by 4-3.

Mr. Crane stated in [illegible] to the Property committee's contention that the Board had decided upon the plan to be followed, and the Property committee threw it back on the Board. That was his reason for refusing to call a special meeting.

Mr. Denne—The Property committee took no such stand. If you have that idea you got it yourself.

Mr. Eastwood explained that the committee hadn't the money to proceed with the Board's proposal and they returned to the Board for that reason. There was no throwing back.

Dr. Burnham—That's all been settled before Mr. Eastwood. A member shall not speak more than once on any subject.

Mr. Eastwood—I haven't spoke before on this.

After a good natured brush between the acting chairman and Mr. Eastwood, which added another feature to the incidents of the meeting, the business passed to other items.

FAREWELL TO THE NINETY-THIRD.

They are gone, oh sad the parting,
Deep with grief our hearts are stirred,
While we say God-speed, and farewell
To the gallant ninety-third.

For those blithesome, gay young heroes
Ne'er again our eyes may see,
Yet shall we shrink at duty's call
Or frowning fate's decree.

O, cruel war, thy keen edged scythe
Forestalling frail decrepit time,
Reaps down the bravest and the best
In manhood's useful morning prime.

But the fast tears are falling,
And our heads with sorrow bowed,
For our husbands, sons and brothers,
Still our hearts are beating proud.

Well we know, in darkest danger,
They will quit them firm like men,
Treading honour's rugged pathway,
Until they return again.

Pray we too, the God of mercy,
To protect, and shield and keep,
Their dear boys, who so soon embark
Upon the distant deep.

Guiding their barque in safety o'er
The trackless, treacherous main,
Unscathed, by submarine or mine,
Or dreaded aeroplane.

And when between us many a league,
Of broad Atlantic lies,
Where they must face the Teuton hordes,
Beneath far foreign skies.

Each soul endow with courage high
And nerve each arm with might,
To strike with dauntless chivalry
For freedom's sacred right.

We pray not, they may glory win,
Or laurel wreaths of fame,
But pure, untarnished, they may hold
Fair virtue's worthier name.

When in the dust the foe is quelled,
And victory gives the word,
We'll welcome home right royally
The gallant ninety-third.

Berlin Official Statement

Examiner Special:

BERLIN, July 5. — In stubborn hand-to-hand fighting the German troops under Prince Leopold of Bavaria, have repulsed the Russians near Barnovitch, inflicting severe losses. A violent battle is raging on both sides of the Somme, where the Allies are pushing their great offensive, it was officially announced to-day.

From the Ancre Valley northward to the seacoast, minor engagements and lively artillery engagements occurred on the British and Belgian fronts. In the last twenty-four hours nine hundred and fifty British prisoners have been taken.

British Capture Five Hundred More Prisoners

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 5.—Hand-to-hand fighting is continuing between the Ancre and the Somme, said the supplementary official bulletin from General Haig at 5 o'clock this afternoon. We have captured 500 more prisoners.

Total German Prisoners Number Sixteen Thousand

Examiner Special:

LONDON, July 5.—News despatches from Flanders to-day say that the total German prisoners taken in the present Allies' western offensive is about sixteen thousand, which would bring a conservative estimate of German casualties to nearly seventy thousand.

Drive Has Already Netted 14,000 Prisoners

Much undeserved obloquy has been heaped upon the British army by English, French and American people because we apparently did nothing to assist the French in the desperate fighting on the Verdun front. But all this time we were doing the part requested by General Joffre.

"According to this plan, we conserved our troops, accumulated supplies and waited for the word for the grand offensive in which we were to play our part with the Russians and Italians, as well as the French. Naturally enough, during these anxious weeks, we could give out no exciting news, because our deliberate preparations were not good copy. For certain tactical and moral reasons, which need not be dilated on, it was necessary that the French should not lose the east bank of the Meuse, and General Joffre informed us that he could hold the positions which commanded that part of the river until the end of June, so we knew we were going to strike at the beginning of July.

The blow planned by the allied general staff included offensives by the Russians and Italians, which, I do not need to tell you, already have begun. We are not disappointed with our own advance, which we expected to be slow, and we are enormously pleased with the wonderful progress made by the French, who, with comparatively light losses, are sweeping forward to the Somme.

THE GERMANS SURPRISED.

It is quite evident the Germans were surprised by the strength of the French offensive. They evidently believed our allies would be kept too busy before Verdun to participate seriously in the western offensive, which they knew was coming. Consequently they made extensive preparations before our front, piling up reinforcements there while comparatively neglecting the southern sector dominated by the French. The Germans, anticipating our move, brought up great forces, much of which consisted of independent units called Ersatz battalions, armed only with light machine guns. It was these battalions which inflicted the heaviest losses on us.

Our enemy is brave and resourceful, and put up a desperate defence, especially in the region from Gommecourt to Fricourt, where he evidently expected our main attack. In this region the fighting is especially severe. The chalk formation gave the Germans a splendid chance to make the best use of their miners, who constructed dugouts and other defensive works which our heaviest shells could not destroy. From these works Ersatz battalions put up a most determined resistance.

"Physical features made the capture of Fricourt peculiarly difficult, and our severe losses there were not unexpected. Montauban was one of the strongest positions occupied by the Germans, but our advance there was brilliant and rapid, without the losses suffered between Gommecourt and Fricourt.

HUMAN FACTOR CONSIDERED

"On the whole, we are well satisfied with our advance. We will continue our artillery preparation, as we have no intention of butting our heads against a stone wall. The human factor must be considered, and that factor presents some unexpected problems on the German side, since after all the enemy has something to say about the progress of any offensive. We are meeting strenuous opposition. Our progress most certainly will be deliberate. Many places like Fricourt will be taken only after overcoming desperate opposition.

"That our gallant allies should advance faster with smaller losses than we is not only the fortune of war but may be called poetic justice, since they lost so heavily during the long weeks while we were getting ready to take our share in the great offensive. However it must be clear now, even to laymen, that the blame heaped on us for not going to the aid of the French before Verdun was quite undeserved, as we are doing exactly what Gen. Joffre requested. And when he gave the word we sprang to the attack, in which we have suffered grievously, but which leads to no regret beyond sorrow for the fallen; for it is now our time to stand the brunt of the battle.

WILL REACH THE SOMME.

"South of the Somme the Germans were completely surprised, and our allies will get through to the river without much loss. In that region you may look for immediate developments, as the fighting there is now in open field formation, the last of the enemy's works having been captured. A glance at the war map will show you that our allies are clear across the network of trenches.

"Farther north you will note that while our line is now beyond the first series of German defences we are in immediate contact with strongly fortified places.

"We are well content to do our share in the great general allied offensive, which already has proven that the initiative, so long in their hands, is now lost by the armies of the Central Powers.

GERMAN PRISONERS MAKE THEIR ESCAPE FROM FORT HENRY

KINGSTON, July 5.—About three o'clock on Saturday afternoon three of the trusted German prisoners at Fort Henry escaped. They were sent down to the shore from the internment camp to fix up the engine in a motor boat belonging to one of the 14th Regiment officers, who are in charge of the soldiers doing guard duy at the fort. The men were put in charge of one of the military police men, and after fixing up the boat they were allowed to take a trial spin under the supervision of the policeman. To prevent an escape they were only given a limited supply of gasoline and told that their spin must be very short.

In some manner they procured an extra supply of gasoline from torches or elsewhere and hid it in the boat. When they had gone out from Navy Bay the policeman became suspicious and told the men that they had better turn back. The men, however, thought otherwise and told the policeman that they had special permission from the commandant, Major P. C. C. Campbell, to take a long cruise. The policeman was not mislead by this story, and at once commanded the men to return.

Instead of doing this they seized the man, tied him up securely and laid him in the back of the boat. They were big, strong fellows, and were easily able to overpower their guard. After they had got him securely trussed up, they poured the extra gasoline into the engine and headed the launch for the foot of Wolfe Island. They were making very good speed at this time, and when they had reached the foot of the island they headed up th American Channel and stopped their boat about two miles east of Cape Vincent.

Here they landed and started for the inland country. They left the policeman in the boat, and he was later found by some people who happened to be passing. At once he got in communication with Major Campbell and afterwards tried to locate the men. He was unsuccessful, and so far no trace has been found of the escaped prisoners. It is the opinion of the commandant of the internment camp that the men are now in some nearby New York State village. Every effort is being made to locate them, and it is thought that they will be captured shortly. If they are found on the soil of the United States there may be a very interesting legal battle for their extradition. They can be held on the charge of theft, and it may be that the case will be fought out in the United States courts if the men are caught. Then again they could be deported with little trouble.

This is the first time since the war began that prisoners have escaped from Fort Henry camp. On the commencement of the war the Government recognized in it a suitable place for the internment of alien enemies. Lieut.-Col. Dawson was put in charge of the camp, and last summer when he was given the command of the 59th Battalion Lieut.-Col. Fee was made commandant. On the latter's appointment as commanding officer of the 109th Battalion, Capt. P. C. C. Campbell was put in charge, and later was promoted to the rank of major on account of his very efficient work.

The fort was for some time an internment camp for all alien enemies who did not behave themselves in a seemly manner, but gradually the Austrians, Turks and Bulgarians have been sent to other camps and at the present time Fort Henry is only used for German prisoners.

GERMAN BIRTH RATE THIRD OF LOSSES IN MAN POWER

Germany at last has reached the turning point where her fighting force is being depleted much more rapidly than it can be supplied with new men, and military observers believe her entire reserves, which cannot possibly exceed 700,000, will be completely exhausted within a very few months. Reduced to figures, Germany is losing 100,000 men a month in killed, incapacitated by wounds from further service and prisoners, or 1,200,000 a year. Some authorities place the number at double these amounts. She is gaining from new recruits fewer than 400,000 a year. This leaves a net loss to her army of 800,000 men a year, a loss which cannot be replaced.

Already Germany has called to the colours the class of 1917 to furnish stock for slaughter—"kanonenfleisch" (meat for cannon), Bismarck used to call them.

Germany's population in 1910 was 64,925,993; in 1900 it was 56,367,178, showing an increase of 8,558,815 in the ten years. This does not include a population of about 15,000,000 in the German colonies in Africa and Asia, which were immediately cut off on the beginning of the farm from being of any use to the mother country from the viewpoint of military strength. The colonies of England, France and Belgium, it may be mentioned, have, on the other hand, been a source of constantly increasing additions to the military power of these countries. Germany's average increase in population for the ten years mentioned was about 800,000. There is a slight excess of male births—2,040 boys to every 1,000 girls. This would give an average increase of 443,000 males to 417,000 females. An estimated yearly addition of 400,000 men to the army out of 443,000 born is certainly a very liberal allowance.

Regarding losses the German official lists of casualties since the war began up to June 1 give 734,412 dead, 1,351,692 wounded and 339,493 prisoners and missing, a total of 2,324,596 for the twenty-two months — about 133,000 a month or 1,600,000 a year.

Yearly Net Loss 800,000.

This yearly gross loss is four times as much as the annual addition to the army by the most liberal estimate. Assuming that forty per cent. of the wounded return to the ranks, this would reduce the net loss to 1,200,000 a year, against an annual recruitment of 400,000. Even if all the wounded should return, the dead, missing and prisoners (600,000) outnumbered the new recruits half as much again.

It also should be remembered that these figures of 1,200,000 loss against 400,000 gain are the most extreme figures in favour of Germany. Even the German staff, in a statement issued last month, asserted that it was assured of only "3,000 recruits a month as long as the war lasted," which makes 300,000 a year, or 40,000 fewer than the number above allotted.

Concerning the strength of the German army, the Paris Liberte estimates the total at 4,940,000, of which there are 180 divisions of 20,000 men each at both fronts and 967,000 left as reserves. Swiss reports say that the German reserves have diminished this year by 500,000 and that 200,000 recruits have been added, making a net decrease of 300,000 men. All the German reserves, according to the Agenzia Libera, cannot exceed 700,000 men, whereas there were more than a million at the end of 1915. Contrary to her hopes aroused by the Balkan drive Germany can expect no help from Bulgaria or Turkey. On the contrary she has been obliged to [illegible] and Turkey [illegible] Germany [illegible] Bulgaria [illegible]

RUNAWAY WIFE HIS PROMISED "SURPRISE"

Lewiston, Pa., July 4.—"Get your dinner at the restaurant to-day, honey, and when you return home to-night I will have a surprise for you," were the words of Mrs. Steve Dampyon to her husband as he left for work. It certainly was some surprise when he returned, ten hours later, to find a "To Let" card on the house, the furniture sold, $200 in cash and other valuables gone, and his wife and daughter missing. Later the pair were traced to the Pennsylvania Railroad station, where they had purchased tickets for Chicago.

After arresting a fellow-countryman whom Dampyon charged with alienating his wife's affections, Sheriff Vangands left for the Windy City, where he expects to apprehend and return with the pair.

soldiers live and train for work at the front. Headquarters, however, wanted to show the visitors a big programme of sports and would have done so had not the weatherman interfered.

Died at the Gun.

Last week the Examiner published an announcement that Corp. Jas Chandler of the 4th Battery, C.F.A., had been killed in action. Confirmation of this announcement has come in the form of a letter to Mrs. Seaward, 169 Perry street, where Corp. Chandler boarded. The letter is from his relatives in England and says in part:

"There is still a lot of the Canadian boys passing through here. One of the groups have just finished their training at one of the camps near here and they have gone to France or are going to avenge their fellow countrymen who have fallen. Indeed the Canadians have done their work nobly, but oh at what a cost! The last fortnight they have indeed done well, and the laurels they have won they richly deserve. We are brokenhearted to tell you that our good and dear son Jim has fallen with his mates at his gun and doing his duty. We had his card saying "all well," and date June 7th, then a kind letter dated the 10th from his offices telling us he was killed in action, and then another from the chaplain dated the 12th."

Corp. Chandler had many friends in Peterborough who will mourn his loss.

Yesterday it was stated in this column that Wm. Withers had joined the 74th Battery. The paragraph should have read Cyril Withers. Gunner Withers has a brother in France who went over with the 39rd Battery, another brother in the 83nd Battery at Petawawa, and a brother-in-law in the same battery, a brother and brother-in-law in the 93rd Battalion, and another brother-in-law in France with an Imperial unit.

The Tragedy of the Second Best.—As he was about to enter the fashionable city church the sad-looking young man was stopped by the verger. "Excuse me," said the official, "but are you related to the bride or the bridegroom?" "No," was the reply. "Then you will pardon me for asking," went on the verger, "what is your interest in this wedding, which is to be of the quietest family nature?" "My interest?" replied the sad-looking young man, with a bitter smile. "I am the defeated candidate."

A Strayed Sheep.—A north country minister, while out for a walk one day, met Sandy McPherson, a shepherd, whom he had not seen in his church for a good many Sundays. Pastor—"Why, Sandy, you are like a stray sheep to me. What has been the matter with you for the last two or three Sundays?" Sandy—"Weel, ye ken, sir, when a sheep strays awa' frae the lave o' the flock ye may be sure it maun be awa' in search o' better pasture." The minister looks to the other side of the road when Sandy passes him now.

CHIEF CARPENTER IS DEAD; BRINGING BODY FROM BANFF

Montreal, July 3.—Chief Carpenter is dead. After six months illness of heart trouble at Banff, the detective so well known in Montreal, where he was the head of the detective department for years, passed away on Saturday. The body will be brought to Montreal for burial from the home of his son.

Silas Huntington Carpenter joined the police force of Montreal, a young man of 26, some 34 years ago, and was afterwards chief of the detective department here for years. He was born at Brownsburgh, Que., on Jan 29, 1854. He received his early education at the local school, and afterwards attended the Ottawa Collegiate Institute.

At the age of twenty he married Miss F. W. Phebe Gilbert. Six years later he sought and obtained a position as constable on the Montreal police force. His courage and capacity soon marked him for promotion, and he had only been patrolling the street two years when he was made a sergeants. Soon afterwards he abandoned the uniform forever and was appointed a city detective. Then he resigned from the city police force and joined the Canadian Secret Service. This was just ten years after he had first donned a policeman's uniform and he was only 26 years old.

Six years later he was again called upon to take office under the corporation of Montreal, in 1896, as Chief of the Detective Bureau. The same year his first wife having been dead some years, he married Miss J. Trollope. He remained Chief of Detectives until he accepted the appointment of Chief of Police of Edmonton.

NEVER KNEW FEAR.

Of fine physique, unquestioned courage and determination, Mr. Carpenter had his share of the adventures and risks of his profession. Early in his career he went out to a quarries back of the city with a warrant to arrest a man. The people out there at that time were burly and brutal, and the young officer was beaten into insensibility and left bleeding and apparently half dead in a ditch. He recovered consciousness and struggled back to the city; securing assistance, without waiting to have his wounds dressed, he led the constables back to the scene of the fray and after a fierce fight his assailants were captured and landed in the Montreal police station.

He personally made many important arrests and was identified with the investigation of some of the most notable criminal cases of his time. With the assistance of the Dominion police and the late Chief of Provincial Detectives, K. P. McCaskrill, the culprits in the famous Ville Marie Bank case were brought to justice after persistent hour to hour work for six months. In all its circumstances this case was one of the most sensational in the annals of crime on this continent.

Among the most sensational cases handled was that of the famous Donald Morrison, the outlaw, in which the present Inspector McMahon won his spurs. Another exciting incident in Carpenter's career was his spiriting of Gaynor and Greene, the American refugees, out of the hands of the Quebec police, and to the harbor front, where he put them on board of a fast tug and rushed them up to Montreal on a warrant from the court. Eventually after a long legal fight, they were extradited on the charge of being connected with the grafting of millions in army contracts. The two Americans had enlisted the aid of certain influences in Quebec, which were forestalled by Carpenter's coup.

When a paymaster of the city hall became a fugitive some 13 or 14 years ago, Carpenter pursued and finally arrested him in Cuba. He won international note by his pursuit in a steamer on the St. Lawrence and the capture of Gaynor and Green, the central figures with Captain Carter in the United States federal building graft cases at Savannah, Ga. With Col. Percy Sherwood, he was a personal guard of the Duke of York (now H.M. King George) on his trip through Canada.

Locally, however, his name will always be remembered in connection with the organized pursuit of the outlaw Donald Morrison, in the woods of Megantic—although the actual capture was made by Inspector McMahon.

SHOT BY DILLON.

Then came a time when the chief was shot down and lay for months teasing on a bed of pain with doubts at times if he would ever be able to resume active work again. John Dillon, at that time known as Smith, a half demented book agent, had threatened his landlady on Mance street with a revolver. A policeman who was sent to arrest him was shot and badly wounded. Two others were sent, and one of them (Shea) was shot and killed. Then came the first of what was to be a series of instances in Paris and London where an armed desperado set at defiance the law force of the country.

For eight hours Dillon was besieged in the house on Mance street. Ten thousand people gathered on the scene, and hundreds of police and detectives were there. With a view of driving out the man at bay without hurting him the fire department was called upon to throw powerful streams into the house. When word was given to turn on the water, Carpenter ran into the range of Dillon's fire to break a window and let the streams have their full effect. At once Dillon threw the barrel of a shot gun through the window and fired point blank. Carpenter fell with a gaping wound in one hand and the balance of the charge in his groin. Then for hours the fire brigade played and from back and front police and detectives poured a fusillade of bullets into the house, even as nothing further was seen of Dillon a rush was made from the back and those who entered the house found the murderer lying on a bed with a bullet wound in his chest.

It was weary months before Carpenter was able to resume active duty and many more before he could again enjoy the one exercise upon which he doted, horse back riding. His resignation from Montreal was generally regretted and he was the recipient of a handsome testimonial, to which the leading citizens of the community contributed.

After he retired from the Edmonton position, he was appointed by the Dominion government magistrate at Banff. When the war broke out he was sent to Montreal to organize the work of registering and where necessary, interning alien enemies in this vicinity. When this task had been pretty thoroughly accomplished he returned to his duties at Banff, and the news of his death came as a surprise to his many friends here, not having heard of any serious illness. It now seems that his health has been failing since last Autumn. The remains will be brought to Montreal for burial.

WOULDN'T COOK FOR GERMAN "BOARDERS."

New York, July 4.—Mrs. Emile Van Roten, a resident of Antwerp, whose husband, a diamond cutter, had been wounded at the siege of that city and had been transferred to America, was a passenger, with her three children on board the steamship New York of the American line.

Mrs. Van Roten told of the almost miraculous escape she and her children had from death during the bombardment of Antwerp.

"We heard an explosion," she said, "and saw the houses of our neighbors toppling into the street. We ran into the cellar and remained there for two days. When hunger drove me to look out of our hiding place I found our house in ruins. We took refuge at No. 26 Rue Rashandel, one of the few houses remaining intact. One day I opened the door to find a German officer there. He asked whether I would take him in as a boarder. I literally pushed him out of the house.

"'All right,' he said, 'that being the case, you shall have thirty boarders tomorrow.'

"He was as good as his word. Thirty troopers appeared the following day and took up their residence at the house. When I refused to cook for them they brought in three troopers who were chefs and did the cooking for the 'boarders.' They were determined to have their own way, but were polite about it and were kind to me and the children."

Mme. Melba possesses such a retentive memory that she can learn an entire opera within a week. Most of her studying is in bed, as she airs are chiefly mastered when she is walking or driving.

PHYSICIAN PREDICTS NEW MEDICAL ERA

Remedy Lies in Insurance System Centred Round the Hospitals.

In The American Magazine is an interesting article by Dr. Richard C. Cabot, chief of the medical staff of the Massachusetts General Hospital, who criticizes the way in which medicine and surgery are practised. "The present organization of medical service ('private practice')," he says, "is unnecessarily productive of wrong diagnoses and wrong treatments for everybody except the very rich and the very poor. While it is true that private practitioners do enjoy now and then a unique opportunity for the intimate personal guidance of their patients, yet this advantage is more than neutralized by the disasters necessarily resulting from diagnoses and treatments made without the help of the instruments, laboratories and consultations on which acurate and intelligent medical work now depends. Only in hospitals can such group work with proper division of labour and utilization of the resources of modern science be had.

"Moreover, the fact that the private practitioner has to make his living out of disease handicaps his eagerness to diminish and prevent disease in his vicinity, and distracts him from putting his best efforts into the study and practice of preventive medicine and hygenic education.

"The remedy lies not in state sickness insurance of the German type, but in an insurance system centred round hospitals. This is no remote ideal. It had been in operation for eight years at the University of California and to a lesser extent in other State universities, where for a small annual fee the student body is served by a group of salaried physicians who work as a team in a hospital managed by the university. Thus for five dollars a year seven thousand students are enabled to get a better type of diagnosis, treatment and preventive advice than is now obtainable by any group of people in the country except the very rich and the very poor."

OBITUARY

LILY JANE McGREGOR.

The death occurred of Lily Jane McGregor, wife of Dr. D. A. Kidd, of Atwood, Ontario on Tuesday, July 4th, aged 40 years. Deceased was a daughter of the late Alexander McGregor, of Smith township. She was a Presbyterian in religion and a faithful member of Atwood church. In social life she was highly respected and will be greatly missed in the circle in which she moved. She leaves behind her a sorrowing husband and one daughter, Mrs. H. C. Wilkinson, whose husband at the present time is overseas. Also one brother, Alex. McGregor of Smith township. The funeral will take place from Bellegheem's undertaking rooms, Hunter street, Peterborough, on Friday, July 7th, at 2 o'clock p.m. and proceed to the Little Lake cemetery for interment. The funeral service will be conducted by her cousin, Rev. J. S. I. Wilson of Oshawa.

BIG CROWD AT METHODIST PICNIC

The annual excursion of the George Street Methodist church took place yesterday to Jubilee Point and Gores' Landing and a bumper crowd took in this annual enjoyable outing down the Otonabee to the favourite old site overlooking Rice Lake. The Steamer "Stoney Lake" left the George Street wharf at nine o'clock carrying some two hundred holidayers. The crowd took dinner at the Point and an excellent programme of sports was run off after dinner which caused much rivalry and excitement, especially among the younger members of the party. At three o'clock the party sailed across the lake to Gores' Landing, after one hour spent here, the return trip was made, "home and mother" being reached about 7.30 p.m.

WAR TRANSFORMS AN ENGLISH CITY

War found Sheffield, says a correspondent of the London Times, engaged in armor plate making. Then orders were given for guns, and still more guns. Messrs. Vickers rose to the occasion. They built a large new workshop in three weeks and before the top end was completed the lower end was humming with machinery. The war has stimulated improvement and rapidity of construction. As demands for more government work came in new shops arose until the Sheffield Vickers became the vast place it is to-day, employing 10,000 hands as against 6,000 the day that war broke out.

They were helped, too, as the other firms were, by the spirit of loyalty of the men. There were no strikes; all disputes were settled by the arbitration board and the labor leaders showed a desire to meet the employers half way. At the call of duty a thousand young men threw up their lucrative work for the trenches, and a great proportion of the pupils who work in the factory in the summer and follow the university classes in the winter, displayed a similar desire until Messrs. Vickers began to fear for their production. Appeal was made to Lord Kitchener who promised not to take any more indispensable men. But there were gaps in Vickers' army which had to be filled as well as possible. Old pensioners of the firm were re-engaged and girl artisans taught the duties of the lighter processes.

It speaks volumes for the spirit of the veterans that they tried to fill their old posts, but often unsuccessfully. They were obliged to admit that the old nerve as well as the touch and sight, had gone. And so they were given less exacting work in the quieter corners of the factory, where the clanging and the banging of the overhead machinery was less insistent.

The girls have been a great success. Dressed in overalls they look trim and practical figures as their deft fingers follow the movements of the machine. Some enthusiastic employers declared that they were better than the men, but a cautious overlooker was less emphatic. Yes, they were good generally, but there were good and bad. On the whole, however, he preferred the men. Nevertheless the girls have won golden opinions and the substantial acknowledgment of good wages. They are paid by the piece, on the same scale as the men, and their return varies with the degree of skill required in the work.

Though machinery does so much now-a-days, and one has constant evidence of it in watching the fascinating processes that turn the steel ingot into the living, shining gun, yet there is still need of the youthful, vigorous arm; there must still be coal heaving, furnace feeding and rollers—work requiring the strongest physique. Physical resistance, too, is necessary in withstanding the long hours worked. The weekly average is fifty-three hours but a large proportion work continuously week days and Sundays, and reach a total of eighty-three hours. Wages are commensurately high.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Melles of Quebec, are in the city.

Mr. Milton Storms of the Union Bank at Englehart, has been the guest of Miss Bessie Runnett for the past week.

Miss Bein McKim, 769 Water street, is spending a week's vacation with Miss Maude Lindsay, at "Rock Haven," Stoney Lake.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Crowe of 70 Robinson street, will sympathize with them in the loss of their infant daughter, who died on June 30th, 1916.

The friends of Mr. H. Abramson will be sorry to hear he has been again stricken by appendicitis. He was removed to Nicholls Hospital this morning in Bellegheem's ambulance.

Prisoners Escape Argentine Jails

Buenos Ayres, July 4.—The recent elections, resulting in the placing of the radical party in power for the first time in the history of the republic, have had a somewhat disquieting effect upon the country. During the campaign there were so many rumours of revolution in certain provinces that as a matter of precaution, all the rifles and munitions served out to the various federal ranges were withdrawn and although the campaign is now a matter of history, the situation is still such that the rifle ranges remain closed, without any indication as to when they will be reopened.

The most serious trouble at present is with the prisoners in various federal and provincial institutions among whom there had circulated a rumor that if the radicals won the elections great numbers of the prisoners would be realsed. Since the election, however, it has been seen that no such wholesale amnesty is to be expected, and there are now several uprisings with which the authorities have to deal. In the national territory of Neuquen two hundred prisoners recently rose in a body, overpowered the warders, seised the rifles and ammunition and made good their escape. Some of the more resolute prisoners formed under the leadership of a Boer settler, a veteran of the South African campaign, and made for the hilly frontier between the Argentine and Chile. Well armed with Mauser rifles, this band has been intimidating and robbing persons along its route.

In Cordoba province the prisoners also rushed their guards, seised the available rifles and ammunition and set up a sort of commune within the prison walls. The prison was surrounded by a detachment of federal infantry and the state of siege is still maintained. Similar, though less serious trouble has occurred at the prisons in Santa Fe province

Dr. de la Plaza, the venerable retiring president of the republic, whose term of office expires in October when the radical, Dr. Irigoyen, assumes the presidency, delivered his valedictory to congress on May 20. He is credited with having had a safe—if not brilliant—administration.

RAISIN PUFFS.

One tablespoonful sugar, one cupful flour, one fourth cupful butter, one-half cupful of milk, one egg, one-half cupful raisins, one teaspoonful baking powder. Steam one-half hour in buttered cups. Serve with a sauce made of two eggs, one pint milk, one-half cup sugar and one teaspoonful of vanilla. Boil until it thickens. Remove from the fire, add a pinch of salt and a teaspoonful of vanilla. Serve hot.

BIRDS TRAVEL BY NIGHT.

It is difficult to believe that at times during the season of migration the sky at night is filled with birds from dusk until dawn, writes Frank M. Chapman in the St. Nicholas. Onward they hurry through the darkness. If they see the earth below it must be too dim to guide them on their journey. Still they find their way just as surely as do those birds which travel by day. The day fliers are hardy rovers which are used to the open and do not hesitate to venture far from cover. But the night fliers are the shy, retiring birds of thickets and undergrowth which rarely go far from their own doorstep. Or if they live in trees, their flight is usually only from tree to tree. The thrushes, warblers, vireos and small flycatchers are all night fliers.

For several reasons we know more about the travels of the night fliers than we do about those of the day fliers. First, because many more birds travel by night than by day. Second, because practically all birds that fly by night are real migrants. Third, because the night fliers seem unable to avoid the lighthouses in their way, and the number killed by striking these beacons erected for man's safety has given us a vast amount of information concerning the birds that travel after dark.

By night as well as by day our ears can tell us much about the number of birds that are passing overhead. Indeed during many nights when many birds are flying we can from favorable places, such as the hill-tops or cities in the birds' highways, hear their call-notes almost constantly. The hill brings us nearer the birds, and the city's lights brings the birds nearer to us. Light seems to attract them as it does moths.

An ornithologist at Madison, Wis., states that on the night of Sept. 14th, 1906, no less than 3,800 bird calls were heard from one place. The average was 12 calls for each minute, but at times so many calls were heard that it was evident the air above was thronged with birds.

OBITUARY

MRS. JOSIAH PERRIN, SR.

On June 27, 1916, at the age of seventy-nine, death removed an old and highly-respected resident of Cameron, in the person of Martha Black, beloved wife of the late Josiah Perrin, who predeceased her some thirteen years. Although in poor health for some time death came as a shock to her many friends. She leaves to mourn her loss a family of five sons and five daughters: John James, Joseph and Jessie of Lindsay, George, of Peterborough, and Isaac of Cameron; Mrs. Thomas Glassford, Valentia; Mrs. Harry Rich, Oakwood; Mrs. D. Lee, Saskatoon; Mrs. Jas. Cook and Mrs. Byron Maunder, Cameron.

The funeral service was held in St. George's Anglican church, Cameron, conducted by the Rev. Canon Marsh, and Rev. Maconachie of Lindsay. From thence the remains were taken to Eden cemetery for interment, followed by a large concourse of relatives and friends.

EXPLODING AUTO TIRE KILLS GIRL, INJURES A MAN

Fordham Hospital Interne and Chauffeur Hurt When Ambulance Collides with Machine.

NEW YORK, July 6.—An exploding automobile tire yesterday thrown from a wheel of the machine of Edward Anderson, of No. 166 East One Hundred and Fifteenth street, fatally injured a little girl and drove a man through a plate glass window, in Riverdale avenue, Yonkers, yesterday.

As the tire ran from the rim of the wheel, it dashed over Annie Valeska, ten, of No. 131 Riverdale avenue, crushing her. She dies in St. Joseph's Hospital. It then shot across the sidewalk and pushed Joseph Keehan through the display window of a jewellery shop.

Big Shark Kills Philadelphian At Jersey Beach

BEACH HAVEN, N.J., July 5.—Nothing ever more deeply shocked this section of the coast than the tragic death in the surf late Saturday of Charles Epting Vansant of Philadelphia, who was attacked by a nine-foot shark as he was about to end a swim in the surf.

The man eater had been seen moving swiftly after the swimmer, and warning cries went up from those on the beach, but they came too late. Mr. Vansant was less than fifty yards from the beach and evidently failed to understand the meaning of the warnings, for he kept on swimming leasurely. The shark made a dash, turned over, with jaws open, and then closed them upon Vasant.

Help Was Too Late.

The sea became crimson as the unfortunate man struggled to free himself. Alexander Ott, an expert swimmer, made his way swiftly to the spot, but was too late. The shark darted away and disappeared, leaving the mangled body floating.

He was brought to the beach and hurried to the Hotel Engleside, where he died within a few minutes.

Large sharks have been seen recently several miles out, but this is the first instance in which one has come near the bathing beach.

Mr. Vansant was 24 years old, the son of Dr. and Mrs. Eugene L. Vansant, of No. 4008 Spruce street, Philadelphia. He graduated from the Episcopal Academy in 1910 and from the Department of Arts and Sciences of the University of Pennsylvania in 1914. Since then he had been with the house of Nathan Folwell & Co. of Philadelphia.

Italians Have Captured Two Important Positions

New Successes Have Been Won by the Italians in the Trentino---Fierce German Attacks on the Western Front---Enemy Losses of the Past Month Total Half a Million.

LATE WAR DESPATCHES

ROME, July 6.—New successes have been won by the Italians in the offensive in the Trentino, the War Office announced. They have occupied the summit of Monte Corno, northeast of the Pasubio and captured the Crest of Monte Sellugio.

The official statement follows:

"Between the Adige and the Brenta the enemy is making every effort to contest our advance and has attempted to counter-attack at various points.

"In the Adige valley, during the night of July 3, we repulsed an attack on the Monte Zugna trenches.

Tuesday, after several attempts, our Alpine troops reached the summit of Monte Corno, northwest of the Pasubio.

"In the upper Astico basin, in spite of difficulties and the enemy's resistance, we captured the crest of Monte Sellugio and advanced towards Rio Fereddo and the Astico.

"On the Sette Communi plateau nothing of importance occurred.

"In the Campbell valley near Maso Beranta, after intense artillery preparation, the enemy attacked our positions on Prima Lunet, but was driven off with heavy loss, leaving some prisoners and three machine guns in our hands.

FIERCE GERMAN ATTACKS.

LONDON, July 6.—Latest western front despatches report fierce German attacks, but all were easily repulsed.

AN AUSTRIAN CLAIM.

VIENNA, July 6.—Austrians claim the capture of 158 Russian officers and 23,025 men south of Pripet since June 1st.

SEVERE ENEMY LOSSES.

PARIS, July 6.—German and Austro-Hungarian losses of the past month total half a million including over two hundred thousand prisoners taken by the Russians.

QUIET ON CANADIAN FRONT.

LONDON, July 6.—Canadian front reported quiet though booming of the big guns can be heard. Two Hun balloons brought down by Canadian airmen using incendiary bombs.

LINDSAY MAN FOUND IN RIVER HAD BEEN MISSING SINCE SATURDAY

LINDSAY, July 6.—The mystery in connection with the disappearance on Saturday evening of Mr. Richard Dovey, Bond street, was cleared up by the finding of his body in the Scugog river near Horn Bros.' mill Tuesday evening shortly after six o'clock. The discovery was made by Mr. Norman Henderson, who was paddling up the river, and who was startled on seeing the body floating near him, the head being slightly above water. He at once notified Chief Short, who in turn notified Dr. Blanchard, coroner. The Chief took the body from the river and laid it on some planks until it was removed to the morgue. It was in a badly decomposed and swollen condition, and it is believed, had been floating several days. In fact some hold to the theory that the body never really sank. The remains were soon identified as those of Richard Dovey. The exact manner in which he went to his death will never be explained. The deceased had visited his mother, Mrs. Donald Dovey, Colborne street, East Ward, Saturday evening, and after he left for home had been seen, it is said, by several citizens on the street on his way from the East Ward. There is on one, however, who is able to throw additional light on his movements.

The late Mr. Dovey was about forty-eight years of age, and was a son of the late Donald Dovey. He is survived by his wife and mother and three sisters. The deceased was a well known resident of the town, and had a host of friends, who were shocked when they heard of the tragic termination of his career.

His remains were interred in Riverside cemetery yesterday morning, funeral services being conducted by Rev. Mr. McMullen, of Queen Street Church.

HOME TOWN UPHOLDS CAPTAIN WHO DID DUTY

DAVENPORT, Iowa, July 5.—Captain J. C. McGregor, of the Iowa National Guard, who encouraged members of his command to take the Federal oath after they had first refused, will be welcomed back to West Branch, Iowa, his home, "with open arms," a statement issued by the West Branch Commercial Club said recently.

A recent message warning Captain McGregor not to return, as "he was taking our boys off to war," was sent to him by an unpatriotic individual, the statement said.

Alkali in Shampoos Bad For Washing Hair

Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali, for this is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

Body and Brain Thrive on Grape-Nuts Food

A Volume of Truth

—in fact, many volumes would be required to tell of the purity, deliciousness and satisfaction that goes with every ration of the famous whole wheat and barley food, Grape-Nuts.

Whole wheat is sweet but when malted barley is added then comes a nut-like flavor more tasty and satisfying than is possible in any food made of wheat alone. But the barley does more than heighten the flavor—it gives this food its great digestive qualities.

It is a fact that Grape-Nuts supplies, as does no other food in such splendid proportion, all the nutriment of the grains, including the vital mineral elements often lacking in the daily diet, but which are imperative for mental or physical vigor.

Grape-Nuts is specially processed for easy digestion and yields a wonderful return of sturdy brain, nerve and muscle energy.

Grape-Nuts is always ready to eat—just tilt the packet and add cream or good milk—a delicious dish, richly nourishing and highly satisfying.

HOW do your shirts treat you when they come back from the wash? Do the neckbands pinch, or do they remain as comfortable as before? This is a test that few neckbands meet.

W. G. & R. "Red Label" shirts can, because the neckband materials are thoroughly shrunk before the bands are cut.

Look for the "Red Label."

TO SET UP PILLORY FOR KANSAS WIFE-BEATERS

Kansas City, Mo., July 4.—The pillory, slightly changed, but the same in effect, is to be resurrected from the old Puritan days and set up again in Kansas City, Kan. Wife-beaters will find themselves its victims.

Police Judge J. H. Brady, of that city, has procured permission to erect a post on a corner of the main business district, to which men convicted of beating their wives could be obained for any number of days the Court fixed.

"The shame of being seen labelled as a wife-beater will prevent such crimes, I believe," the Judge explained.

DRINK HOT WATER BEFORE BREAKFAST

Says you really feel clean, sweet and fresh inside, and are seldom ill.

If you are accustomed to wake up with a coated tongue, foul breath or a dull, dizzy headache; or, if your meals sour and turn into gas and acids, you have a real surprise awaiting you.

To-morrow morning, immediately upon arising, drink a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This is intended to first neutralize and then wash out of your stomach, liver, kidneys and thirty feet of intestines all the indigestible waste, poisons, sour bile and toxins, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal.

Those subject to sick headaches, backache, bilious attacks, constipation or any form of stomach trouble, are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store and begin enjoying this morning inside-bath. It is said that men and women who try this become enthusiastic and keep it up daily. It is a splendid health measure for it is more important to keep clean and pure on the inside than on the outside, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing disease, while the bowel-pores do.

The principle of bathing inside is not new, as millions of people practice it. Just as hot water and soap cleanse, purify and freshen the skin, so hot water and a teaspoonful of Limestone phosphate act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. Limestone phosphate is an inexpensive white powder and almost tasteless.

176 PESTS ON APPLE TREES

It is almost a miracle that we have any apples at all for there are 176 different varieties of insects which attack apple trees and are capable of making them fruitless. To fight this horde of pests the apple producing states spend as much as $4,000,000 a year for spraying the trees.

Scientists now say, however, that it would be much better if fruit growers spent less money in covering their trees with poison and did more to encourage the birds to make their homes in the orchards. Birds devour almost every kind of insect which threatens fruit and enough birds will accomplish wonders in freeing orchards from this danger.

Farmers often object to the birds because they eat so much fruit. There are however numerous ways in which the amount of fruit birds destroy can be made trivial compared with the number of insects that they eat.

Robins, for instance are extremely fond of cherries. But they will leave the cherry trees quite neglected if one or two trees of Russian mulberries, which ripen at the same time as the cherries, are placed within reach.

Other things which will retain the robin's useful services as a forager, without any serious loss of valuable fruit, are choke cherry, holy elder, sour gum, shadeberries, wild cherries, wild grapes, green brier and smilax.

THREE TYPES OF BIG BRITISH GUNS THAT ARE BLASTING THE GERMAN LINE—Eye witnesses declare that the British advance is being won with comparatively slight casualties, this being due to the profusion of artillery avilable. The bombardment was the greatest in history. The achievement is all the more remarkable in that when war broke out the British had few, if a single one, of the big land guns.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Only Fool

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

Sarah Martin married Jim Hewson because she was a hired girl and working for $2 a week; because, again, she was tired of work and wanted a home.

Jim Hewson married Sarah Martin because he also wanted a home and because he knew that she earned $8 a month. That would pay the rent on a cottage in a village in those far back days.

Jim was lazy. He was born that way and couldn't help it. He hadn't energy enough to sweat a shirt collar, and therefore when he worked he got paid according to his energy, which pay seldom exceeded 15 cents a day.

The bridal tour of the newly weds consisted of walking a mile arm in arm, each with a basket on the free arm, to a huckleberry swamp a mile away. There they picked twelve quarts of berries—that is, Sarah picked ten quarts and Jim two. Then they walked back to town and sold the berries to a grocer for 60 cents in cash.

"You see," said Jim as he jingled the money in his hand, "we can get along as easy as grease. This money would buy us provisions for a week."

The bride half laughed at the remark, but soon felt serious and hadn't much more to say. Two weeks later, however, she had. Jim had gone to see her in the kitchen in which she worked and was feeling glad that he was a married man when she said:

"Jim, I have been thinking things over."

"Well?" was the query.

"I have come to the conclusion that I was either a lunatic or an idiot to have married you. You are all wrong. You are lazy and shiftless. You haven't got the energy of a gents hog. You think me to work and support you instead of it being the other way. If you were the best husband in the state I wouldn't do it."

"Well, what are we going to do?" asked the husband after a lapse of a minute.

"I can't get a divorce from you, Jim, for I haven't got the money to put one through. If we agreed on a separation it would do me no good, for I'd still be bound to you. If I was free otherwise, I might stand a chance of getting a husband who would provide a home and comforts for me."

"You mean if I should die you'd have your chance?"

The wife didn't reply. She only looked at him.

Jim rose up and left the house without a good night and went to his bed of hay in the stable and for an hour he did more thinking than he had done in a year before.

In about a week he tried suicide. He went out on the railroad track in Middleboro, and when the 8 o'clock express came along he was standing between the rails and facing it. The whistle screamed and toofed, but Jim stood there as if spiked to a tie. The engineer tried to stop the train, but the pace was thirty miles an hour when the suicide did his work. Five minutes later a man who had witnessed the accident from forty rods away came running up just as the victim was climbing the fence of a cornfield into which he had been buried. He had a slight limp in the left leg, but that was nothing for Jim to kick about.

Sarah had heard of this attempt and started out to look for Jim, but she didn't have the luck to find him. He was missing from his usual haunts for three or four days, and then he turned up on a bluff overlooking the mill pond half a mile from the bridge. He was going to try the water cure this time. The bluffs were thirty feet above the water, and Jim couldn't swim a stroke. Instead of striking the water, however, he struck a spot of mud.

"You blamed idiot! What did you jump for? I saw you when you made the leap!" said a passerby.

"I wanted to die," replied Jim.

Sarah got every loose boy in town to hunt for Jim, but they hunted in vain. He had one more attempt coming to him, and if found at all he wanted to be found dead. He went two miles away from town and hired to a farmer to sprinkle paris green over the potato vines of his patch. The farmer left him alone for an hour, and Jim mixed a big dose of the powder and drank it down. It was an overdose, however, and it was thrown off, and his life was saved again.

It was when poor Jim was tottering down the road toward the village that a man in an auto overtook him and hailed to say:

"If you aren't drunk, then you are sick. Get in here. Now, what's the matter?"

Jim told him all, and, curiously enough, the autoist proved to be an uncle of his whom he had not heard of since his boyhood days. When the uncle had heard the story to its end he said:

"Jim, you had a fool for a father. You have got three fool brothers and fool sisters and about five or six fool uncles and aunts and the Lord only knows how many fool cousins, but you are the first fool in all the family that ever owned up to being a fool. You shall be rewarded in consequence. I will buy you a house and lot in the village, give you $5,000 to set you and Sarah on your feet and bet that you'll come out very near the top. A man who is a fool and knows it is a better man than one who thinks he is wise and doesn't know it."

And Jim and Sarah made up and have lived happily ever since.

SKIN SOFT AS A CHILD'S.

"I was a great sufferer from eczema and salt rheum for years," writes Mr. John W. Kent, Lansdowne, N. S. "Five years ago three bottles of Dr. Chase's Ointment cured me and the old trouble never returned. My skin is as soft as a child's now, and I shall always say a good word for this Ointment."

PRISONER PRAISES FRENCH HOSPITALITY

A civil prisoner in France since the beginning of the war in Europe, Vincent Macek, an Austrian, arrived in New York last week, and spoke in the highest terms of the treatment accorded enemies of the allies by the French. He said that the reports in German newspapers that the civil prisoners in France were not treated well are without the slightest foundation.

"I was one of more than 15,000 Germans and Austrians in France at the outbreak of the war," he told a reporter, "and everywhere that I went I found hospitality. We were moved about from one camp to another, clothed and fed by the people of France. The women and children suffered little discomfort. We were distributed to towns and villages when places filled to overflowing with natives of Germany and Austria. Roomy theatres were thrown open to us to sleep in at night, and after a while we had beds. At first only straw could be obtained, but no one complained.

"Clothing was given to us and warm blankets for our beds. Food was good and there was plenty of it. Every morning a doctor visited our quarters to look after our health. We never were subjected to insult. In fact we felt at home all the time.

"The French are a wonderful people. I cannot speak too highly of them. I was working in a restaurant in Paris when hostilities began. Of course I became a civil prisoner at once and was assigned to a camp, as we call the places to which the citizens of Germany and Austria were sent.

"For weeks at a time I remained at Coudray au Perche, La Bastide, St. Pierre, La Rochelle, Rochefort and Bordeaux. When those in charge of us feared the German and the Austrian armies were getting too close to us we were moved to another place. There never was any danger to us. When I read reports in the newspapers that Germans were accusing France of subjecting civil prisoners to neglectful treatment I was annoyed at the untruth. My sympathies are with my own country but it is only fair to France to praise her people for their hospitality to those who were within her boundaries when the war broke out.

Mr. Macek, who resides at N. 3156 Broadway, and is employed in a restaurant, says that it is his intention to become a citizen of the United States as speedily as the law permits. He was born in Sternia, in Southern Austria.

"Mr. Smith, fowler, begs to announce to the ladies that he will make capes, jackets, etc., out of their own skins," is the startling advertisement issued by a trader.

HAD PROFOUND FAITH IN HIS FATHER.

Bobby's father is not a brilliant sort of man; it has been said, in fact, that he errs decidedly in the other direction. He took Bobby the other day on a short visit to some friends, and, thinking to make a good impression, he started a conversation. "I had quite an adventure the other evening," he said. "At the corner of a dark street a man suddenly sprang out on me and said that if I didn't give him my watch he'd knock my brains out. Fortunately, a policeman came along, and the man took to his heels!" "And weren't you afraid?" asked his hostess. "Afraid!" echoed Bobby's papa, modestly. "Well, I hope not." "But," went on the lady, "if he had carried out his threat." "Well," answered the visitor, "if he had —" And then the loyal little Bobby struck in. "I'll bet there's nobody who could knock shy brains out of father!" he said, proudly.

BRAVE RUSSIAN [illegible] CAPTURED GERMANS

(London Tit-Bits)

"I have disarmed and tied up twenty German soldiers and one officer. Harken and take them prisoners."

Such were the startling and excited words which a Russian sergeant-major-year-old girl addressed to an officer of a company of Siberian Rifles who held a point in Courland, one of the Baltic provinces invaded by the Germans. At first the officer could scarcely credit the girl's statement but she persuaded them to follow her, and when they reached the farm which was the girl's home they found twenty Germans and an officer in a drunken sleep, securely tied with ropes.

The manner in which the girl brought about their capture was as ingenious as it was daring. The Germans formed a small detachment which marched into the farm. Sentries were left outside to keep watch on a hill quite close, while the rest entered the house and prepared to have a good time. The young German lieutenant turned to the girl, with the order to get wine at any cost, as their supply had run short. She was told that unless she fulfilled the order the house would be set on fire and she herself subjected to violence.

PUT THEM TO SLEEP.

"There were two barrels of heavy old liquor made of spirits and berries, in the cellar, and a bright idea struck the girl. Before giving them the cordial she dropped into it some powder, made of bluebells, which brings on heavy drowsiness. The first barrel was soon emptied, and the demand came no more. The second barrel contained a double portion of the powder and the Germans soon began to roll on to the floor, one after another.

"Seeing her enemies helpless round the barrel, says the Daily Telegraph, she filled a bowl with the liquor, took it out to the sentries, who stood freezing in the cold, and gave it to them to drink, incidentally mentioning that she was fulfilling the officer's orders. The bowl was soon emptied. She then returned to the house and carefully disarmed the soldiers, who, sunk in heavy slumber, lay about in different attitudes, and hid their weapons deep in the cellar. Meantime her father was fastening with ropes the limbs of the insensible Germans.

"Having accomplished her task with the prisoners the girl proceeded to find her way to the Russian positions." Following forest paths and making her way through swamps, she finally reached the Siberian officer, to whom as already related, she told her startling story.

The brave girl was afterwards brought into the presence of the commanding officer, who shook her hands with her, thanked her for her heroic deed, and caused her to be rewarded with the St. George's Cross, the much-coveted decoration which signifies valour in the Russian army.

POPOVERS.

Take two cups of flour, a teaspoonful of salt, a half teaspoon of soda, a teaspoonful of cream of tartar sifted together. Beat separately the whites and yolks of two eggs. To two cupfuls of sweet milk add the yolks, then slowly sift in the flour so as to make a smooth batter. Just before putting into the muffin pans fold in lightly the beaten whites. Bake in a hot oven 30 minutes. Serve immediately.

Constipation

Helps the System to Cure Itself.

You cannot cure constipation by violent methods. Violence is never effective against nature. That is why the use of purgative salts and purgative pills so easily become a habit. These things do not cure the trouble; they only force matters, and in so doing weaken the bowels till natural action becomes impossible, and you have to go on taking your pills or salts indefinitely. Compare Dr. Cassell's Instant Relief. This great tonic laxative helps nature by strengthening the bowels, natural action is restored, and a cure effected which is real and lasting.

Dr. [illegible] F. Pleasance, D.Sc., F.R.S.E., a well-known British scientist, writes:—"I never take Salines or Purgatives for Constipation,—to have Bowel action is to aggravate the trouble and create the constipation habit. I recommend as a regular and convenient treatment Dr. Cassell's Instant Relief."

Take Dr. Cassell's Instant Relief for constipation, biliousness, torpid liver, sick headache, dizziness, specks before the eyes, flatulence and acidity, eczema, itching, heartburn, impure blood, cold sores, foul, heavy feelings which is a sure indication of inner disorder.

Price 50 Cents from all Druggists and Storekeepers.

Heart Fluttering Easily Corrected

GOOD ADVICE TO FOLKS BOTHERED WITH PALPITATION, WEAKNESS, ETC.

If your heart flutters, be careful. An attack is liable to come on at any time. Excitement, over-exertion or emotion may cause it.

If blood rushes to the head, if palpitation and short breath are noticeable, there's cause for alarm.

If you want a good honest remedy try Ferrozone. We recommend Ferrozone because we know it's just right for heart trouble. It cured A. F. Beattie, who lives at Allen Hotel, Bay City, Mich. See if your symptoms resemble these:

Some Symptoms of Weak Heart.
Nervousness, Palpitation,
Trembling, Dizziness,
Sinking Feeling, Heart Pain,
Short Breath, Weakness.

Mr. Beattie says:

"I was weak and miserable.

"I was subject to heart palpitation and dizziness.

"As I grew worse I began to have trembling and sinking sensations.

"Ferrozone strengthened my heart, gave vigor to my nerves, soon made me well. It's a great rebuilder."

By strengthening the muscles of the heart, giving proper circulation and causing a general rebuilding of the whole system, Ferrozone is bound to do grand work in heart trouble; try it. 50c. per box, or six for $2.50, at all dealers, or direct by mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

UNPAID DRUMMER ROMANCE.

It is a romantic story of how the missionary blazes the trail for the merchant.

"I go back to Africa to try to make an open path for commerce and Christianity," said Livingston. And along the Christian path which he opened now run automobiles and motor trucks and railway trains bearing the fabulous wealth of some of the richest commerce in the world.

The first missionaries in Nyasaland bought a basketful of grain. The natives looked at the pretty beads that had been paid them for the grain, went out to their fields and started to plant and cultivate as if their lives depended upon it. Now a score of steamers is needed to carry the thousands of tons of grain to the coast, where it is reshipped to the far parts of the world.

A missionary obtained a solitary coffee plant from the Edinburgh Botanical Gardens and placed it in the soil of Central Africa. From this single plant great plantations have sprung until the export of this one product amounts to thousands of tons annually and "Scotch Coffee" has become a staple product.

In nine cases out of ten the first white men to blaze the trail in a strange country is a missionary. He goes on ahead, wins over the cannibals with rock candy and beads, and prepares the way for the trader. Missionaries did the pioneer work in Africa, the islands of the South Seas, the Pacific Islands and most of the Asiatic continent.

You can thank the missionaries for your arrowroot biscuits. Before the Christian pioneers arrived in the New Hebrides, the arrowroot plant grew wild and went to waste. Now the natives, taught by the missionaries, cultivate and sell the plant by the thousands of pounds and gratefully dedicate the proceeds to the supply of Christian work!

India rubber was discovered by a missionary. To-day the United States imports about $75,000,000 worth of India rubber.

The soil of India is in many regions upturned by mission plows introduced through industrial mission stations. "The machine that does the work of ten wives" is the name one native gave to the plow.—The "World Outlook."

THE PAST IS VERY NEAR.

It is not very far to the past; a very short chain of lives stretches over a thousand years. Someone has just been saying that he remembers an old lady who saw Charles II. walking down Oxford High street with his spaniels at his heels. A Methodist minister, speaking of this, said he used to preach to a congregation in which sat an old lady who had listened to John Wesley.

Another notable link with the past has come to light by the death of Miss Fanny Cresswell Paris, of the Isle of Wight, a friend of Lord Byron, who died in 1824. He died helping Greece to gain her independence; she lived to see Greece tear up a scrap of paper and refuse to help Serbia to save her independence.

Back Was Lame and Ached; Could Do Very Little Work

Suffered Much From Kidney Disease for Years, But Cure Came With the Use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

Doctors had tried to cure this man but failed to get at the cause of trouble probably because they relied on medicines which act on the kidneys only. The strong feature about Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills is their combined action on liver, kidneys and bowels. In many of these cases the disease is so complicated that ordinary kidney medicines fail to be of much benefit. Under such conditions Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills usually touch the spot and effect a cure.

Had they been only moderately successful Dr. Chase would never have selected them for world wide distribution; "As it was the demand for these pills rendered naturally from their superior merit and there was nothing else to do but supply them in large quantities.

Mr. Simeon Shiloff, Birchbrook Orchards, Birchbank, B.C., writes:

"For several years I suffered greatly from kidney disease. I was weak and could do very little work. My back was lame and ached and I suffer-ed much from headaches. Tried doctors and obtained no relief. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills were recommended by a friend and after taking four boxes I think that I can say that I cured for I feel as well as I ever did."

This statement is endorsed by Mr. Harry Anderson, J.P., who writes;

"This is to certify that I am personally acquainted with Mr. Simeon Shiloff and believe his statement in regard to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to be true and correct."

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S SHIRT WAIST.

By Anabel Worthington.

In keeping with the prevailing fancy, this waist with transparent fashionable becomes at an elementary. Making an appeal to ambitious novice especially, it is be-coming [illegible] yoke to which the sleeves are gathered, allowing the figure undistorted through the blouse. There is the usual [illegible], according to the model, a pointed effect being the rever facade in self material but a tie is to give a "fitting look" and even making us forget the fullness of the garment while enjoying its comfort. The sleeves are bell shaped with a ruffled cuff effect for a finish. The perforations thus waist will easily give a comparison.

This pattern may be had in sizes 34 to 42 inches bust measure. To make the 36 will require only 2½ yards of material 27 inches wide.

Send your order for the pattern by sending and 10 cents to the office of this publication.

Address: Pattern Service, The Examiner, Peterborough.

Please write plainly, and give number and address as well as the name and size wanted. Allow [illegible] days for delivery.

WHEN THE GRIM BATTLE-SCARRED GRAND FLEET CAME BACK TO PORT

The return of the battle-scarred Grand Fleet from the great Jutland battle is vividly described by a correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph, who was in the home port to which the victorious ships returned. He says:

It was a memorable scene when the long line of fighting ships, fresh from the greatest naval battle of modern times, swung into a wide estuary and sought the moorings which they had slipped so swiftly hours before. Far in the forefront came a mighty battleship, which represented the latest in naval power. The German naval authorities assert that she is on the sea floor at this moment, and the Kaiser, that Barnum amongst the rulers of the world, has endorsed the assertion without reserve. True, I could see a line of hills famous in literature through the gaps in her funnels as the mighty ship came slowly to the harbour, but she came in under her own steam. Naval men will know what that means in a ship of her type. She did the better part of 460 miles under her own steam to harbor after she ought to have been on the bottom. There is some ground for the German feeling that if that ship is not destroyed she ought to have been. She was the ship which, in the midst of a terrible action, stood up to the fire of the most powerful of the Kaiser's ships in numbers, which should have been overwhelming, and after sending to the bottom two great adversaries, was ordered out, and turned and came home.

The wonderful procession of the returning brave which followed her into harbor was a heartening sight to a people who at that time had been told of nothing but that which foreboded disaster. The line of battle cruisers, preceded by the light cruisers, bore another and a new tale. In seeming silence they swept to their moorings, and their decks were crowded with the gallant men who had fought great odds and won. In one ship it was obvious that there were guns out of action. In another a great dent on the port side amidships showed where an enemy projectile had almost reached the vitals of the ship, and around the point of impact a wide circle of yellow, deepening to brown, revealed the effects of the released explosive. The funnels of another were peppered by shrapnel or shell fragments. A famous battle-cruiser this — a ship which is the pride of a great colony, and one of the best known ships of the navy in the harbors of the world. There were gaps in the glorious line which had sped to the battle, but the ships which were returning were victorious ships. Of cheering there was none that could be heard ashore. The squadron was conscious of great loss, the measure of that loss being not the number of ships and men left behind to the scour of the tides as the price of victory, but the regard for each other which grows amongst gallant men who have endured and fought and striven together since the King sent his message to the fleet that war had come. Yet there were unmistakable signs of victory. As a well-known writer came abreast on the shore or a familiar jetty or a fluttering handkerchief the men on the [illegible] decks were seen to be waving caps and caps, and I knew that [illegible] was cheering though the roll of it was borne away on the east wind. The Invincible was not in the place she held when the ships put to sea, and the Indefatigable—the grand "Old Indefog"—was missing also.

SAILOR PSYCHOLOGY.

They had been part of the price of victory. Somewhere out in the North Sea the two ships were lying shattered, and two men who had been my friends would never return to port. It may appear strange but it is the fact—neither of those men expected to return. There is a phase of sailor psychology which has been impressed somewhat vaguely upon me in various areas of the seven seas but with impressive force since the war began. Students of psychological phenomena may deal more carefully with the matter. I am only concerned with the presentment of the facts. There was a man on the Pathfinder who to my pride regarded me as his friend. He spoke to me one day of sending off a parcel by post. It contained all his money and all his valuables, and the parcel was going to his wife. "There is something coming to me," he said quietly, in explanation. Within thirty hours his ship had been destroyed by torpedo and he had gone down with her. So with the man on the Indefatigable to whom I have referred. For a week before the call to action came over the wireless he had been in the depths of depression and had given expression to his belief that there was "something pretty bad on the way." And the Invincible case was similiar. The sailormen have been proved sadly accurate in their forebodings, but they saw stirring work before they "went out."

THE SPLENDID MEN.

Her presence in the proud line which came back proclaimed that the luck of the mystery ship had held true. She had been in the very thick of the battle, and had taken heavy punishment, but had given more than she took. With an hour or two to take in food, fuel, and ammunition, she was fit for the open sea and the fray again. There had been losses on board. Men had fallen, and men had been grievously wounded. They are proud of their ship and of their service, these hardy fellows, who had gone with the vessel over the whole world since the war began, looking for a foe that would stand up to action. When the action came the pride of them was paramount in the midst of the wild struggle. There were wounded men on the mystery ship who defied the doctors. In the frenzy of battle they were almost unconscious of their injuries. There was one man, with a grievous leg injury, who appealed to his attendants in the following words: "Tell me how the scrap is going. Quick men, for the love of heaven, prop me up and let me go up again."

Alas! that gallant fellow will never walk again. To the doctor another wounded man, whose arm was gone, made the most determined appeals for liberty to get back into action. "To — with my arm. I want to go up again and give the boys a hand."

The scene as the British destroyers dashed in a wild charge upon the whole German battle fleet drew rousing cheers from the mystery ship as from the whole of the British vessels. "To see that flotilla line up and head full speed for the German fleet in a do-or-die rush made one thank God that one was British and will make one thank God for being British every time the memory of it comes back. It was a great sacrifice. Every man of that splendid flotilla knew that it was death or glory. We hailed it with [illegible]. We cheered them, but that they could ever have hard through the inferno of noise, but because we had to cheer. The destroyers went at racing speed into a veritable hell. Aye, and they got in great work. We saw them pounded, and we saw them smashed, but they hurled home their attack, and the German Navy to-day knows how well they did in an attack which for its wild rush has never been excelled on the waters of the world."

WHEN JELLICOE CAME.

There were cheers again for the [illegible] when away in the distance the battle ships of the Grand Fleet came to the action which had been gloriously upheld by the battle-cruiser squadron. [illegible] to sight and gate [illegible] their guns

The men of the battle-cruiser squadron knew then that for the Germans the end had come. Three great lines of Jellicoe's ships were discerned bearing down on the scene and there was joy in the squadron and dismay in the German lines. The enemy did not stay long to consider the situation. The total period during which he could be said to have presented what seemed an undaunted front to the Grand Fleet did not exceed twenty-five minutes. Then he showed signs of distinct discomfort, and then came the break for home and shelter. The weather aided him in his flight, as is well known. On board the mystery ship the damage was not great, as I have indicated, and the luck of the great battle-cruiser holds. In token of that I may give a story which is going round the ships. At the close of the action a leading officer on the mystery ship was asked specially to inspect a certain section of her. To be exact the section included the pantry. That important quarter had been knocked "all ends upwards," to quote a sailorman, by a shell. As the officer looked at the damage his attention was directed to the extraordinary fact that despite the general upheaval the pantry mirror hung scathless and level, as though the ship had never left the graving-dock. The state of that mirror was matter of much satisfaction.

CATARRH OF THE BLADDER Relief in 24 Hours

TRAVELETTE

By Miksah

Cartagena is a picturesque old seaport on the northern coast of South America, interesting nowadays for what it used to be rather than what it is. Fronting on a perfect harbour with pleasant green hills sloping up behind its grey walls and red-roofed houses, it would be more popular with people of the North if it were somewhat healthier and a great cooler. The sun beats through a moist heat, and the unacclimatised are prone to sicken in Cartagena with great suddenness.

There is no town in either of the Americas that is a more perfect example of what Spain could build in the days of her greatest power. The mistress of the Indies made this port her greatest western stronghold. The massive walls still stand with their old towers well preserved; the ancient castles are no longer capable of menacing a hostile fleet; but they loom up with a bold and warlike front. ere you may see the grim old building that was for centuries the headquarters of the Inquisition in the New World.

The city is built after the Moorish style rather than the pure Spanish colonial that is more common in Mexico and South America. The streets are narrow and winding, paved with rough cobbles, though modern Cartagena has threaded them with trolley lines and lighted them with electric arcs. Barred windows jut out from square old mansions with an agreeable suggestion of mystery and romance; crowded gardens glowing green with the rich verdure of the tropics are ringed by high inhospitable walls; screened balconies overlook the narrow causeways. The scene is set for gallants with rapiers and guitars.

Cartagena still shows many scars of battle, for she had a hard life of it in the past. As she was the principal stronghold of Spain, all Spain's enemies attacked her first when they moved on the Americas. English buccaneers sacked her half a dozen times. The English Admiral Vernon besieged the city unsuccessfully for months, but in spite of his poor success, he inspired such admiration in a young colonial officer that the latter named an American country estate for the admiral. The officer was one Lawrence Washington, and he named the country place Mount Vernon.

NOT EVEN A POSTCARD.

The new postmaster was not having a very happy time, besieged as he was by a crowd of burly men, all demanding their letters at the same time.

At last one strode in and shouted with a voice of thunder: "Have you got any letters for Mike Howe?"

"For who?" snapped the postmaster.

"Mike Howe, I said! Don't you know your job or can't you talk English Have you any letters for Mike Howe?"

The postmaster took his glasses off. "No, I have not," he snorted; neither for your cow nor anybody else's cow!"—Exchange.

Three Thousand German Prisoners Taken---Several Austrian Positions Captured by the Russian Left Wing---French and British Both Make Progress in Their Offensive North and South of the Somme River.

KAISER IR REPORTED ON WEST FRONT

PETROGRAD, July 6.—Official confirmation was made this morning that the Russian troops have captured the village and railway station of Mikulicsyn, 36 miles south of Stanislau, thus cutting one of the main Austrian lines of communication to Lemberg, and the main railway over which General Bothmer's Austro-German army received supplies. Three thousand Germans were taken during the last 24 hours. The War Office announced that several other Austrian positions on the Russian left flank were captured, indicating that practically all of the southeastern corner of Galicia is now cleared of the Austrian troops.

PARIS (French Official), July 6. — A strong German counter-attack north of the Somme last night recaptured from the French two small woods on a front of two-thirds of a mile north of the village of Hem, it was officially announced to-day.

The French retaliated by carrying a wood northeast of the same village, added the official statement.

On the south side of the Somme, the night was relatively calm. A German attack on Belloy en Santerre was easily repulsed.

Seventy-six guns and several hundred mitrailleuses already have been counted among the booty taken by the French since the present movement began.

The lull in the fighting south of the Somme last night was probably due to the necessity for further artillery preparation before the French resume their advance on Peronne. Since the French advance south of the river began last Saturday morning General Foch's troops have taken the German second lines on a wide front, but now face new and strong defensive positions before Peronne.

The ruins of Verdun cathedral were heavily bombarded by the Germans last night with large shells. Though violent bombardments occurred on the Verdun front the Germans did not resume their infantry attacks.

Germans May Start Big Counter Attack

Examiner Special:

LONDON, July 6.—The Kaiser is reported to have arrived on the Somme front accompanied by members of his general staff, who will direct the defense of the German lines in the great Allied offensive.

An Amsterdam despatch to-day reported the Kaiser's arrival and said he had established headquarters near the front and not far from Cambrai and opposite the British front. Great bodies of German troops are being massed between the Ancre and the Somme to stem the British advance. Allied flyers report the constant arrival of troop trains, and Holland despatches to-day confirmed the reports of heavy concentration behind the lines from Ypres to the Somme. There is every indication that the Germans will launch a very heavy counter-attack against the British lines within seventy-two hours.

All despatches from Berlin to-day emphasized the Kaiser's determination to halt the British early in the attack at all costs. The German newspapers, paying scant attention to the French successes south of the Somme express elation over the fact that the momentum of the British advance has been checked. The more sober-minded German critics, however, give warning that the battle is only beginning, and that regardless of any checks administered to the Allies, the attack will continue.

Half a Million Austrians Put Out Of Commission

Special to The Examiner:

PETROGRAD, July 6.—At least half a million Austrian troops have been captured or otherwise put out of action since General Brusiloff began his sweep through Volhynit, Galicia and Bukowina. That number will now be unavailable for the summer and fall campaigns of the Central Powers. General Letchitsky's advance in Southeastern Galicia after the capture of Kolomea has been so rapid that his army not only menaces the important City of Stanislau, but Lemberg and the whole of Eastern Galicia. The Austrians are staggering back along the muddy valleys of the Pruth and Dneister, abandoning great quantities of materials. The roads in this region have been converted into bogs by heavy rains. Pressing the disheartened Austrians are Russian soldiers in high spirits over their continued successes and the Allied victories in France.

Congratulations From The Lords of The Admiralty

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Eng., July 6.—After perusing Admiral Jellicoe's report and the reports of others engaged in the battle of Jutland, the Lords of the Admiralty have congratulated the officers and men of the British navy on their conduct in that engagement, and have given their full approval to Admiral Jellicoe for his proceedings on this occasion. They said that the high expectations of the country in the navy had been fulfilled and as a result of this greatest action since the outbreak of the war the enemy had been severely punished, and had withdrawn to his own ports.

Berlin Admits Gains by French and British

Special to The Examiner:

BERLIN, July 6.—The German War Office this afternoon officially admitted that the French have captured Belloy-En-Santerre, south of the River Somme and that the Germans have also evacuated the village of Hem on the north bank. The War Office also admitted the British made minor progress obtaining a firm foothold in the salient south of Thiepval. Between the Ancre and the Somme along the British front the artillery bombardment is very heavy. On the Verdun front enemy advances southwest of Fort Vaux have been repulsed, says the report.

PRESENTATION TO LIEUT. MOLONEY OF ENNISMORE

Purse Containing a Substantial Sum of Money Together With an Address Was Presented to Ennismore Soldier---An Expression of Appreciation.

THE ADDRESS

On Monday evening last at his home in Ennismore, Lieut. P. J. Moloney, son of Mr. Eugene Moloney, was presented by the people of that parish with a purse containing a substantial sum of money and the following address: —

"It is with the greatest feelings of joy mingled with deepest regret that we assemble here this evening; proud because one of our youthful and loyal sons has made it his duty to defend and if the necessity arises, lay down his life for the Empire of which we are proud to be called citizens.

Our regret is that one so young and full of promise should risk his life in defence of those principles for which a countless number of brave and liberty loving patriotic Canadians have already laid down their lives.

"Not once or twice in our fair Island story".

The path of duty was the way to glory".

In bidding you a fond farewell our only hope is that the cause you are about to defend shall triumph over German militarism and obstinancy and that when this glorious cause has flourished that you shall come back once more and spend many happy days with your numberless friends and associates so that you may enjoy that liberty which you are preparing to defend so loyally.

In conclusion we ask you to accept this purse as a slight token of our esteem and appreciation. Signed William Hickson, Daniel Holland and William Cavanagh.

THE REPLY.

In reply Lieut. Moloney expressed his sincere gratitude to his many friends for their generous gift and many expressions of goodwill. Lieut. Moloney's father followed with a brief but appropriate address in which he stated that he was proud to have a son as Lieut. in the Canadian army and a brother as a Major. He would like to be there himself.

The entertainment closed with cheers for the King and also for the Allies. A very pleasant evening was brought to a close with the singing of the National Anthem.

Lieut. Moloney leaves for Montreal where he will join his unit which is preparing to leave Canada for overseas.

PETERBORO SOLDIERS HOME ON LEAVE FROM FAR-OFF ST. ANDREW'S

Squad From The Pioneer Battalion Travel All The Way From Atlantic Coast to Spend Final Leave at Home---Member of 93rd Battalion Sentenced to Year's Imprisonment For Disertion---Orders and General Military News.

A squad of former members of the 93rd Battalion who were transferred from the Peterborough unit to the 4th Canadian Pioneer Battalion some time ago are home on leave from St. Andrew's, New Brunswick, where the pioneers are in training. The party which left the Atlantic coast on Monday and arrived here this morning, consisted of Lance-Corporal R. Emery, Signallers Jack Geary, Percy Brew and Vernon Ellis, Pioneers Harry Stocker, Geo. Penrose, Harold Coones, Hilliard, Stanley Hartley, Charlie Latchford, Melville Parsons, Robert Allen and Garrey McMurray. The boys are apparently delighted with their work in the Pioneer Battalion and say that they are well fed and looked after. The only drawback is that the camp on the Atlantic is so far away from Peterborough that it is a costly and difficult matter to get home. This is the last leave for the Peterborough boys before they go overseas.

Mr. H. G. Rew, 406 Crescent street, received a letter yesterday from his son, Pte. W. H. Rew, of the 8th C.M.R., who is in the Howard de Waldon F.A.D. Hospital, Maidstone, Kent, England, stating he has undergone another operation. They have succeeded in removing the piece of shrapnel that they could not get at in the first operation, owing to it being too near an artery. Pte. Rew says he is having the very best of treatment and speaks very highly of the doctor and nurses. He also states that his chums of the 8th C.M.R. and the boys of the Y.M.C.A. are all safe and well.

Mr. Rew has also received two letters from the Canadian Red Cross, London, Eng., saying their visitor had seen his son ,and reports that his wound is a deep one, but is doing well and they are kindly sending him anything he requires.

Capt. Marling and Capt. Eastwood, of the 93rd Battalion, are home on leave from Barriefield camp to-day.

Hospital Sergt. Hugh Maguire, of the 93rd Battalion, is home from Kingston to-day.

231,810 Dental Operations.

Ottawa, July 5.—Interesting figures showing the enormous work performed by the Canadian Army Dental Corps are found in the recently presented report from that corps to the period from July 15, 1915, to March 31, 1916. Altogether 231,810 dental operations were performed upon soldiers. Of this number 68,979 were extractions. The total number of fillings was 86,987, total treatments 15,304, toteal dentures 10,890, total prophylactic treatments, 30,779, and total devitalizations 11,732, making altogether the above-mentioned number of operations.

CAMP BORDEN, July 5.—Preliminary work in preparation for the construction of a monster stadium and athletic field for the troops here was begun to-day when fatigue parties totalling nearly a thousand men started in clearing up stumps and dead wood from an open space at the eastern end of the main street of the camp. Captain Tom Flanagan, director of military sports, with Lieut.-Col. Rider Greer, of the Quartermaster's Battalion, were both on hand superintending the work, and by the beginning of next week a start will be made on the stadium and race-track, the former, which is to be a simple arrangement of seats on the level with a raised stage or ring, being designed to seat from 15,000 to 20,000 men, while the race-track will have a circumference of a third of a mile. The entire field is to be enclosed by a nine-foot wall, and it is intended to have a small charge made for admission to go towards the funds of the Divisional Athletic Association. The athletic grounds are to be made use of every night for recreation purposes, out door movies to be shown, and various athletic exhibitions to be put on each night.

In addition to the large field, the battalions are to be allowed to make use of their training grounds for purposes of athletics after drill hours, so that 20 small fields will be provided during recreation hours for battalion sports and matches. There will be combined athletic field days held, as heretofore, every Saturday, and as an encouragement to the men to take part all who engage in sports will be dismissed from further drill at noon on Saturdays.

CAMP BORDEN, Ont., (Special)—Camp Borden already a city of soldiers with 13 battalions composed of 15,000 officers and men under canvas, turning the white sand plains of Angus into a hive of industry.

Gen. Logie states that eight battalions from London will come to Camp Borden beginning next Wednesday. They will arrive at the rate of two units a day. During the last two weeks in this month, camp Borden will grow to much bigger size numerically than ever was in Canada.

Major. Gen. Sir Sam Hughes will visit camp Borden next Tuesday 11th, when an inspection and review of the troops will be held.

KINGSTON, July 5.—The stiffest penalty ever imposed in this city for desertion was handed out this morning by Col. Hunter to Pte. Clarence R. Clarke of the 93rd Battalion who was sent to Central prison for one year, on the charge of deserting and having escaped from a detention camp.

The prisoner is but nineteen years of age and gave as an excuse for his crime that he had heard that the battalion was leaving for overseas and he wanted to see his mother.

On June 30th Clarke escaped from the detention camp at Barriefield, and was found hiding in a barn in Pesarborough, and brought back to the city. His home is in Port Hope.

A Sergeant in the 156th Battalion was also accused of desertion, but on the request of his officers, was given a suspended sentence.

The Kingston Standard Says:—

Captain Billings, formerly of the staff of the Record Office, London, England, is in camp, conducting an audit of the books of the 93rd and 109th battalions. The Captain is chief auditor of the audit department for Canada.

Astonishing Feature of Picardy Battle as Far as French are Concerned Has Been The Small Losses Incurred.

MORE PRISONERS TAKEN

PARIS, JULY 5.—The full force of the French offensive is again being exerted both north and south of the Somme, but principally southward. In this direction the French are now in the outskirts of Peronne, the great railway centre, which is their first objective in their effort to cut the German communications.

Sormont farm, taken by the French is only two miles from Peronne, and adjoins its suburban houses. The importance which the Germans attach to this point is shown in their fierce counter-attack last night when hey rushed the French lines back to the village of Belloy-en-Santerre, which they momentarily held. This village lies between Assevillers and Estrees, both held by the French, so that the German rush temporarily made a dent in the French advance. This dent was quickly straightened out when fierce hand-to-hand fighting placed the town again in French hands.

The French to-day carried by assault the second German lines on a front of two kilometres from the Clery-Marjcourt road to the River Somme. They have also captured, after a spirited battle, the village of Hem, in the same district, and the Monacu farm, according to the official statement issued by the War Office to-night.

The French have also captured all the German second positions south of the Somme on a front of about ten kilometres. They have also completed the occupation of the village of Estrees, where 200 Germans surrendered.

The number of German prisoners taken is now close to 10,000, while the extent of the munitions captured is shown in the fact that 60 guns were taken by a single army corps. Meantime the movement north of the Somme is necessarily retarded in order that the French left wing may act simultaneously with the British right wing.

The British have been facing an extremely heavy resistance and large German reinforcements were hurried forward all day yesterday by the Cologne-Cambrai railway, which runs to the very centre of the German front attacked by the British. The stubborn resistance all along this front has prevented the British from keeping pace with the French advance to the South.

The tenacity with which the Germans are holding to their positions in the face of the British attack, particularly around La Boiselle, while the French menace of Peronne is camparatively neglected, leads to the belief of the military authorities that the Germans are chiefly concerned in breaking the British offensive, even at the sacrifice of some ground to the south.

The French have now, in some places, pushed through the third and last line of the German defences as they existed before the attack began. The Germans are hastily constructing a new line, but are manifestly unable to make it as strong as the three lines perfected after twenty months' labour.

The astonishing feature of the Picardy battle, so far as the French are concerned, is the small loss incurred. Reports thus far received show that one army corps which took a prominent part in the fighting, lost just 800 men. The regiments which took Flaucourt did not lose a single man. All the wounded who have been brought to Paris hospitals speak of this extraordinary immunity.

A BRIEF LET-UP.

The armies of General Foch operating south of the Somme have arrived at a point where there must be a brief let-up in the advance in order not to make the mistake of wasting infantry in storming German trenches before proper artillery preparation. Three prominent elements enter into the situation. From the Somme south to Hill 63, about two-thirds of the distance between Assevillers and Berleux, the French have taken both the first and second German lines. They also hold all the plateau positions dominating the valley in which lies Peronne. East of Peronne, however, there is another series of hills. The French advance

OUTBREAK IN NEW YORK CAUSES SCORES OF DEATHS

Infantile Paralysis Epidemic is Growing Steadily Worse---An Emergency Call for Nurses, Doctors and Sanitation Workers.

INFLICTED MILK THE CAUSE

NEW YORK, July 6.—Infantile paralysis epidemic growing steadily worse and deaths daily are up in scores. An emergency call for nurses, additional physicians and volunteer sanitation workers was issued today, churches have been asked to close Sunday Schools and discontinue all picnics to avoid all gatherings of children. Washington experts say bacteria infested milk is most likely the cause of this epidemic.

INTERESTING PICTURE AT THE EMPIRE

A Mayoralty Campaign With a Peculiar Ending—The Empire is The Coolest Picture House in the City

Finding that the mayoralty campaign is turning against him, Frank Grandell, who heads the "reform" ticket which is trying to smash "Boss" Hoke's political machine, sends his lieutenants to pry into Hoke's private life in the hope of unearthing some damaging scandal. Their curiosity aroused by the mysterious parentage of May Hoke, the adopted daughter of the politician, they corner "Looney Lim," a half-witted fellow, whose devotion the "Boss" has won through kindness, but he dies before they can extort the secret. Grandell then offers the "Boss" $15,000 for his support and he, determined to crush his enemy, accepts the money and then defies the "reformer" to enforce the bargain. Meanwhile Grandell's wife, whom the "Boss" has for years worshipped from afar, comes to prevent her husband's nefarious intrigue,—and while there discovers that her long-lost baby is in reality the adopted daughter of the "Boss."

The approaching wedding of May with young Benton, the mayoralty candidate opposing her father, paves the way for the latter's retirement from the field. All ammunition is laid aside and "Boss" Hoke and the Grandells meet in harmony through their mutual interest in May.

THE HUN ATTITUDE.

The government party in respect of the North Perth by-election, takes the true Hun attitude. To satisfy her spirit of "graft" Germany invaded Belgium as a way to seize upon France Because Belgium objected to the Teuton trespass, Germany reproached her for bringing on the war and interfering with her plans. Mr. Torrance, the member for North Perth, wanted to get the "graft" implied in an office of emolument under the Dominion government. The Hearst government, which accepted the resignation of its supporter, the Dominion government, which contributed the graft, and the Hearst government that brought on the by-election, are those responsible for the by-election. Now, when the Liberals, declining like Belgium, to lie down and be walked over; because, they have the "cheek" to contest the seat, to exercise the right of free Britons, are abused and charged with disloyalty for bringing on an election contest in war time. Electing a member by order-in-council, would be on all fours with denying the Liberals the right to put up a candidate.

THE WISER COURSE.

The Board of Education appears to have acted wisely, both in regard to present conditions and in view of future interests in deciding to adopt the expedient of moderate expenditure, in order to put the South Central school building into temporary useful condition. It is thought that by the expenditure of $1200 or $1400 to make indispensably necessary improvement—a new lavatory and new heating furnaces—the buildings can be put into fairly good shape and be available for comfortable use for three or four years. The lapse of that or less time will probably bring us to new conditions, financially and otherwise, and the interval will give the Board an opportunity to work out the larger scheme of providing for a new building and adequate grounds. It is considered advisable that the present site of the school should be retained. If the present site is not enlarged to an extent to justify the erection of new buildings the board will soon have to face the problem of a new site, elsewhere and the question of a new building, for the life of the present buildings cannot be greatly prolonged even by the administration of strong restorative or reparative remedies. Besides if the city grows as we feel sure it will do, there will have to be provided a new school centre in the south-western section of the city which is growing and filling up more rapidly than other parts of the city; and the need of the present South Central building will remain.

It seems, therefore, the part of prudence to defer to our present financial capacity by making a comparatively small emergency expenditure, and the part of wisdom to envisage and prepare for a larger scheme that will ultimately be in the best interests of education in this district. If the Board secures the square upon one corner of which the present buildings are perched, a splendid site will be provided for a new school, which is a necessity of the near future—on that site or some other site; which could not be acquired, it is thought at as reasonable a figure, nor be as central and convenient, and in every way desirable. In the matter of the South Central buildings, the Board seems to have taken the wiser course, both with reference to present conditions and in view of the future welfare of the school and the educational interests it represents.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

Yankees Develop Power That Shoves Team in Lead

New York is just about ready to get excited over the Yankees. It takes a lot to convince the average Manhattan "fans" that the local American League club means business, but since the middle of last week, when the men sporting the Ruppert-Huston colours sprinted out in front and remained there unperturbed by the clamorous gang behind them, some of Father Knickerbocker are about ready to swear allegiance to the Donovanites and shout until hoarse, "come on you Yankees."

The Yankees are in the race with a strong team, defensively and offensively, with batting stars just beginning to scintillate with the brilliance forecast in former years, and a pitching staff that is surely rounding into one of better balance than any in the country. There is a world of speed, determination, fighting ability and ambition coupled in the Yankee aggregation, and if they are stopped or prevented from realizing the fondest dreams of every ball club, it will be only after a desperate struggle that will find baseball portrayed as it never was before.

Struggling along since the inception of the American League with no better honours than second and for years considered only one of the many trailing clubs, the Yankees started out this season with few friends who believed it possible for them to overcome precedent. The Yankees were placed in the list including St. Louis, Washington and Cleveland teams, that try but invariably fail. "They may be in the race, but I don't think they can win the pennant," was the universal cry of critics.

Just Beginning to Play.

It has been in the last two weeks that the Yankees have made their greatest showing. In that time twelve victories have been registered out of fifteen starts, of the last ten games played nine were won by the Donovonites, the one lost being an eleven inning affray fraught with heavy hitting that went to Washington by the score of 9 to 8.

In fifteen games the Yankees have scored eighty-four runs and 127 safe hits, or an average of 5 1-2 runs and 8 1-2 hits each game. For the last two weeks the Yankees have tallied more runs than any other team in the American League. Only forty-five runs have been scored against the Yankees in the same length of time.

These statements of fact bring out the Yankees as an aggregation to be feared. It proves the club one of batting strength with power enough to drive the opposition aside and retain the lead it now holds. Further, it brings to light the reason for the position now enjoyed by the team.

Baker and Magee Coming.

Two men have stood out in the recent attack of the Yankees, these being Lee Magee and J. Franklin Baker. Both high salaried players, each costing the owners a small fortune during the last winter, neither has displayed the form expected of them until recently. But right now Baker and Magee are daily supplying manifold base hits and bringing runs to the team.

In the series against Philadelphia, in which the Yankees won four straight games, Magee collected ten safe hits out of sixteen times at bat, for an average of .625. In the same series Baker got seven hits out of thirteen times at bat, for an average of .538. In the series against Washington, just preceding the Philadelphia games, Baker helped himself to ten hits for twenty-two bases in twenty-three times at bat, for an average of .426. This gives him a batting average of .470 for the last ten games. Such exceptional hitting cannot help but bring victories, especially with every other man on the team showing improvement in this line.

At the present time nine members of the team are hitting better than .280, which is mighty exceptional in big league warfare. These men, ranging in the order named, are Baumann, Mullen, High, Walters, Gilhooley, Nunamaker, Pipp, Baker and Magee. The last named just crept into the select ring by his exhibition against Philadelphia. All the above named, excepting Magee, are hitting above .280, Baker being the lowest of the eight, with an average of .285.

Base Stealing Helps.

Another department of the team that stands out is the base running. The Yankees lead the league in thefts, with 89, Gilhooley being the ranking player, with 19. Recently Gilhooley has developed a speed on the bases and trickery in stealing sacks that is fast making him the most popular man on the squad. In a recent game against Philadelphia, Gilhooley stole third twice and second twice.

Every member of the squad, with the possible exception of Gedeon, has improved wonderfully in his work. High jumped his batting average 46 points in one week and is continuing at a clip that soon should find him in the .300 class, he batting .286 right now. All the players are reaching that normal speed hoped for but not realized until now. There seems no reason why they should not keep it up, and surely if they do the Yankees can lay as true claims to the pennant as any other club.

Last, but not least, the pitchers are responding with performances of merit. Ray Caldwell, who began weakly, has reached his stride at last and can be counted upon to bring the club many victories. Fisher, Shawkey, Cullop, Mogridge and Keating continue to show unmistakable signs of greatness. In fact Donovan has a pitching corps seemingly without blemish. In Russell, Markle and Love, three substitutes are always waiting to turn in a star assignment.

Owners Are Delighted.

It is a little early to order your world's series tickets, but not too early to begin crowing about the Yankees. There is power there, youth, ambition, spirit, and owners who are as ardently desirous of a championship as the players. New York wants a pennant. There is no reason under the sun why the Yankees should not provide it.

There is one other team in the American League with great power that is beginning to assert itself, and that is the Chicago White Sox. In the last week Chicago climbed from sixth place to third, only a short distance behind Cleveland, and in doing so defeated Detroit four straight times, relegating the Tigers to sixth position. With Jackson and "Eddie" Collins again fondling a bat the White Sox can be feared.

The Dodgers started the week in a prominent position far out in front, but ran afoul of the Braves and were pulled back to within two games of the Phillies. The Braves crept up, until now the Boston team is in a position to demand respect if not the pennant. The race in the National League seems sure to be run by Brooklyn, Boston and Philadelphia, as was the case last year. The Giants simply do no seem to be able to hold the pace. McGraw's men seem to lack aggressiveness and pitching stability.

FITZGERALD'S GOOD BOWLING SCORE

A record bowling score was run up last evening at Fowler's Bowling Alleys by Mr. G. Lorne Fitzgerald, who ran up a grand total of 323, a bowl which will certainly stand some beating.

Want Quebec To Do Share

Orangemen Pass a Strong Resolution to Forward to Government.

The Toronto Star Says:—

G. E. Dolson, secretary of the Western District Loyal Orange Lodge, has sent the following resolutions to The Star passed at the last quarterly meeting, moved by Lieut.-Col. F. W. Brown, P.D.M., and seconded by J. Jordan, P.D.M.

"That it is the unanimous opinion and wish of the thousands of Orangemen in the district that the Militia Act be put into force in Canada without delay. Further, that owing to the opposition in Quebec by the leading politicians and clergy, we deem it advisable to place the matter of enlistment before the Government and demand that Quebec do its duty and take a fair share of the Empire's burden in the present war. We cannot understand why French-Canadians should refuse or neglect to help the country from whence they sprang in the hour of their trials, who is fighting for their existence, language, and religion; and expect the thousands of Orangemen who are fighting for them in France to do so."

A copy of this resolution will be sent to the Federal Government.

AMAZING ACTIVITY ON BRITISH FRONT

Press Camp in France, July 3 (via London, July 5).—Facts and impressions come in overwhelming numbers to the press correspondent who is on the move morning and night trying to grasp the details of the gigantic struggle which is in progress in northern France. At every turn he realizes the immense forces of material and men that are being employed in this determined offensive.

Everywhere the eye can reach are perspiring and dust laden soldiers, while on the side lines groups of peasants call out to the passing soldiers and the drivers of ammunition trains endlessly going and coming, for the latest news. British and German wounded are seen limping off the field side by side while processions of truck re-load shells and ambulances deliver wounded at the dressing stations to be passed on to waiting trains.

When the British and French lines join there is another world of blue and khaki uniforms and varied kinds of transport vehicles. An automobile took the Associated Press correspondent to-day to a point on the battlefield which a week ago had been in sight and range of the German machine gunners. Reserves were sitting about among the shell craters fought by the terrible fire of the British guns. German rifles were being gathered in piles and German dead lay in rows for burial. The correspondent was offered captured German helmets on all hands by the soldiers. German officers' revolvers and even a pair of binoculars.

CHANGE IS AMAZING

The change from the crater warfare presented by the monotonous trench warfare to those of an advancing army was amazing. From the ruins of the German positions between Montauban and Mametz, the correspondent looked over the whole field toward the second great line of the German defences where the barbed wire entanglements were plainly discernible; from the field worn by the British with its battle litter and distant shell holes the spectator looked forward to where the battle still ranged and west beyond Fricourt to where the British infantry were advancing to take another position. Men who were spoken to talked of "good luck" or "bad luck" which meant that they had made the rush across the zone between the old British and German lines against little opposition or that some machine guns were still in position and snipers, who survived the shell fire, were encountered.

As an instance of the Amazing rapidity with which the British troops advanced a British Colonel took his first real sleep since the fight began in a German dugout where his predecessor's candle still burned on the table.

HETTY GREEN BURIED.

BELLOW'S FALLS, Vt., July 6.—The body of the world's "richest woman," Hetty Green, was buried here shortly after noon, yesterday, with the most simple ceremony. Under a plain granite shaft, which is inscribed with only the family name, the woman financier's body rests beside that of her husband, who died fourteen years ago, burial being in the family plot beside the Emmanuel Episcopal Church.

The casket was very plain, white carnations resting upon a cover of broadcloth.

All the attendants accompanied the procession to the cemetery after the church ceremony.

The reading of the will left by Mrs. Green is expected to take place late place late to-day or early to-morrow, after which it is to be filed for probate.

WANTS ALDERMAN TO PAY FOR LEGAL ADVICE

ALD. PALMER'S STATUS WILL BE INQUIRED INTO BY COUNCIL.

London, July 6.—The status of Ald. Adam Palmer, who resides in the annexed district of London, will be inquired into.

Ald. Wilson at a council meeting, wanted Mayor Stevenson to inform the council whether or not Ald. Palmer or any other man from that section had a right to sit in the council.

Mayor Stevenson said that he could not answer but would get the opinion of City Solicitor Meredith.

"I have not the slightest objection to any man inquiring as to whether or not I have the right to a seat in the council," commented Ald. Palmer. 'What I do object to is that the city is called upon to pay for this opinion. Let those who object pay the shot, and I am perfectly content."

Final Medical Examinations In Camp Discover Many Men Unfit

Returns From The Whole Dominion For July 5th Close to 300 Rejected and Other Daily Lists Practically as Large.

The severity of the final medical examinations of the soldiers in the various Canadian military camps is illustrated by the return sheet for Wednesday, July 5 showing the number of rejections. About three hundred names were compiled the majority of them being designated medically unfit showing that while the men were passed in the first examinations at the time of their enlistment they failed to qualify under the more search ing inspection for final acceptance. Probably, too, camp life had revealed defects which were not apparent to the first examiners. There were a few losses due to desertion but they constituted a negligible number. The same may be said of those who were turned back, tagged as undesirable.

Col. Cecil G. Williams estimated turned back tagged as undesirable. enlistment and their going overseas at five per cent. Ald. Dobbin believes the percentage is very much larger. He is of the opinion that for the 250,000 soldiers enlisted there is close to 100,000 in the whole Dominion who have been rejected. The July 5th list is a long one but there have been other recent lists just as long and the report is a daily one. Ald. Dobbin is keeping a count of the rejections for medical unfitness for two weeks, probably to indicate specifically the accepted fact that in many cases it is the flesh and not the spirit that is weak.

REJECTED HERE ACCEPTED ELSEWHERE.

Ald. Dobbin's sheet of Patriotic allowances shows an increasing number of men who have been turned down by the local examiners but were accepted by outside battalions including the 80th, 109th of Lindsay, had 235th of Northumberland and Durham. They are Peterborough men and their wives are living in Peterborough and hence are credited to the local Fund. Of course, not all the men who have enlisted from here with those battalions were rejected here, but probably the majority of them were held up by the local medical examiners.

Women Live 3 Years Longer Than Men, Experts Find

Washington, July 6.—Women on the average live a trifle more than three years longer than men, according to a set of tables published to-day by Sam. L. Rogers, director of the Census Bureau, showing the death rate, and the ratio of expectation of life in the New England States, New York State, New Jersey, Indiana, Michigan, and the District of Columbia. The figures are the first of the sort ever prepared by the United States government and are similar to those compiled by the large insurance companies, except that they cover the entire population of the specified districts, and not only the risks selected through medical examination and otherwise.

According to the tabulations, the average expectation of life at birth for males is 49.9 years and for females 53.2 years. For white males the expectation is 50.2 years and for white females 53.6 years. For native white males the average is 50.6 years and for native white females 54.2 years. In the general figures the percentage is cut down because of the fact that negroes live on an average of 15 years less than white persons.

The tabulation shows that the expectation is greater at the age of one than at birth, approximately six years greater, and the maximum is reached at the age of two, when it is seven years greater. This is due to the extremely high infant mortality.

VIOLENT DEATHS RAISE MEN'S AVERAGE.

There are several reasons assigned for the fact that women are found to live longer than men. One of the chief of these is the discovery that there are many more violent deaths among men than among women. The figures show that nearly four fifths of the violent deaths—suicides, homicides and accidental deaths—are of males. Deaths in this form amount to about seven or eight per cent. of the total each year.

The percentages are based on the birth and death returns for 1910, but these are regarded by the Census Bureau as normal.

Furthermore, an examination of the tables discloses a lower death rate for females than for males each of the first twelve months of life, and in the case of the native whites, during each year of life up to the age of 94. During the first month of life the death rate among native whites is nearly twenty-eight per cent. higher for boys than for girls, and during the first year it is more than twenty per cent. higher.

The enormous waste of infant life, which still goes on, although medical science has done and is still doing much to arrest it, is shown by the exceedingly high death rates which prevail among infants under one year of age.

Of 100,000 native white boy babies born alive 4,975, or almost five per cent., die during the first month, and 12,602, or 12.6 per cent., die within one year.

The girl baby's chance of life is considerably better, the death rate among native white females during the first month being 3,894 per 100,000 born alive, or less than four per cent., and during the first year 10,460 per 100,000 or nearly 10.5 per cent.

THE EXPECTATION OF LIFE.

The Census Bureau explains that today that a person's expectation of life in a certain number of years is not the same as saying that he has an even chance of living that number of years. This is because expectation of life represents the average remaining length of life, at any given age, in a stationary population, whereas an average person in a given group has an even chance of living to what is called the median age at death, that is, the age below which half of the members of that group will die. The median age at death for all the native white males in the assumed stationarp population would be 60; that is to say, of a given number of such males born alive, half would die before reaching 60, and the other half at 60 and beyond. A native white male child at birth then has one chance in two of reaching this age. At the end of the first year, however, he has a trifle better than an even chance of reaching 64; and at 42 he has one chance in two of attaining three score and ten.

Similarly a native white female child at birth has an even chance of living a few months past the age of 64; at the age of one he has one chance in two of living until she is nearly 68 years old, and at 22 her chance of reaching 70 is an even one. Thus a native white man at 42 and a native white woman at 22 have about the same chances of celebrating their 70th birthdays.

The relative healthfulness of city and country is strikingly shown by the tables.

For white males the expectation of life at birth in rural localities is 7.7 years greater than in the cities; at the age of 10, 5.4 years greater, and until the age of 39 is reached there is a margin of more than five years in favor of the country.

For white females the difference between urban and rural longevity while pronounced, is somewhat less than in the case of males.

an order-in-Council would be passed at Ottawa providing for a scale of maintenance pay for returned soldiers who are taking special instruction for new vocations. The scale will be based on the experience of the Patriotic Fund. The number of maimed men who have returned is not large, amputations being less than 100. There are only four blinded soldiers in Canada at the present time. Of the returned men only two per cent. desire to work on the land.

Hon. Dr. Pyne, Minister of Education, suggested the appointment of a provisional vocational officer, associated, jointly with the Education Department and the commission, who would give his whole time to the work.

Dr. F. W. Merchant, Director of Technical Education, stated that the officers in the department were overloaded with work already, and that it would be impossible for them to do the work. He said the person to act as vocational officer should not be loaned by the Provincial Government.

After further discussion it was decided that Mr. W. D. McPherson, K.C., M.P.P., chairman of the commission, and Dr. F. W. Merchant, confer together to work out a scheme to take care of the vocational training of soldiers returning to Ontario who might desire such training, subject to the examination of the soldiers by the medical officers of the Hospitals Commission.

Druggist Was Fined $50

GUELPH, July 6.—Geo. Hazenfiug was fined $50 without costs by Magistrate Watt at the police court yesterday morning, for selling a tooth paste without the necessary war stamp affixed. The defence was that a clerk in the store was not familiar with the regulations, but the court held that the merchant was responsible for not having given specific instructions. Officers of the Revenue Department were here in connection with the case.

THE BRITISH BLOCKADE IS STILL ON; THE GERMAN FLEET IS STILL HIDDEN; WILHELMSHAVEN IS STILL SEALED

Mr. Archibald Hurd, in a Careful Review of the Situation a Month After the Jutland Battle, Calls Attention to Indisputable Facts and Says There is No Doubt Where Victory Rests

(By Archibald Hurd.)

LONDON, July 5.—Four weeks have passed since the battle of Jutland—for that is the title by which it will be known—was fought, and it is possible in the light of an immense mass of information from British and neutral sources, to form what will prove the verdict of the historian on one of the most splendid incidents in our annals.

In the first place, if any doubt exists abroad as to whether the Germans were beaten, and badly beaten, it may be suggested that consideration be given to the following, among other facts:

(1) The British blockade has continued without intermission, and the activity in preventing cargoes reaching or leaving Germany has been, if anything, greater since June 1 than it was before that date.

(2) Four weeks have elapsed since the battle was fought, and the German High Sea fleet has not, either as a whole or in part, ventured into the North Sea during that period; the British fleet has held the North Sea as in a vice.

(3) The German High Sea Fleet has not only not emerged into the North Sea, but it has since been hidden away even from the observation of the Germans, Wilhelmshaven, the great North Sea base, has been sealed; it is surrounded by a barbed-wire entanglement; no one may go in or out; the train even are stopped. No step has been omitted to prevent any persons seeing the men-of-war. Much the same secrecy is being enforced at Kiel.

(4) A judicial sifting of the evidence of British officers and men shows that the Germans lost five capital ships— that is, vessels of the dreadnought type—in the action, besides six, or possibly seven, light cruisers, a large number of destroyers, and at least two submarines.

Victory—Almost Annihilation.

The more carefully all the evidence is examined the more certain it is that the enemy narrowly escaped annihilation. In half an hour the work probably would have been completed. Vice-Admiral von Scheer, the Commander in chief of the High Seas Fleet, who showed considerable sailor-like capacity, was far less responsible for this escape by directing his ships to retire than was the unfavourable character of the weather and light. Not a British naval officer who was present during the engagement but is convinced that the battle of Jutland was within an ace, so to speak, of realising Nelson's ambition—"no victory, but annihilation."

When Sir John Jellicoe's despatch is published the nation will realise that the prestige of the fleet never stood higher than it stands to-day. Officers and men, representing a very different age from that in which the British navy last achieved triumphs, preserve all the characteristics of those who gave us command of the sea. That declaration applies to all ranks—not forgetting the engineers and their staffs, who, working below, showed how British engines could contribute to victory. The country never had great reason, based on irrefutable evidence, to be proud of its fleet, which holds the maritime communications of the world in closer grip than at any period in our history. That may seem a bold claim, but it accords with the most careful examination of naval records. There has never been a period when a great sea Power was unable, even under war conditions, to send a frigate to sea. Nelson, Collingwood and the other British admirals of the Napoleonic war frequently had the mortification of learning that single ships, and even squadrons, had eluded them and got across the trade routes. In all the world's seas there is not a single German surface vessel—man-of-war or merchantman—which dare show its nose.

The Effects of the Battle.

If the Germans did win a "victory," and break "the nimbus of British invincibleness and insuperability," as has been asserted, it has proved the least fruitful "victory" that ever fleet won. Why are battles at sea fought? They are waged in order to decide who shall enjoy the right to use the seas. That is their purpose, and, incidentally, the belligerents try to destroy each other's fleets, so that the matter may, once and for all, be settled the way or the other. But the main end is the assertion of dominion. Who holds dominion to-day? The Germans, sadly depleted in strength, nursing their wounds in the most complete secrecy, or the British, who, within a few hours of returning to port for fresh fuel and stores, issued a new challenge to action, daring the Germans to renew the battle? The German ships—such as remain—are securely protected behind mines; they are defended by shore guns, they have flotillas of submarines on patrol and, so that prying eyes may not witness the havoc which has been done, barbed wire has been erected.

But the truth is that as a fighting force the German battle cruiser squadron, under Rear Admiral von Hipper, does not exist. Such ships as do not lie at the bottom of the North Sea are in such a damaged condition that they will not be seen at sea in the course of the summer. That is a statement which can be made with most complete assurance. The battle squadrons also suffered badly in the engagement of May 31-June 1. They are in no condition to embark on a further "enterprise to the northward," to quote the official statement issued from Berlin.

Lame and Blind

The German High Seas fleet, weaker by five capital ships, is so lame that it cannot move. It is so blind that, if it could move, it would not dare to do so. That is a matter on which there can be no doubt. When the war opened Germany possessed the following ships of the cruiser classes, (built and building) less than fifteen years old—the age for replacement under the navy law—those lost in the course of the war being given:

Battle Cruisers—Original number, 8; since lost, 6, comprising the Lutsow, Goeben, Seydlitz— a complete wreck—Blucher, Hindenburg and another of similar type, with, it is believed, the Von der Tann.

Large Cruisers— Original number, 7; since lost, 5, comprising the Yorak, Scharnhorst, Gneisenau, Friedrich Karl and Prince Adalbert. The two remaining vessels are the Roon (launched in 1908) and Prince Heinrich (1900). The First Bismarck (1897), is of no military value; she is believed now to be serving as a training ship.

Ligh Cruisers.— Original number, 30; since lost, 20, comprising the Karlsrhue, Magdeberg, Koln, Mainz, Emden, Dresden, Narnberg, Koningberg, Leipsig, Bremen, Undine, Rostock, Wiesbaden, Breslau, Frauenlob, Elbing, Ariadne and three others, the names of which have not yet been revealed.

Out of the forty-five effective cruisers of all classes which the enemy had, built and building, when the war opened, she possesses to-day only fourteen, and of these a large proportion were so seriously injured in the battle of Jutland as to be at present ineffective. Those cruisers have to suffice for many and various duties.

Consequently the High Seas Fleet is blind, except for such aid as Zeppelins can render in favourable weather, and they cannot fight ships of war on the sea.

In the light of all these considerations it can well be understood why the officers and men of the British fleet, though they make no boasts, are well pleased with the naval outlook, except for one fear—that the enemy may decide not again to be enticed into battle. In any event the German High Seas Fleet, lacking many of its original units and cowed in a damaged state behind its barbed wire entanglements, does not exist today as a fighting force. In the meantime the economic pressure which the British fleet has been exerting is still pressing heavily on the German empire in virtue of the command of the sea, which was reaffirmed, with splendid gallantry, at the Battle of Jutland.

Graphic Description Of Recapture Of The Lost Trenches

The following vivid letter appears in the Toronto News:

Same Place, June 18, 1916.

I have been through hell, and I marvel that I am alive to tell the tale. The age of miracles cannot be past for I still have a whole skin. My thanks are due to Frits for he tried his best to get me. An excellent best it was, too. Surely the Germans are not short of shells and ammunition. The amount of "old iron" that dropped around was amazing. Belgium is sure to be a great mining country after the war if the iron and steel industry is reorganised.

We were relieved about 1 a.m. on June 1st after spending eight days in the front line. We came out to a rest camp, expecting to have a good rest. But it was not to be. On the morning of the 2nd the Germans exploded several mines and captured the very trenches that we had been holding. As a result, we received instructions to pack up and return to the zone of kultur. I must confess that it was with regret, that we retraced our steps, but we were very "sore" with Frits and the thought of getting some of our own back helped us greatly. As we neared the front line I received the surprise of my life. The place was unrecognizable. Several small woods had been levelled to the ground. Trenches familiar to us were not there. The whole landscape had been transformed and nothing remained but shell holes, and still more shell holes. The place was honeycombed.

NOT TRENCHES AT ALL.

Eventually we reached the trenches that our lads were building. But they were not trenches — just ditches intermingled with shell holes. The mud and water was knee-deep. Dug-outs were gone as were sandbags in most places. We made the best of things, and settled down to wait for the time when we were to "go over." The weather was most miserable. It rained nearly all the time and the air was very chilly. In fact, the weather resembled November rather than June. We were soaked through and through, and chilled to the marrow. It must be remembered that Frits was shelling us all the time and that we had practically no cover. As I stood there, (sitting down meant flopping in the mud), I wondered what the people at home would think if they only knew the actual conditions out here. Surely every sane person the world over would be up in arms against such a hell on earth. To add to our discomfort we had no rations, nor water. Water! I never felt the need of it so much before. My tongue was parched and my throat absolutely painful. We were standing in water and there was water everywhere, but it was the kind that hogs wallow in.

Came the night of the advance, which, by the way, was a bombing attack. Our artillery bombarded for forty-five minutes previous to our going over. Frits retaliated heavily, and the shells, ours and his, cut the air like showers of rain. The noise was terrific—just like one big explosion lasting forty-five minutes—still, I could hear our "big Lizzies" wandering slowly by. They make a noise similar to a freight train. I can well imagine how much the sound of their approach soothes German nerves.

A BOMBING FIGHT.

Sharp to the minute the bombardment ceased and over we went. The party I was with attacked an advanced machine-gun emplacement. We managed to come upon it in the rear and then began a bombing duel that is indescribable. Frits lobbed a bomb in our midst and I and several others sat down rather suddenly. We were unhurt, as it was simply concussion that affected us. It produced one good effect, though. It made me mad. I vowed then and there that I would get a German if I had to go right through to Potsdam to accomplish it. I struggled to my feet and drew the safety pin from a bomb. Just then I chanced to see a Fritzie, head and shoulders above the parapet, plugging away with a machine-gun at our fellows who were attacking in front. I threw the bomb straight at him and had the satisfaction of seeing him cease straffing for all time.

The rest was easy. Our lads came on and the Germans who were not killed were taken prisoner. We got the machine-gun which proved to be a Lewis, one that Frits had captured from us when we took our trenches. The prisoners were mostly young fellows, and a miserable looking lot. We annexed Frits's rations and smokes, so we didn't fare too badly. We searched the trenches and dug-outs and got all kinds of souvenirs, including a saw-tooth bayonet, a wicked-looking weapon—more kultur I suppose. I got an automatic pistol from a German Corporal. It is an excellent weapon.

We are back in rest camp now and enjoying the chage. I have had several good "feeds" and a bath, and feel like a human being once more. There is a rumour now current that we are out for divisional rest, which means several weeks of forming fours but I don't know whether it is true or not. The weather at present is a little cool, otherwise it is ideal. My good health continues, which is saying much, for, there are a good many blank files in the regiment to-day.

MOST AMAZING SURGICAL FEAT OF WAR IN PARIS

LINK WOUNDED MEN TOGETHER TO RESTORE BROKEN THIGH BONE.

Paris, July 5.—The most remarkable of all operations for wounds sustained in the war was performed recently at the Grand Palais in Paris, by Professor Laurent, of the Brussels University.

Corp. Rousselet had lost part of his thigh bone by a shot. Amputation had been decided upon when Pte. Tilliette was injured and brought to the hospital to have his leg removed.

Dr. Laurent grafted the bony offshoots of Tilliette's stump on to Rousselet's thigh-bone, the two soldiers remaining linked together for a week, like the Siamese twins. In the presence of the Minister of Health, M. Godart, Prof. Laurent separated the soldiers. Rousselet's thigh bone was restored, and the leg was saved.

CHILD'S LEGS BADLY CUT BY MOWER KNIVES

LITTLE SARNIA TOWNSHIP GIRL SEVERELY INJURED BY AN ACCIDENT.

Sarnia, July 6.—Running from the tall grass lining the highway of the second line of Sarnia township, near this city, right in the front of a mowing machine that was being hauled behind a wagon, the young daughter of Simon Proctor was severely cut about the legs, and is in a serious condition.

The child came out of the grass so quickly that the man driving the machine had no chance to avoid the accident.

GUN DIDN'T KNOW MASTERS' VOICE

SO IT MISTOOK MR. YATES FOR A BURGLAR AND SHOT AWAY ONE ARM.

Ashland, Ky., July 5.—George Yates (one of the prominent citizens of this town) recently was the victim of robbers who entered his home in his absence and left nothing that could be away without a truck. Fearing that complaint to the police might not prevent another call by the thieves Yates prepared a trap.

He fashioned a shotgun just inside the front door by which the thieves had entered. A string was attached so that the weapon would be discharged when the door was opened. He then left the house and went down to the general store to explain to the cracker-barrel contingent how his new thief trap would work. Yates even volunteered to take some of the boys up to the house to see the anti-burglar gun.

Yates' only mistake as that the gun did not know his master's voice. He marched his friends on up to the front porch and then proceeded to lecture on the advantages of his anti-thief battery. Then he opened the door. When the spectators picked themselves up from the lawn they saw Yates lying on the porch. He will have to get along with one arm and rest of his life.

Drug Clerk Tells How To Cure Indigestion

Recommends to Sufferers the Best Stomach Remedy in Peterborough To-day.

"It is a wonder some of us have stomachs left," remarked a well-known drug clerk recently. "While all drug stores sell a score or more of stomach remedies for which there is a wide demand, most of them are just pepsin pills which digest the food that is in the stomach at the time. They have no curative or strengthening effect on the stomach at all, and of course do not reach or cure the cause. So the same people keep on coming here and buying and using them until they are real chronic dyspeptics. When anyone really asks my advice, I swear by and recommend ordinary bisurated magnesia, which doesn't digest the food at all, but just acts as an antacid, and sweetens the sour, fermenting contents of the stomach. That stops the pain, heart-burn, sour rising, wind, bloating, fullness, etc., in just a few minutes, and the stomach digests its food without help or trouble, which is the proper way."

"Doctors make mistakes sometimes too," he continued. "My own aunt had all kinds of trouble with her stomach for years. She bought and used several styles of digestive pills but got worse right along, as naturally she would. Finally she went to a doctor, who nearly scared her to death by telling her she had cancer of the stomach. She came to me with his prescription and told me what he said. I thought it was nonsense. I sent her to another doctor whom I know very well and he didn't tell her anything, but just gave her this same thing, bisurated magnesia. She took it two weeks and never has had any stomach trouble since and that's three years ago. She's my own aunt and I know this for a fact. Yes, a lot of bisurated magnesia is sold in Peterborough. All the druggists have it, I suppose, and all you take is a teaspoonful after every meal. It's all right."

Yale Honours Dead Genius

Rupert Brooke, the young English soldier-poet, who died on the Aegean Sea, en route to Gallipoli, in the spring of 1915, has received high American honour. The Henry Howland memorial prize of $1,500 every second year awarded by Yale University to "the citizen of any country for marked distinction in literature, fine arts or the science of government," was accorded this young poet, who, not yet 29 when he perished, hurried home from Italy to serve his country at the outbreak of the great war. On his way to active service with the Dardanelles expedition Brooke suddenly became ill and died.

The "Collected Poems of Rupert Brooke," published last autumn by the John Lane Company, with an introduction by Professor George Edward Woodberry, show magnificent promise, together with youthful irregularity of expression. The famous and beautiful sonnet, "The Soldier," is now well known the world over. "The Soldier" and parts of "The Old Vicarage, Grantchester" (Brooke's childhood home), evidence the power and scope of his lyric gift.

The Soldier.

If I should die, think only this of me:
That there's some corner of a foreign field
That is forever England. Ther shall be
In that rich earth a richer dust concealed;
A dust whom England bore, shaped, made aware,
Gave, once, her flowers to love, her ways to roam,
A body of England's breathing English air,
Washed by the rivers, blest by the suns of home.

And think this heart, all evil shed away,
A pulse in the eternal mind, no less
Gives somewhere back the thoughts by England given;
Her sights and sounds; dreams happy as her day;
And laughter learnt of friends; and gentleness,
In hearts of peace under an English heaven.

From "The Old Vicarage, Grantchester."

Just now the lilac is in bloom
All before my little room;
And in the flower beds, I think,
Smile the carnation and the pink;
And down the borders, well I know,
The poppy and the pansy blow.
Oh! there the chestnuts, summer through,
Beside the river made for you
A tunnel of green gloom and sleep
Deep above; and green and deep
The stream mysterious glides beneath,
Green as a dream and deep as death.

Because of the high quality of Rupert Brooke's poetry, and the dramatic circumstances of his passing a "Brooke cult" and tradition are in process of formation both in England and America. Professor Gilbert Murray says "of the dead singer: "Among all who have been poets and died young it is hard to think of one who both in life and death, has so typified the ideal radiance of youth and beauty." The Brooke poems are not numerous, but cover a wide ground.

Detectives Off To Fight Bandits in Thick Woods

BIG BATTLE LIKELY WHEN PROVINCIAL OFFICERS OVERTAKE QUARTETTE NOW IN HIDING.

Montreal, July 5.—A man hunt of large proportions is now on at Ville Marie, where four of the bandits who made the attempt to rob the Ville Marie branch of the Quebec Bank are said to be hiding in the thick woods; the Provincial Detectives under the leadership of Detective Lorrain and Akin, who have taken Leo Liberman, an interpreter along with them, left for Ville Marie at noon to-day, bent on the capture of the party which has terrorized the community by their daring attempts at destruction all along the route taken to their hiding place.

The detectives are looking for a boy supposed to be in a hospital in Montreal with a broken leg. He was one of the few who came to the street when the bank was robbed on Sunday, as the bandits fired right and left. A shot from one of them entered his leg, and he was taken to Montreal. So far the local authorities have not been able to locate the hospits'. Extra supplies of ammunition have been taken along by the provincial detectives who are looking for a hard fight as the bandits are well supplied with ammunition. Yesterday they buried decoys at their pursuers by firing at random and then seeking cover in another part of the dense woods.

THIS GRAVEYARD "HUNCH" FAILED

IT WORKED ALL RIGHT IN A "CRAPS" GAME UNTIL A POLICEMAN APPEARED.

New York, July 6.—Thomas Koppas and Abram Paull, in whom superstition seems to fan a gambling instinct, chose the yard of the First Presbyterian Church, at Paterson, N. J., yesterday, for a game of "craps." Koppas sat on the grass between two of the graves. Paull sat on one of the mounds, and threw—say number of seven, each one being worth five cents to him. He won nearly all the money before Koppas insisted on changing ends and trying his luck with the dice. Then Koppas threw sevens.

The players decided that the lucky seat was on the grave of a successful gambler until they looked at the headstone. The one buried there was 77 years old. As they were beating out the winning seat again a parishioner called a policeman and had them arrested. Recorder William Young fined them $5 each.

Two Spies Found With Explosives

GERMANS CAUGHT BY MEN OF THE OLYMPIC AT HALIFAX ARE ARRESTED.

New York, July 5.—Passengers arriving here on board the steamship Florizel from Halifax, N.S., declared that on June 20, two German spies carrying explosives were found on the British troop ship Olympic as she was about to leave Halifax for England, with nearly six thousand Canadian troops aboard. According to the stories told by the passengers on the Florizel, the Germans were not discovered until the troop ship was about to sail. The departure of the vessel was delayed until the men were taken ashore, and lodged in gaol.

The Olympic, owned by the White Star Line, has been in the service of the British government since the beginning of the war. She is a 35,000 ton boat and was last reported in wireless records as arriving at Halifax on April 24. Under the military censorship her arrival or departure is not reported until after she reaches her destination. For this reason it is supposed the Canadian authorities have not permitted any word of her departure to be published.

Soon after the beginning of the war the Olympic struck a mine and was damaged. This was announced by the British admiralty in an official statement, November 2, 1914.

Trestle Aflame, Passengers Jump Into Jamaica Motor Craft

New York, July 6.—A Long Island [illegible] electric train from the Pennsylvania station bound for the Rockaways, dropped a "shoe" with which it [illegible] up the current while crossing [illegible] Channel draw bridge, part [illegible] trestle across Jamaica [illegible] "shoe" caused a short [illegible] that set fire to the oil-[illegible] timber [illegible] flames [illegible] the cars [illegible] were [illegible] Bay harbour, never asleep when there is a chance of earning a dollar, soon had their many kinds of craft alongside the trestle, and those passengers who did not desire to wait for the trestle to be opened to traffic, jumped from the trestle to the decks of power boats and sailing vessels and were whisked away through the bay to Rockaway Beach, Seaside, Rockaway Park, and other places. The boatmen made a harvest at fifty cents and one dollar a passenger.

Among passengers those adopting the water route and making the perilous leap from the trestle into boats were many women. A pretty girl wearing an awning stripe skirt and, so the story goes, long white silk stockings, refused to make the leap because she said she was in a hurry to get in the ocean before dark. She missed the boat and got her swim in Jamaica Bay. There were hundreds of rescuers nearby, and she was not in much danger, but the stripes in her skirt were not fast colours and it looked more like a Persian carpet than an awning when she was dragged out.

Trains from the beaches to the city were delayed only half an hour, but all trains from the city were tied up nearly an hour before the drawbridge was made safe for traffic towards the ocean.

TELLS HOW NOTED FLYER MET DEATH

BRITISH REPORT SAYS LIEUTENANT IMMELMANN'S FOKKER BROKE IN THE PLUNGE.

London, July 5.—The death of Lt. Immelmann, the famous German aviator, who was killed in a combat with British flyers, is described briefly in a statement given out by the British Aerial Board.

According to this account, Lieutenant Immelmann, in a Fokker, was attempting with another Fokker to attack a British aeroplane approaching Annay from Lens, when another British plane appeared and dived on the two Fokkers, causing Lieutenant Immelmann to plunge precipitately, the wings of his machine breaking off.

FORESTRY BATTALIONS DO A GREAT WORK

While There May be a Little Less Glory Attatched to This Type of Service it is Nearly as Essential to The Success of The Allies as is the Line of Men in the Trenches.

238th IS RECRUITING.

To the youth of the land who has been looking about for some form of service to his Empire without experiencing the hardships and hazards of trench life, to the hardened dwellers of the northland, of the woods, of the farms, of the mills, to the man who is crying out for some form of military service where he may give the fruits of his strength in the saving of his country, there has now come a great opportunity to perform the highest type of military service. The new Forestry Battalion, the 238th, which has just been authorized under Lieut. Col. W. R. Smyth, M. P. for Algoma, with the right to recruit in the whole area from the eastern boundary of Ontario as far as the Pacific Coast, will, without doubt, touch responsive chords in the patriotism of thousands of Canadians, and possibly the most regrettable fact will be the one which will prevent all applicants from being taken on for this service. Judging from the rate at which applications are flooding into the recruiting depots all over the Province and to the headquarters at Ottawa, it will be a case of hurry if a man is to catch a place on this non-combatant unit.

There appears to be a certain freedom and independence in this type of service which is appealing to a hardy class of citizens, and while the original intention of Col. Smyth was to take on only bushmen, sawyers, mill-workers and experienced lumbermen, the demand has now become so keen from young farmers, drivers, from soldiers, from other battalions, and from different types of citizens, that it has been decided to make the qualification broader in order that others may catch a place in the ranks.

While, owing to the special authorization of this battalion, its recruits do not include fighting, its popularity seems to be due rather to the fact that the men will get a taste of active lumbering, and that many of those who enlist will be able to continue their regular trade, with all the honour of wearing the khaki, and will accordingly not be called upon to learn some new business. Hundreds of lumbermen and teamsters who step directly from the woods or the farm into the 238th Battalion, will find that they will be able to do the work required of them just as readily as though they had been soldiers all their lives.

The first duty of the 238th, upon reaching England, will be to join the 224th Forestry Battalion, which is now engaged in cutting down the forests of Windsor to supply rough lumber for its hundred-and-one odd uses at the front. While there may be a little less glory attached to this type of national service, it is, without doubt, just as essential to the success of the Allies as is the line of men in the trenches. Perhaps you have wondered where the men in the front lines, who are under fire, get their supply of rough lumber to build the trenches and the dug-outs, to which they must take refuge when the heavy fire of the enemy opens. They get it from the forests of Great Britain and Southern France, and it will be the particular work of the 238th Forestry Battalion to keep them supplied. Though the 238th Foresters are intended for immediate duty, in September, or early October, in Windsor Forest, they may even be called upon to cross into Southern France, to cut down the timber there, but wherever they go it is an assured fact that they will be doing one of the greatest services to the Empire which any equal number of men will ever be called upon to perform. Without them, there would be no safe trenches, there could be no dug-outs, the roadways of France and Belgium would fall into disrepair there would be no timber to permit the continuance of communication, in short, the successful terminations of the war would be greatly handicapped, perhaps deplayed for many years. It is very true that the work of the Foresters, though carried out quietly and without ostentation is essential to the saving of the Empire, and it follows as well that the hardy men of the northland that from their farms, who enlist with this unit, will incur a debt of gratitude which those who remain behind will never be able to repay by the years to come.

When one considers the miles of trenches, the thousands of dug-outs which must be roofed, the bomb-proof shelters, the new railways which must be built, the gauge re-laired in the mines. If England is to continue supplying the Allies with coal, one can readily understand the enormous amount of timber required at the front, and from this, one may see that it is well to throw out the suggestion that if any man is looking for active fighting the 238th Forestry Battalion is not the unit to join. At one time it was intended to ship the rough lumber from Canada, but it was later on found impracticable, as it became necessary to save all the shipping space in the vessels sailing from Canada for the transportation of munitions and food supplies, and for this reason it was essential that some of the historic forests of England should be sacrificed.

Lt.-Col. Smyth is now on a tour of the western provinces, establishing his recruiting depots, but before he went West he left his officers in charge of stations through this province. Recruiting depots in Ontario have been located chiefly through the north country, where the most of the lumbermen live, but a letter dropped to Lt. H. S. Price, at 55 Queen street, West, Toronto, or to the headquarters at Ottawa, will secure any information required. Depots in Ontario are located at Renfrew, Maniwaki, Buckingham, New Liskeard, Toronto, Ottawa, Parry Sound, Windsor, Port Colougne, Tamworth, Sault Ste Marie, Gore Bay, Port Arthur, Pembroke, Fenelon Falls, Port Francis, and Cochrane, and the officers in charge of those station are authorized to attest any applicants who wish to become members of this very useful unit.

A Narrow Escape From Drowning

Son of Mr. Archie Barbeau Fell into The Water at a Dangerous Point.

A narrow escape from drowning was recorded last evening when N. Barbeau, son of Mr. Archie Barbeau, 112 Aylmer street slipped into the water at a point where the creek enters the river at George street, south. It appears that the boy was standing on the large pipe that enters the river at this point when he lost his footing and slid into the water. Arthur Graham, son of Mr. Nelson Graham, 211 Rink street plunged in and succeeded in getting hold of Barbeau. He was unable to pull him out owing to the nature of the embankment. The two boys were finally rescued by an employee of the Matthews-Blackwell Company, Limited.

59TH BAND TOOK PART

Word has been received to the effect that bandmaster Peryer of the 59th Battalion band, with twelve men from the band including six Peterborough boys played at Covent Garden recently. Canadian bands numbering two hundred and fifty men in charge of sixteen bandmasters participated. The men were picked from the various battalion bands numbering from the ninth to the ninety-ninth battalions. Both the King and Queen were in attendance.

The 59th Battalion band has just received a brand new set of instruments.

League Of Honour For The Women and Girls of The Empire

A very interesting meeting was held on Monday evening in the Green Room of the Y.W.C.A. with the object of inaugurating a branch of the League in Peterborough.

To the league attendance Miss Saunders in the course of an eloquent and earnest address explained the motives and aims of the league, which started first in England, spread to Australia then to India and now to Canada.

It is an Empire-wide Women's Movement working through already existing societies and having as its chief aim the upholding of the honour of our Empire and its defenders in this time of war, by prayer, purity and temperance. To prepare for peace, and endeavour to be worthy of victory.

Each member of the League promises every day to pray for her country and for the brave soldiers and sailors who are defending it. To think and speak what is pure and good to take part in wholesome recreations, to give the others their best and to expect from them the best. To be self denying in eating and drinking and quiet in their dress and conversation.

Miss Saunders dealt with these promises in a very beautiful way, holding up high ideals which all girls should strive to attain, and which the striving for would make life so much fuller and satisfactory. She pointed out the tremendous sacrifices, those fighting were making for us, many willingly making the supreme sacrifice, while others whom we pray might be spared to return to us, were now face to face with the stern realities, and their thoughts were turning to God and they were thinking about sacred things as they had never thought before.

When they returned they did not want to find girls full of frivolities, seeking after pleasure alone, extravagant in dress, loud in behaviour.

They wanted to find girls who realised what they had been fighting for, girls who cared for their Empire and their country and who were anxious to uphold its dignity in the best sense of the word.

To reconstruct our national life with Christ as the corner stone; to teach the young to serve God and sacred things.

To dress always in good taste with modesty and to avoid extravagance or vulgarity of any kind, to be temperate in all things.

Miss Saunders closed the meeting with a very earnest and sincere plea to the women and girls present to realise that they had such a vital part to play in this war, and the great day after the struggle in the time of reconstruction.

It was pointed out how very largely the moral ideals of a nation depended upon its women and girls, and that in this time of stress and storm, we should be doing our part in endeavouring to raise our national ideals so that Canada may indeed be God's country.

It was decided to form a branch here, and a committee was formed and of members from churches and organizations represented at the meeting. They were the 57th, the Otonabee, the Peter Robinson chapters of the I.O. D.E., the Girls' Business Club, The Teachers Guild, the Y.W.C.A., St. Paul's church and St. John's Church. The committee was given power to add to its members till it became a representative body of all Women's Societies in the city.

Miss Jean Neil was appointed Chairman of the committee and Miss Little field Central Enroling Officer, to whom all others report.

Col. Baker Died Cheering His Men

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, July 5.—The first detailed account of how Lt.-Col Harry Baker, M.P., member for Brome, and commander of the 5th Mounted Rifles, lost his life in the battle of Zillebeke, is given in a letter written at the front to the colonel's sister by Capt. A. Rhoades, adjutant of the regiment. Capt. Rhoades wrote:

"From 9 a.m. on June 2 until 9.30 p.m. we were subjected to an intense fire from guns of all calibre. The battalion was in support about 800 yards in the rear of the first line trenches, and in such a position that we could not get any adequate protection from the constant rain of heavy shells which seemed to reach out every corner of our line.

"To keep a stout heart at such a time, when you cannot see your enemy or get a chance to return any of the fire is no easy task, but for over twelve hours your brother not only made whatever disposition as required from time to time with cool and even judgment, but by his cheerfulness and coolness set such an example to us that none could be otherwise than truly inspired.

"From the tenacity of fire we thought that an attack would shortly be made on this section of our line and had just decided that a few of us who were left—seven was all we could muster here—could not hope to do very much to stem it, when a shell burst among us, killing or wounding all of us who were left with the exception of Major Draper, who escaped with a bad shaking. Up to this, the colonel's cheery voice had always been heard whenever a shell or bomb burst near, calling 'are you all right, captain' and I would answer 'yes, sir, are you'. I was not badly hurt and called out 'are you all right sir.' Getting no answer I felt over for the colonel and found him lying unconscious, but breathing faintly.

"I cannot attempt to tell you how we got our dearly loved commanding officer out of the fire from across the firing to the wood for about 100 yards, till we got into a communication trench which afforded a little more shelter than the one we had left, and where there was a chance of getting help, or how we escaped further injury on the way, continually torn up as it was with bursting shells, and littered with a mass of fallen trees, fallen telephone wires, and hundreds of shell holes.

"The casket was made by the pioneers, and your brother was buried with full military honours the same day at 6 p.m., in a new military cemetery at Poperinghe. Service was conducted by the chaplain of the 3rd Division, Maj A. W. Woods."

Picnic Season in Full Swing

This has been a busy week in the picnic line and excursions have been scheduled for practically every day this week, both up the lakes and down the river. The lovely weather lately has been a great incentive for many to resurrect the family lunch basket and to depart for the shadier precincts of the Otonabee or of Rice Lake, in order to spend the day in quiet seclusion under the friendly shade there.

This city certainly has an advantage over many of her sister cities, in the fact that she is blessed with an excellent navigation route, whither the tired out citizen can flee whenever he finds city life and city atmosphere becoming overly oppressive.

Deserter From Toronto Unit

At this morning's Police Court a Toronto man was charged with being a deserter, from the 204th Battalion and His Worship ordered him to be held and delivered over to the proper military authorities. The deserter was arrested in this city last evening, having taken "French leave" for a few days in order to spend a honeymoon with a wife whom he had lately taken unto himself. He was in the civilian clothes when arrested, having left the khaki at "mothers" in Toronto. The local police are now communicating with military headquarters in Toronto to have him returned to the Queen City.

OTTAWA WAR TAX BALANCE UNPAID

City Insists Province Pay Debt to Ottawa Before Latter Send Money to Toronto

OTTAWA, July 5.—The City of Ottawa has not yet paid the final instalment of the 1915 war tax to the provincial government, and from present indications has no intention of paying it until a counter claim which it has against the Ontario authorities is settled.

Ottawa's war tax bill for last year on the basis of one mill on the gross assessment amounted to $113,000. Of this amount $95,000 was paid promptly—$55,000 in the first instalment and $40,000 in the second, leaving $18,000 still unpaid. The province has been disputing the city for this money with the persistency of an Irish tailor with a delinquent customer, and the city has replied by demning the provincial treasury for its share of the police court fines, which it claims has not been paid since 1909.

The amount said to be due the city by the province is around $16,000. So far as can be learned no explanation has been received as to why the money has not been paid.

A question asked in civic circles to-day was whether the province could force the city to pay the war tax without first meeting its obligations to the civic corporation. It was stated that the matter may have to be threshed out in the courts.

Many Positions Are Captured By The French

in this region has been such that they must pause to bring up guns of all calibres before attempting a further advance.

Though artillery preparation is being hailed by heavy rains during the last two days, these rains at times have reached proportions of cloudbursts and greatly delayed movements of artillery.

CAPTURE OF ESTREES

The third point is the extension of the advance to the south which has been held up by the exceedingly strong German position at Estrees. This southern offensive is essential in order not to limit the advance to a dangerously narrow front. Estrees is a town of one street with a double row of thick stone-walled houses extending two kilometres along an old Roman road from Amiens to St. Quentin.

It lies in such a position that it is pointed like an arrow toward the French advance. The Germans had turned every house into a fort with walls strengthened by sandbags and mitrailleuse concealed at every corner.

During the first few days of fighting it was impossible for the French to take the town. With the capture of Assevillers the position at Estrees was endangered by the Germans. The French advanced to the outskirts of the town, then dropped the attack for a time while they advanced from Assevillers and seized Hill 85.

This position gave them Belloy-en-Santerre, and the French then had Estrees on the flank, so that the Germans were compelled to give up the town without securing any advantage from their elaborate fortifications.

The seizure of Estrees puts the French in an advantageous flanking position on this salient. The German line extends in the direction of Roye and Lassigny. Reduction of this salient would throw the railroad into French possession.

NORTH OF THE SOMME.

North of the Somme French forces are in contact with the German second line, which extends from through Clery, Maurepas and Beaucourt. In front of the second German line, and extending about half-way between Maurets and Combles, there is a point north of Pozieres, there is an extremely strong German supporting position.

It is this position which the British now are facing and which they must take before they can come up with the French advance north of the Somme. They passed the southern end of this position when they took Maurets, and the capture of Thiepval will carry them by it on the north. At La Boisselle and Ovillers, however, they are directly in face of the German position, which has been made a fortress.

Although the British advance has not been as rapid as that of the French, they are doing valuable work in holding many German battalions before them, thus aiding the French work south of the Somme.

THE FRENCH ADVANCE A REMARKABLE ONE

Only at the Beginning of The Battle is One German Comment on Recent Events

LONDON, July 5.—The Central News correspondent at Amsterdam says the Frankfurter Zeitung refers to the French advance on Peronne as "remarkable" and continues:

"We know we are only at the beginning of the battle. The first pushes usually are dangerous, but it stands to reason that the introduction of very important reserves by the attacking armies, which is to be expected to a certainty, will impose a very heavy task on the defenders. There is no question that the British will attempt to profit in their new offensive by the experience they gained through failure at the battle of Loos."

The Berliner Tageblatt's correspondent at the German headquarters says the fighting north of the Somme has lessened the prospects of the entente allies for a quick and systematic advance.

The Volks Zeitung of Cologne says that in the widest circle of the German people the feeling prevails that if the allied offensive is held up Germany will hearten a great deal.

VALVE AT LOCK REFUSES TO WORK

The steamers Stoney Lake and Manita were held up last evening above the lift lock owing to the fact that one of the valves in the Lock refused to work. Each deposited their crowds above the Lift Lock, and the steamers made the rest of the trip to the new wharf early this morning, after the valve was repaired.

WEDDING BELLS

VICTOR—PRINDLE.

A pretty wedding took place yesterday afternoon at the Park street Baptist church, when Mr. James Victor, the youngest son of Mrs. Victor, 207 Stewart street, was united in marriage to Miss Myrtle Prindle, the youngest daughter of Mrs. Prindle, 372 Queen street. The bride was daintily dressed in white silk. Mr. W. Prindle gave the bride away, and Miss Jessie Victor looked charming as chief bridesmaid. After the ceremony the party proceeded to the house of the bride, where the wedding breakfast took place. Among the guests present were Mrs. S. Prindle, Mrs. Prindle, Miss E. Prindle, Miss Hobbins, Mrs. S. A. Victor, Mrs. G. Bidley, Mr. E. Coleback, Mr. D. Nicols and Sgt. Peter Victor.

After the breakfast the whole party motored to the C.P.R. station to see the newly married couple off on their honeymoon trip.

Arrest Six Men Carrying Body of Girl in Car

SALEM, Mass., July 6.—Six men were arrested here early Wednesday with the body of a woman lying on the floor of the tonneau of their car. They were taken to the police station and booked on the charge of being accessories to an illegal operation. One of the men gave his name as former Representative Charles O'Connell of Peabody. The woman was identified as Margaret Ward.

The Boston police were asked to scour Roxbury for the doctor who is believed to have performed the operation. The other five men with former-Representative O'Connell were: James O'Connell of Lynn, brother of the ex-representative; George A. Bardwell of the U. S. S. Kearsarge. Daniel J. Dineen of Salem, William Conlin, Salem; Thomas Sexton of Peabody.

The arrests were made when a patrolman was attracted by the peculiar movement by the auto in front of the home of Police Sergeant C. A. R. Duffee, who, upon being awakened, identified the dead woman as his sister-in-law. According to the police Miss Ward died after having been placed in the machine.

Later Charles O'Connell, Bardwell and Sexton were released under bonds of $2,000 each.

Miss Ward was 26 years old and had been employed recently in a Peabody store.

Shortly after his release former Representative O'Connell declared that his only connection with the party of men arrested was that of legal adviser.

She was slightly damaged but returned to her harbour.

GASTRONOMIC MARVELS THOSE HUNS IN FRONT LINE TRENCHES

BRITISH HEADQUARTERS, France, July 5.—British soldiers who have explored dug-outs of Mametz have discovered many evidences of Teutonic love of comfort, their underground dwellings are palatial and the amount of food and drink found in them is prodigious.

The certified inventory of one of these habitations occupied by a captain shows that his provender included twenty tins of corned beef in addition to sausages, potted meats, tinned salmon, dried and bottled fruits, canned vegetables, numerous kinds of biscuits and several whole cheeses. He also had in the cellar below his dug-out two casks of Bavarian beer, whiskey, gin and five dozen bottles of mineral water.

LONDON, July 6.—Casement's appeal has been set for July 15. Five judges will hear the arguments.

LONDON, July 6.—At the request of the Minister of Munitions Lloyd George, the Scottish miners have agreed to postpone all their July holidays.

Submarine Policy Is To Be More Drastic

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 6.—Evidence that Germany is preparing for a more drastic submarine warfare was obtained from the crew of two fishing smacks landed to-day after their vessels had been submarined. The German U-boat commander invited the crews aboard his vessel before sinking the two ships.

"We realise that England is keeping this war going," he said. "And we are out now to do all the damage we can before the end of the war."

Excursion of Ladies' Aid

The steamer Stoney Lake left the George Street wharf to-day with a large excursion, that of St. Andrew's Church Ladies' Aid. A large crowd took advantage of the lovely weather to enjoy the long sail down the river and across Rice Lake to Gore's Landing.

OLD SOL FRIENDLY TO CITY CLERKS

This afternoon is the first Thursday half-holiday and George Street business houses have closed their doors to the purchasing public. Things in general along the main thoroughfare have taken on an aspect admirably suited to Goldsmith's "Deserted Village," and would remind one of the streets of Calais after an aeroplane attack.

The weatherman will doubtless receive a heartfelt blessing from Peterborough clerks for the excellent condition of the atmosphere, and the majority will no doubt spend the remainder of the day along the shores or upon the cool bosom of the Otonabee. More industrious ones may be found perhaps in the proverbial garden, curious as to what the soil will yield them this season, while the cool verandah, comfortable hammock and latest novel will be recreation and solace enough for others.

456,000 Bushels of Wheat Sunk

STEAMER GOES DOWN AFTER A COLLISION.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., July 5. — The steamer Charles W. Hutchinson, with a cargo of 456,000 bushels of wheat from Fort William for Buffalo, sank off the Cedar Reef in the Upper St. Mary's River, on Sunday, after being in collision with the steamer Lyman C. Smith. The Smith returned to the Soo with her stem smashed flat, and the forepeak full of water. No one was injured.

Owing to a heavy fog a number of steamers were bunched at anchor in the river waiting for the mist to lift.

When the steamers finally started to pass in, the Neilson of Pittsburg, according to both Captains Pierce of the Smith, and Powell of the Hutchinson, took a course between the other steamers bound respectively up and down. In attempting to avert an accident, the Smith barely scraped the Neilson, but hit the Hutchinson on the port side abreast the pilot house, and opening up a hole about eight feet from the upper deck to far below the water line.

Captain Powell beached his steamer on the Canadian side in about 25 feet of water. A diver is repairing the vessel. The Smith carried a cargo of 12,000 tons of hard coal.

ONTARIO GRAIN CROP POOR.

Quebec, Nova Scotia, and New Brunswick Suffered from Rain— West Good, But Late.

Ottawa, July 5.—A bulletin issued by the Department of Trade and Commerce, census and statistics office, states that from reports received from experimental farms and stations in all parts of the country the prospects for grain crops are excellent throughout the West, but as the crops are about ten days later than last year much will depend upon freedom from early frosts.

In Quebec abundant rains throughout the month of June have favoured the growth, but low-lying lands have suffered. The same reports are made of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, while in Prince Edward Island exceptionally good progress has been made.

In Ontario about one-third less grain was sown than in previous years, and in condition it is uneven, spotted and badly affected by rain. A great deal will not ripen, and will be cut for green feed.

Generally speaking, the Western crops are looking well, with plenty of moisture.

In the Medicine Hat region of Alberta the wheat is very uneven, but the fall wheat is already heading. Yields will up to the average are expected, providing early frosts do not cause damage.

Gates of Campbellford Locks To Be Installed in Short Time

For the past week contractors on the Trent Canal have been at work preparing to place the lock gates on the various locks from Frankford to Campbellford, and on Dominion Day they brought the big derrick required to hang the gates, up as far as Bradley Bay. The gates of the lock at Bradley Bay were hung on Tuesday and it is expected that the gates on the locks near the paper mill will be in place at the end of this or the beginning of next week.

Arrangements are being made with the Grand Trunk Railway and it is quite probable that in the course of another few weeks one of the spans of the railway bridge at Campbellford will be lifted out of place and the gates and dredges required to finish the work will be brought through the bridge and up to Healey Falls, hanging the gates on the town locks as they go up. When the gates at Healey Falls are hung navigation will be open from Lake Ontario up the canal through Peterborough, Lindsay, and as far as Orillia on Lake Couchiching. A few more months will be required to clean up a few odd jobs and get everything into working shape.

The locks on the Trent Canal are 175 feet long, 33 feet wide and 6 feet deep, and they are capable of passing up very fair sized boats, boats capable of carrying as large a cargo as a double-header on the Grand Trunk line through Campbellford can draw.

As some of the citizens of Campbellford will be interested in the hanging of the gates in town, it is of interest to note that some of the larger gates weigh fifty tons apiece. They are made of sticks of Douglas Fir three feet square, bound together with iron plates and bolts and shod with brass castings.

The derrick required to lift these large gates is a steel pontoon and weighs over 900 tons. It draws seven feet of water light and handles a fifty-ton gate very easily. It was built a few years ago at Welland, Ont., and during its trial turned upside down in the Welland Canal, owing to the chains on the test load breaking away. It was quite a difficult job to resurrect the derrick from its bed in the bottom of the canal.

MILLBROOK WILL MISS MISS DOLBY

Miss Dolby, who has been the competent and courteous book-keeper and clerk for Mr. Geo. E. Burnham for four years, has resigned, and leaves for Peterborough, where she intends to take a well-earned holiday for some weeks. We feel that we voice the opinion of the whole community when we state that Miss Dolby will be regretfully missed. Always cheerful and interested in her dealings with the public in the store and a willing helper in all social, religious and patriotic affairs, there are few indeed more deserving of "that good name which is above all riches" than our departing favourite. May that smile that ever beams brightly on her face, still long remain to cheer and encourage those whom she may come in contact with elsewhere and may we not unseldom see it radiating amongst us in the coming days. —Millbrook Reporter.

Ten Thousand Teutons Captured On The Eastern Front

RUSSIANS ARE ONLY SEVENTY MILES FROM LEMBERG

General Outlook For Crops Here Is Favourable

Only Danger is That Early Frost May Injure Wheat

Russians Penetrate The German Trenches Near Riga Capturing Prisoners

War Office Announces The Capture Yesterday of Over Ten Thousand Teutons of Whom Five Thousand Were Taken on the Dniester Front---Italians Successful in the Adige Valley and Other Points.

ON THE WESTERN FRONT

PETROGRAD, July 7.—After terrific fighting the Russians penetrated the German first line trenches near Riga capturing prisoners and machine guns. At other points the Russians are shelling Von Hindenburg's line and a general advance into Northern Germany is due any time.

PETROGRAD— July 7.—The War Office announces the capture yesterday of over ten thousand Teutons of whom five thousand were taken on the Dniester front.

The latest haul of prisoners puts the total since the big offensive began to nearly 240,000, about 20,000 having been taken in the last four or five days.

ITALIAN SUCCESS.

ROME, July 7.—Latest reports indicate fresh progress in the Adige Valley and other points. The enemy is abandoning much war material.

An official statement says: "Our offensive was continued on Wednesday in the Lagarina and Sugana valleys. In the Adige Valley and the upper Astico Basin we obliged the enemy to withdraw from a commanding position they had previously prepared to defend. On the Asiago plateau our artillery is active. In the Campelle valley the enemy evacuated Massif and Prima Lunetta, abandoning much war material.

"On the balance of the front to the sea there were artillery duels, except in the region of San Martino, where the enemy made an attack with gas, and east of Selz, where attacks against positions recently taken by us were repelled."

SHELLING THE GERMANS.

LONDON, July 7.—Allied infantry on the western front is still holding tight, while the artillery is shelling the Germans with great effect.

TWENTY-ONE GERMAN SHIPS LOST.

LONDON, July 7.—In Admiral Jellicoe's vivid story of the Jutland fight he says that twenty-one German ships were lost. The German ships fought well, but British metal and skill proved superior.

DEATH BY DROWNING WAS THE VERDICT

LINDSAY, July 7.—Death by drowning on Saturday July 1st, was the verdict rendered by the inquest held Wednesday evening in the council chamber in connection with the death of Richard Dovey, whose body was found in the Scugog Tuesday night.

Dr Blanchard, Coroner, presided and County Crown Attorney Stinson was present in the interests of the Crown.

Chief Short told of the discovery of the body, and Mr. John Hennessy told of the deceased's visit to his house on Saturday evening shortly before nine o'clock. Dr. Collison, who made an examination of the body, told of its condition and also stated that no marks of violence were visible. The man came to his death from drowning.

Peterboro Boy Shot at Barriefield By a Sentry

Robert Russel Elliot Met a Tragic Death Last Evening—Investigation Ordered—Sentry Has Been Placed Under Arrest.

FUNERAL IN PETERBORO

Robert Russell Elliott, son of Mr. Robert Elliott, 195 Reid street, who a few weeks ago joined the 74th Battery, was shot by a sentry at Barriefield last evening. He died a short time afterwards. The sentry was placed under arrest and an investigation ordered. It is stated that Elliott was visiting some friends in another unit, stationed at the big war camp and that upon his return, failed for some reason or other to comply with the formalities as required by the sentry, with the above result. The remains will be brought to Peterborough for burial.

Deceased is one of four brothers who have joined the colours. Two brothers, Lance Corporal Lewis H. Elliott and Private Gordon Ross Elliott are with the 93rd Battalion, while the fourth brother, Lance Corporal Walter W. Elliott, enlisted one year ago in the 39th Battalion and was subsequently transferred to the 25th. He has been in the trenches for several months. A fifth brother, who is only eleven years of age, is at home. Deceased came from Toronto purposely to enlist here with the Battery.

Lieut. Col. W. R. Smyth, M.P. For Algoma.—Commissioned to raise the new 236th Forestry Battalion. He wants bushmen, lumber-mill workers, loggers, teamsters and young farmers, to join this non-combatant unit and his recruiting area is from Ontario's eastern boundary to the Pacific Coast. The physician's standard for the battalion has been eased up and the age limit extended to 45. Col. Smith is at present touring the western provinces establishing recruiting depots. He expects a record for recruiting and plans to take the battalion overseas in September.

Girl, Taunted About Kiss, Tries to Die

Chicago, July 7.—Because her girl friends taunted her with letting a boy kiss her, Lydi Silverman, sixteen, of No. 66 Montgomery street, attempted suicide yesterday by drinking an oz. of diluted spirits of camphor. She was found a moment later by Jennie Schumann, a friend.

Miss Schumann ran screaming out of the building and attracted the attention of Abraham Schoinberg, a Columbia student, who administered restoratives. Miss Silverman will recover.

Mice in Trolley Car Start Feminine Panic

Portland, Oregon, July 7.—Forty high school girls, stenographers and other women on their way to Portland were thrown into a panic when two mice invaded the street car.

In the confusion two girls fainted, several tried to leap from the car, and a number suffered bruises and scratches. After five minutes of feminine screaming, mostly from safe places on the tops of the seats, two men caught the mice and the car moved on.

When the man's velvet collar on his coat is soiled rub briskly with alcohol. It will look like new Peppery Captain of Boston Braves Apologised, But in Vain.

NEW YORK, July 7. — President John K. Tener, of the National League, announced that he had indefinitely suspended Capt. Johnny Evers of the Boston Club. The league executive stated that the penalty was inflicted as a result of the scene created at Boston recently by Evers when he was called out on strikes. Evers telegraphed an apology to league headquarters for his actions and remarks, but Tener refused to pass the incident without a reprimand and suspension.

The Canadian Patent Office
—Recognizing Something New

Has Granted a Patent, Both on the Form of Flake and Process of Manufacture of

New Post Toasties

This remarkable recognition—no other corn flake on the market has achieved it—marks this new food as something distinctly different from "corn flakes" of the past

What is This Difference?

Compare New Post Toasties with the average corn flake—observe the tiny "bubbles" which cover their surface. These bubbles are caused by a new method of cooking, rolling and toasting under quick, intense heat.

By this process the true corn flavor is developed in all its sweetness. Eaten dry they are a delicious morsel. With cream or milk they are a revelation to the taste. Note the "substance" of New Post Toasties. Unlike old-style "corn flakes" they do not crumble or "chaff" in the package, and do not mush down under milk or cream. They are wonderfully delicious.

New Post Toasties come to you direct from the giant ovens of our great factories, untouched by human hand and triply sealed in a moisture-proof container which preserves their fresh Golden Goodness for your table.

WHY PEOPLE FEEL DEPRESSED IN THE COLD WEATHER

Why is tiredness and langour so prevalent just now? A physician explained that the cold of winter drives blood from the surface of the body to the liver. Normally one-fourth of the whole blood supply is in the liver, and when more blood is accumulated in that organ everything goes wrong.

No better remedy exists than Dr. Hamilton's Pills which are composed of such vegetable extracts as Mandrake and Butternut, and possess wonderful liver stimulating powers. It's a marvel the way Hamilton's Pills clear the blood of the poisonous humours. They put new life into worn out bodies, build up the appetite, bring back a reserve of nerve energy, tide folks over the cold days of winter and the depressing days of spring. For your health and body comfort get a 25c. box of Dr. Hamilton's Pills to-day.

BRUCE GAVE FIRST COUNTY BATTALION

Scotch From Detroit and Germans Thronged Col. Weir's Unit—Where and How Voluntarism Succeeded

The secretary of the Walkerton Old Boys' association estimates that in every block in Detroit, there is at least one native of Bruce county, Ontario. The chances are about even that any hustling young man by the name of McGregor or McTavish or McPherson you meet in the Michigan city, came from Ripley, Kincardine or Walkerton. Some of them have not remained in Detroit. They came back to fill the ranks of Bruce's overseas battalion, and that is one of the reasons the 160th recruited to full establishment the most quickly of all the county battalions. The Scotch haven't a monopoly on the 160th, for strange to say, a big percentage of the regiment's strength is recruited from the German-Canadians of Hanover, Mildmay or Wiarton. But it is not too much to say that the Scots became the backbone of the battalion.

Knew His County

After Bruce county had sent hundreds of her sons to the fighting line the call came in November, 1915, for a battalion of 1,250 men, to be recruited within the boundaries of the county and to be officered by Bruce county officers. Lieutenant-Colonel A. Weir was appointed officer commanding and he set about in an energetic fashion to disprove the common belief that Bruce could not supply 1,250 men by the voluntary system. Nobody knew better than the colonel the military possibilities of the district assigned to him, for in 1881 he entered the ranks of the Thirty-second Bruce battalion and held every rank from private to colonel since that time. He knew where to expect the biggest enlistment and where to apply the greatest pressure. He also knew where he could get a staff of competent officers, from the former Bruce boys now located in all parts of the continent.

Major From Kentucky

Colonel Weir went to the United States for his second in command, Major Moffat. The major had been a soldier all his life. He is a veteran of the Spanish American War and has held important military posts in Kentucky. He was inspector-general of the state militia there. Major Moffat is the inventor of a hand grenade now being used in the fighting on the west front. It is constructed on the same principle as a shrapnel shell, timed to burst automatically five seconds after it leaves the thrower's hand. Colonel Weir and Major Moffat proved an excellent recruiting team. The 160th was organized long after most of the county battalions in Ontario, but by May, 1916, 1,250 men and officers mobilized at Walkerton, in addition to a base company of 100 men to which newly-enlisted men are constantly being attached.

TRAINING THE SOLDIERS

Sim Vaughan of Tigers Helped Keep Comrades Fit

J. E. S. Vaughan, commonly known as "Sim," one of the most widely known and best trainers in Canada, enlisted for active overseas duty with the 205th Sportsmen's Battalion. "Sim" was connected with the Tiger Football Club for fourteen years as trainer, and when the new Tiger war team was organized he decided that he would continue to be a Tiger in the new role of soldiering. He is an old athlete of fame, and many years ago was continually before the eyes of the public as a baseball player, boxer and trainer of athletes, boxers and wrestlers. He took a prominent part in semi-pro. boxing bouts and gained considerable notoriety. He also played with the Dominions and Ontarios in the southwestern league for four years as a pitcher. Sim Vaughan is probably better known as a trainer than an athlete. He trained the world-renowned sprinter, Bobby Kerr, who joined the 205th Sportsmen's Battalion as adjutant; Harry Fraser, Andy Wilson, long-distance runner, and Gordon Glennie. He also trained Charles Conkie, the world's greatest wrestler at his weight; Pee Wee Osler, 115-pound amateur champion, and Bobby Wilson, who won the international light-weight championship. As a baseball trainer "Sim" worked in connection with Page's International team in 1905 and Knotty Lee's team in 1912-13.

VAIN TURKISH ALIBI

Blame For Massacres Hypocritically Laid Upon Armenians

A correspondent of the London Chronicle describes the Turkish massacres in Armenia as follows: The Armenian massacres, in which it is feared that from 800,000 to 1,000,000 victims have perished, or are destined to perish, in exile, represent the wholesale extermination of a race. That perhaps a quarter of a million escaped to Transcaucasia does not alter the fact that the Young Turks intended to make away with them en bloc with the exception of the Armenian colonies of Constantinople, Smyrna, and one or two other ports. The reasons, alleged by their executioners were that the Armenians had been incited to revolt by the Entente Powers, in co-operation with the Russian offensive movement; that their wholesale deportation was a measure dictated by imperative military necessity, and that repressive measures were not undertaken against the Armenians until June, when they rose in Van and other places in the war zone and joined hands with the enemy.

As a matter of fact, the deportation of Armenians from places widely removed from the theatre of war commenced as early as April, and synchronized with the systematic massacre of most of the able-bodied males, so that at one blow the remainer of the population were deprived of their natural defenders. The residue consisting for the most part of old men, women and children, were uprooted from their homes and sent across Asia Minor, the great majority on foot, until such as survived reached their destinations in the deserts of Syria. The tortured progress of these unfortunates, at the mercy of their brutal gendarme escorts or of the savage Kurdish tribes who attacked them on the road, affords one of the most poignant pages in history.

The present writer, who spent two years in Armenia, in an official position, can safely say that, even in normal times, their condition was altogether unendurable. They were treated as a subject and inferior race, and could get neither justice nor protection. Their only hope lay in internal reform, a vain hope, never realized in the face of determined Turkish opposition. Nor could they look for external help, as could the Greeks and Bulgars, to rescue them from Turkish tyranny.

Curfew at 6.15 P.M.

The precautions against air raids necessitated the alteration at Chester of a centuries-old custom. Since the distant days of the Norman Conquest the curfew at Chester has been rung, without, it is believed, a break, from 8.50 p.m. to 9 p.m. each night. For the dark months, however, it rang at 6.15 p.m., and then, as the days lengthened, the time was advanced until the traditional hour was reached.

WOMEN OF CANADA.

Fort Coulonge, Quebec.—"I am happy to tell you that your medicine did me wonderful good. I was troubled with weakness and I tried wines and other things but received very little benefit. I was young at the time and knew very little about medicines till a lady friend came to me with a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I became strong and a year afterward had twins."—Mrs. J. BRADY, Fort Coulonge, Quebec.

Thousands of women right here in Canada who are now blessed with robust health cannot understand why thousands of other women continue to worry and suffer when they can obtain for a trifling sum Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which will surely and quickly banish all pain, distress and misery and restore the womanly health.

Young mothers who preserve the charms of face and figure in spite of an increasing family and the care of growing children are always to be envied. "Favorite Prescription" gives the strength and health upon which happy motherhood depends. It enables the mother to nourish the infant life depending on her, and enjoy the happiness of watching the development of a perfectly healthy child.

A GREAT BOOK THAT EVERY WOMAN SHOULD HAVE.

Over a million copies of the "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser" are now in the hands of the people. It is a book that everyone should have and read in case of accident or sickness.

Send fifty cents (or stamps) for mailing charges to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., and enclose this notice and you will receive by return mail, all charges and customs duty prepaid, this valuable book.

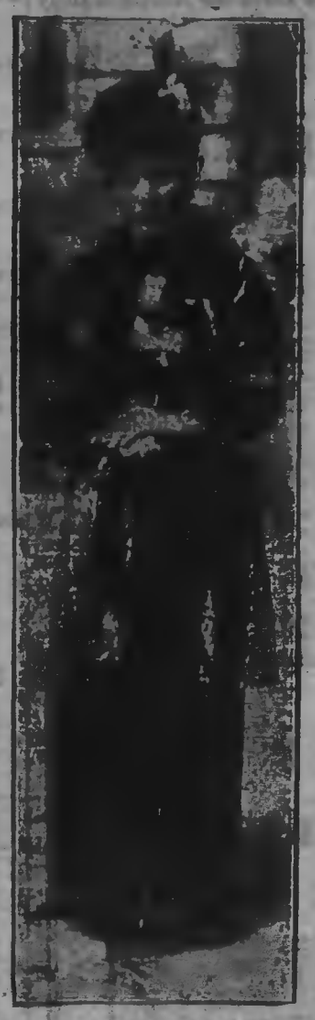
WOMAN HAD NERVOUS TROUBLE

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her.

West Danby, N. Y.—"I have had nervous trouble all my life until I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for nerves and for female troubles and it straightened me out in good shape. I work nearly all the time, as we live on a farm and I have four girls. I do all my sewing and other work with their help, so it shows that I stand it real well. I took the Compound when my ten year old daughter came and it helped me a lot. I have also had my oldest girl take it and it did her lots of good. I keep it in the house all the time and recommend it."—Mrs. DEWITT SINCERAUGH, West Danby, N. Y.

Sleeplessness, nervousness, irritability, backache, headaches, dragging sensations, all point to female derangements which may be overcome by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

This famous remedy, the medicinal ingredients of which are derived from native roots and herbs, has for forty years proved to be a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism. Women everywhere bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.



ON ROSE DAY.—Queen Alexandra as she appeared on Rose Day just before starting her tour.

FEARED HE WOULD BE AN ANGEL.

"Three years' penal servitude," had been the verdict of the Court, and the prisoner was hailed away. That night his wife sat alone in her 'poor little home,' and sobbed so bitterly that a kindly neighbour ventured to go in. She knew that the erring man had often beaten his wife and sponged her slender earnings as a charwoman, so she could not understand the tears. "Don't take on so, Mrs. Smith," she pleaded, as she gently stroked the weeper's tousled hair. "Three years seems a long time, but perhaps your husband will come back before then. Prisoners, you know, can reduce their sentences by good behaviour." The mourning wife gave a great gulp to swallow her sobs and then replied: "That's just it! An' my 'usband can be a perfect hangel when he likes!"

BIG LOSS FOR TAGESZEITUNG

Newspaper Champion of U-Boat Warfare Can't Make Expenses.

LONDON, July 5.—A Reuter despatch from Copenhagen says that at a general meeting of the shareholders of the Deutsche Tageszeitung of Berlin, a report showed that the newspaper finished its business year with a loss of 87,000 marks. The Tageszeitung is the chief organ of the agrarians and the submarine extremists. Hitherto it has enjoyed the distinction of being the only newspaper to show a large profit during the first five months of the war.

Its returns for the first year of the war also showed a handsome surplus, but the last few months showed an immense decrease in the popularity of Count Reventlow's doctrines, and accordingly swallowed the previous profits but put Count Reventlow in the worst deficit during the newspaper's existence.

KEEPING SEAS SAFE

Night Life of British Tars, Longing For Battle

An English writer gives the following description of scenes and feelings aboard a man-of-war during the long night watches of war time: Eight bells—midnight—and the calling of the watch. Men who have snatched a few hours sleep wrapped in blankets on the hard deck relieve their comrades at the guns, and the relieved ones forget for four hours that such things as destroyers even exist.

About two the cook and his mates appear like kindly genii from the recesses of the galley with steaming kettles of grateful and comforting cocoa and corned beef sandwiches, whereby to fortify the inner man on deck. It does not take long to discuss this frugal meal, and those who smoke long keenly for a moonlight night, when they may smoke, or dawn, when destroyers need no escort to guide them. And through the whole of the darkness one can hear the low-toned hum of voices as men discuss the chances of leave, or of getting a mail within a reasonable time, or the last consignment of magazines sent them from home.

And in their heart of hearts each of the men almost prays for a night attack, a glimpsing of a dark, shadowy form out there in the blackness; the splutter of a searchlight, and then scores of others, until a flotilla of hastening, black destroyers is shown vividly up; the hell of gunfire, the madness of pouring shells through the guns as fast as they can be loaded; the terrors and thrills of seeing first one opponent and then another stop dead in her tracks, waiting for the end, with perhaps a deep-bass accompaniment as a torpedo or two explodes down the line; the hastening of boats to the rescue; the totting up of the losses.

Almost every man tries to persuade himself that he would welcome some night of this description as a relief to the hundreds of nights he has spent doing exactly the same thing—watching and waiting for the enemy that never comes. Four o'clock, and change of men once more. More yarns, more grumbles—a few minor ones about the "daily war"—and then, at long last, dawn.

And the same boatswain's mate who piped the men to stations for night defence draws out his whistle once more, and rushes along the deck, shrilling with all the might of his well-trained lungs.

"Unrig night defence! Open all scuttles and deadlights! Hands prepare ship for day action!" The smoky voice-pipes are unrigged and coiled neatly away; the spare ammunition is returned to its magazines and shell rooms; and the great turrets are cast loose, ready for an immediate drill, which may come at any time during the day. Hose-pipes make their appearance, brooms and scrubbers make the deck snowy and sweet once more, and the long North Sea night is over.

Truly, not a very exciting night—a dull, monotonous, soul-wearying space of time, when men's thoughts turn to home and those they love; when the people of our isle sleep safe in their beds o' nights, just because the Sure Shield of the Empire is out there, doing its duty silently and without fuss, guarding the inland shore, "that the people of our Empire may in peace and quietness. . . dwell in their homes, without fear of the ruthless invader."

HISTORY REPEATING ITSELF

(By Joseph Hocking)

More than a hundred years ago, when Napoleon threw a black shadow over Europe, the liberties of the whole Continent were threatened. But the faith and dogged pluck of the army and navy, of the men who followed Wellington and Nelson, saved us and saved Europe then. To-day the liberties and well-being of Europe are again threatened. History is, indeed, repeating itself, and the England who fought for the liberty of the world at the beginning of the nineteenth century is again fighting for the liberty of the world at the beginning of the twentieth. Napoleon was crushed, his dreams were shattered, his great army became fugitive, and his bombastic threatenings were of no more weight than the anger of a spoiled child. What England was, English is; we have not lost the resolution, the foresight, the power of execution, nor the faith, which has made our nation great. We have still the same strong arm, the same keen eye, the same brave heart, the same clear brain, as when our cause was, as it is to-day, the liberty and the well-being of the world.

Thought it. Stuttered—"What time is it?" asked his wife suspiciously as he returned in the early hours of the morning. "About one." Just then the clock struck three. "Gracious! when did that clock commence to stutter?"

Another A.S.S. One.—A schoolmaster once wrote his initials, "A.S." on the flyleaf of one of his books. One of the boys, who got hold of the book, added a second S; but the master discovered the addition, and, knowing who had made it, handed the book back to the boy with the words, "I wish you would not write your name in my book."

Another "Long Way".—A gentleman had an Irishman in his employ who was noted for having dirty boots. Odd day the gentleman asked him why he hadn't cleaned them. "Well, sora," said Pat, "Oi quite forgot. For see, sorr, wan's memory is situated it wan's head, an' it's a powerful long way to remember from yer head to yer feet.

HE DETERMINED TO 'WAIT AND SEE."

This was heard at a Glasgow tramway station:

First Male: "Well, my car does not seem to be coming; I shall get on."

Second Male: "At least three have gone by while we my way."

First Male: "Why did you miss them?"

Second Male: "Oh, I'm waiting for the one with the pretty conductor."

And then the first male set out to tramp homewards.

Decline in Birth Rate is Aggravated by Toll of War

A Correspondent writes from Berlin, Germany, to a neutral paper as follows: German thrift and energy may win back the billions of marks lost in the war, but a danger is gnawing at the very heart of the German people—the birth rate is dwindling and German professors and social economists have argued for years, referring to France, that a declining birth rate is the infallible sign of the decadence of a people. So far the number of births in Germany is higher than the number of deaths, but for years the surplus has been steadily decreasing. The danger is approaching, slowly, inexorably, step by step. Unless something extraordinary happens the moment will come when the population of Germany will cease to grow.

During the war, when more than a million of German young men, prospective fathers, have lost their lives on the shambles of the battlefields, the problem of how to stop the declining birth rate looms up larger than ever. You hear it discussed everywhere. Aside from the war, Germany would have had 560,000 more births annually if the birth rate had not declined since 1900. Had it remained as it was then Germany to-day would have had nearly three million more inhabitants than she actually has.

Unimous as legislators and social economists are in agreeing that the evil must be fought and a remedy be found, they differ as widely in regard to the reasons to which they attribute the evil and, in regard to the remedies which they suggest. The conservative classes and their representatives in the legislatures are denouncing what they call the increasing lack of morals among the middle classes and among high society, whose women refuse to fulfil their most sacred duty towards their country—that of becoming mothers. The social democrats, on the other side, maintain that the problem is an economic, not a moral, one and say that nothing is more natural than that married people, dreading to see their offspring become part of the increasing proletariat, should endeavor to limit the number of their children.

Party Lines Broken by Crisis, Observes Great Roumanian

M. Take Jonescu, in the Roumanian Parliament said: "In other countries this extraordinary gravity has caused the frame in which normal life was conducted to fall asunder. Thus you have seen in Belgium a Socialist leader, Vandervelde, enter a Catholic government; a Socialist in whose words King Albert reposed complete confidence when he opposed the miserable invasion of his country. The same in France, where we see, side by side, Combes and the Catholic Cochin; where on the same ministerial bench are to be found the Moderates of yesterday, and the uncompromising Socialist Guesde. And in fortunate England, protected from all invasions by the sea, in England, the very home of party politics, we find Unionists, Liberals and members of the Labor party co-operating in the same Cabinet. How, gentlemen, have these things been possible? Why has the frame of normal life been so broken as to make it necessary to find fresh modes of action? Because events are of such importance as to make it impossible for them to fit into old formulas.

THE LATEST WEAPON

Italy is Using it Against the Austrian Troops

There have been many extraordinary weapons used in this war, but perhaps one of the strangest is the use of the avalanche as a weapon of offence. This has already been done on the Italian front. Italian troops reach the summit of a mountain, and below them in the valley lie the Austrian armies. The Italians place a land mine deep in the earth, explode it, and a terrific avalanche is the result, which hurtles down the mountain side, completely blotting out a certain number of enemy troops. These artificially produced avalanches are particularly useful in destroying railways and roads and preventing the movements of the troops. It is estimated that besides the tremendous damage to property, the Austrians have lost 1,000 men by this means.

WON BRIDE IN FRANCE

Canadian D.C.M. Learns to Lisp New Language

The publication "Canada" narrates the following interesting love story: Learning to lisp his first few French words guided by the laughing lips and admonished by the threatening finger of a dark-eyed demoiselle of Lille, and later espousing more than the language of her country, was the experience of a young Canadian hero, Private Peter William Houghton, D.C.M. He first met his teacher at Loos, where she was a refugee, and he married her at St. Helens, Lancashire. The bride was Mlle. Jeanne Elise Torrez, of Bailleul, France, from which town she and her parents were driven by the invading Huns, an aunt of hers having been killed by a Hun bomb, and an uncle being now a prisoner in Germany. The bridegroom came over from Canada with the 1st Battalion of the first contingent. Born at St. Helens, he was taken while very young to Canada, and being romantically inclined, it was to St. Helens that he returned to be married. The D.C.M. was on short leave and on his return to the front left his bride in St. Helens, where she set herself industriously to learn English.

URIC ACID SUFFERING.

Uric acid is an accumulation of poison which finds lodgment in the system when the kidneys fail to remove it from the blood. In the kidneys and bladder it formed stones, in the joints and muscles it causes rheumatism. In any case the pain and suffering is almost beyond human endurance. Uric acid is promptly removed from the system when the kidneys are kept healthy and active by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

TRAINING AVIATORS TO HUNT ZEPPELINS

Teacher of Famous Brandon Chats of Experiences—Athletes Are Best Pupils Says Hendon Expert

J. L. Hall, head of the Hall Aviation School, Hendon, England, writes: Lieutenant Brandon, of the Royal Flying Corps, the man who so nearly emulated Warneford in the daring matter of Zepp strafing, learned to fly at my school. He came from New Zealand and joined the school in the usual way, paying his fees, and setting about the work of earning his "ticket" in a quiet, careful manner. I believe he came to us from seeing an advertisement in a trade paper.

His disinclination to talk about himself struck me as being one of the most marked traits in Lieutenant Brandon. Apart from this, he comported himself as any other "pup" (pup being the name applied to all who aspire to fly). Lieutenant Brandon was thirty-two when he started to learn to fly, and his course took him about seven weeks. I regard twenty-eight, or thereabouts, as the ideal age for the flying man; rashness is tempered with caution, and caution is not carried to excess at round about twenty-eight. It would be foolish to dogmatise too much on this point, however, and I merely mention it as having been borne upon me in my teaching experiences. Other instructors doubtless hold different views on this question of age.

Who Make Best Fliers?

Another point that has struck me is that the man with a strain of Celtic blood in him makes the best flier. Celtic blood seems to give that touch of abandon, that alertness of mind, which just makes the difference between a good and a very good airman. Another point is that the man who has led an outdoor life will show much more aptitude in the air than will a man whose previous occupation has kept him indoors. The "indoor man" is apt to exaggerate difficulties and dangers.

Tryggie Gran, the Norwegian, who flew from Scotland to Norway and thus created a record so far unbeaten, and who offered to fly in search of Sir Ernest Shackleton, was one of my first pupils. Amusing things happen at times, and I remember one young man who in doing his trials for his "ticket" utterly disappeared from view. It was a rather foggy afternoon, and the last we saw of him was when he appeared to be making straight for the City of London.

Thought Him Dead

We waited a long time for signs of his return, and at last, neither seeing nor hearing anything of him, I split quite ten pounds' worth of petrol about the aerodrome and set it alight in the hope of giving him a cue as to its whereabouts—if he were still aloft and alive. Some time later, having given him up as completely lost or dead, we were astonished to see him ambling across the aerodrome in apparent unconcern.

"Where in the name of goodness have you been?" I cried.

"Been?" he said. "Why doing my 'heights' ('climbing' up in the air). Couldn't you see me? I was taking rather wide circles. I came down because I thought the whole place must be on fire. I left the 'bus' over in that corner." Which shows how difficult it is to "spot" an aeroplane, either by sight or sound, at times, even when you are on the strict watch for it.

Mr. Granville Barker, who published a book on his experiences with the Red Cross on the French front, began stage life at the age of fourteen, appearing at a little Yorkshire town in a trifling part. He won a great reputation as an actor and brilliant play writer while still under forty.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON QUESTIONS

July 9th, 1916.

The Thessalonian Christians. I. Thess. 1; 2:17-20; 4:13-18.

Golden Text—If we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also that are fallen asleep in Jesus will God bring with him. I. Thess. 4:14.

1. Chaps. 1:1-4. Who were Silvanus and Timotheus, and what are some of the things said about them?

2. The language in Paul's salutation is glowing with love, should all Christians feel the same ardor for their brethren, and would it be wise, or not, and why, to express it in letters and in personal conversation?

3. To what extent is it our duty to pray for one another?

4. To what extent is it our duty to cultivate the habit of showing appreciation of the good work being done by others?

5. Verses 5, 6. To what extent are types of religious experience in converts, made or modified by the person through whom they were converted?

6. If for example the Church at Thessalonica had been founded and taught by a missionary the extreme of Paul in his loving enthusiasm, and marvellous experience what would have been the difference in their type of Christianity?

7. Verses 7, 8. To what extent does the Christian who fills ten men with burning zeal, and with knowledge impregnated with love, and starts them at work, do more for the kingdom of God than the man who does the work of ten men?

8. Verses 7, 8. To what extent is it possible for a Christian to live so that others may safely follow his example?

9. How much good did Paul accomplish through these Thessalonian Christians?

10. Verses 9-10. Which makes the better class of Christians, converts from those who have worshipped idols, or converts from any other form of religion

11. Verses 9, 10. When may we expect Jesus to personally return again to the earth?

12. Chapter 2:17, 18. To what extent may we, through the power of the Holy Spirit, enjoy the perpetual fellowship of absent loved ones?

13. Why does God allow Satan to keep Christians from enjoying the personal fellowship of those whom they love, or from any other good thing?

14. What Bible or other proof is there that Satan is a real person?

15. Verses 19, 20. How do you account for it that Paul's converts were of such entrancing joy to him, and is his experience common with all those who win souls for Jesus? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by the members of the Club.)

16. Chapter 4:13-14. Did Paul teach what is known as "the sleep of the soul"? Why?

17. If the body only dies and the soul continues to live, how could Paul refer to those Christians who had passed away, as "asleep"?

18. Chapter 4:13, 14. Why is the belief in the resurrection of the body perfectly consistent with the belief in the natural immortality of the soul?

19. Verses 15-18. The orthodox view is that at the resurrection day the bodies of the dead will be resurrected, and will be reunited with their waiting spirits, and that those who are still living will have their bodies "changed" and be caught up in the clouds with their resurrected brethren, and together will meet the Lord in the air; wherein does this view differ from Paul's view expressed here and elsewhere?

20. What is there in this belief in the resurrection to "comfort one another with"?

Lesson for Sunday, July 16, 1916.—Paul at Athens, Acts 17:16-34.

KITCHENER VS. "BOBS"

Most was "K." yet word. The fatherly Scotsman concurred in South Africa. Lord Roberts, regarding some important matters to be carried out, sent for a senior officer and gave him his instructions. "Now, mow do you think you can get it through?" inquired the kindly old chief, adding: "I know you will do the best you can."

"I'll try to do it in a fortnight, sir," was the reply.

"Well, I know you will do your best," smiled Lord Roberts as he bade the other good-by.

The visitor had no sooner got outside than he ran up against Lord Kitchener.

"Oh, I've just seen the chief," explained the officer, returning to the business in hand.

"How soon will you get done?" was the quick response.

"Well, I told him I would try and do it in a fortnight."

"Now, look here, colonel," replied K., "unless this is put through within a week we shall have to consider your return home."

The work was done.

GROW POTATOES NOW

Patriotic Duty of Farmers—Best Kinds For Ontario

Canada is not in danger of a food shortage, such as menaces Germany and gives incentive to her farmers. But Canadians who grow potatoes are likely to find a large and profitable market, and besides they will render a national service. Every dollar of material wealth added to the resources of the nation at this time is a factor in winning the war. The Ontario Agricultural Department urges care in putting in of the crop, and offers personal advice to growers based upon experiments conducted at the college in recent years. There are far too many varieties of potatoes grown on the farms of Ontario. This is one of the greatest weaknesses in the potato industry of the province. Varieties prominent in the experiments at the college and in the co-operative experiments throughout Ontario are the Empire State, the Davies' Warrior, the Rural New Yorker No. 2, the Green Mountain and the Carman No. 1 of the late, and the Extra Early Eureka, the Early Ohio and the Stray Beauty or Bliss Triumph of the early varieties. Use smooth, well shaped, sound tubers of good size and of the best varieties. Throw the freshly cut potato sets into finely ground land plaster and plant them immediately after being cut, says the Department. Drop the pieces eighteen inches to 12 or 15 inches apart in the rows and have the rows 28 or 30 inches apart. The potato sets can be planted from three to five inches deep, depending upon the character and the condition of the soil. Level cultivation frequently gives the best results on a light soil, and ridged cultivation on soil of a heavier nature. It is often an advantage to expose whole seed potatoes in a suitable light for a week or two weeks before planting, thus producing short, thick, green sprouts.

LAUDS SILENT FLEET

Greatest Force of War, Says a Neutral Journal

Commenting on the landing of Russian troops at Marseilles, the well-known Spanish newspaper, El Liberal, said: "We see here the action of the greatest force of this war—the British fleet. Its silence and invisibility have induced many to believe it inactive. But it is the great connecting nerve of the allied powers. Thanks to it there are English soldiers in France, French and English soldiers in Salonika and Russians in France. By it the German fleet is shut up and reduced to impotence. The exploits of German submarines appear child's play when one thinks of their powerlessness to prevent these gigantic movements of troops over the world's seas."

How Science and Mechanical Skill Have Changed Old Cannon-Balls Into Modern Shells That Destroy Europe

Evolution of Modern Type of Guns and Ammunition Traced From Early Days to Present Death-dealing Efficiency

The old spherical balls of cast iron with which Nelson and the men of many generations fought went out with the introduction of iron armor. The round shot pierced and splintered the oaken walls, but their range was short, limited to a few hundred yards, and they did most execution when ships were broadside to broadside. The need for pointed shells did not exist, because the round ball was capable of penetrating the timber sides and piercing and bringing down the wooden masts. Nothing occurred to shake the faith of seamen in this mode of warfare until a belt of wrought-iron armor was laid around the vitals of the wooden ship, the Warrior and the French Gloie. Then the most conservative of sailors saw that the old order was doomed and that novel problems had risen.

The round shot has the least efficient form and always broke up when it came in contact with armor. The lines of its pressure against the armor were disposed in directions normal to the curved surface, and as it indented a little way these lines assumed a wedge-like section. The base of the wedge being in contact with the armor-plate, the hinder part of the shot was violently arrested and invariably broke up into fragments. Projectiles with a flat head, as was the case with some of the early ones, did not fracture in this way because the normal lines of pressure, lying in longitudinal directions, did not produce any wedge-like action, and only a slight flattening occurred. The penetrative action, however, was too slight. From these developed the cylindrical, pointed-nosed projectile, which combines penetrative power with or without the explosive shattering of the shell body. In this, the nose penetrates readily, but the wedge-like pressures disposed normally to the curved outline of the nose slight, and they received and absorbed by the cylindrical body, which is more likely to open armor than to produce splitting of the shell itself. The result depends very much on the material used. When shells were made of chilled cast iron the body was frequently shattered, a fact which explains why the Pallister shells, which were made thus, were it course, of time displaced by those of toughened steel.

The firing of a single shot from a gun is a sacrifice of efficiency. Hence in the old days bursting charges were used—grape, canister and chain shot. Canister is still retained, but shrapnel and high explosive shells stand for the common types now employed. The old round shot developed from two hllw hemispheres, hinged and filled with powder and date from the fifteenth century. The later hollow shells, made in one piece, were used only for high angle fire from mortars. Not until 1821 were shells used for horizontal fire. The round shell discharged from smooth bore guns frequently failed to explode at the proper moment. Only when the elongated, pointed projectiles were introduced, and the ordnance were rifflled, could the shells be relied on to explode on striking.

The typical canister or case shell is, exactly as its name signifies, a thin cylindrical case of malleable iron, filled with balls, having the end closed with a disc. There is no fuse, but the canister is neckled around by tangential grooves which cause it to break into pieces as it leaves the muzzle of the gun. The canister is the prototype of the shrapnel. Early shrapnel was globular, but were displaced by the cylindrical, pointed shells of the present shape. Many variations have been made in the methods of filling, as well as in the manner of constructing the cases. Cast-iron, cast-steel, forged steel, and drawn tubing are or have been employed, and the bursting charge is placed either at the front or at the rear. The balls have been held with various materials. In the early shrapnel the shell was loaded with the balls, and the spaces were filled with melted resin and sulphur. These materials lessened the efficiency of the charge, because they cemented the balls in masses, and prevented them from scattering individually. As an alternative, cool dust was used for filling, also a matrix of Plaster of Paris. Later the spaces were filled transversely with discs of cast-iron, provided with cavaties on opposite faces, into which the balls filled. These increased the efficiency, because the discs broke up on explosion and yielded a number of individual missiles

The introduction of the slow-burning powders changed gun practice profoundly, including the riding grooves. The early powders caused a violent explosion in the breech-chamber which prodruced gas pressures of about thirty tons per square inch, and this was the reason why the metal at the breech end was made enormously thick. The pressure diminished rapidly as the shell moved outwards. The action was similar to that of steam in an engine cylinder with an early cut off. If an indicator diagram could have taken it would have had the same descending curve as that of the engine diagram. In the ideal gun the pressure should be uniform from breech to muzzle. To produce this result the gas supplies must be increased as the speed of the projectile increases. But because the initial work thrown on the gun breech was so severe, it was deemed unwise to impart a uniform twist to the rifling, and therefore the increasing twist was adopted, often, beginning with parallel grooves. When, by the employment of slow-burning powders, the initial pressure was reduced and the pressures throughout rendered approximately constant, the uniform twist was gradually substituted. But in the interval much trouble was encountered because of the difficulty of making a close fit between the shell and the grooves. From this mechanical difficulty arose the adoption of the practice long retained of trusting to the projecting metal studs for guidance. One practice was to let a row of soft metal studs into the forward end of the projectile to bear against the rifling, and another similar row near the base to keep the axis of the shell parallel with the axis of the bore. This was not satisfactory, and with the adoption of a uniform twist it was abandoned.

By about 1890, projectiles were assuming their present forms. The copper band had then superseded the crud gas checks of lead or other soft metal which in various designs had been previously employed, and although the high-explosive shells had not yet been made, something very much like them was in use in the form of high capacity shells. These differed from the common shells in having, as the term indicated, larger capacities for a powder charge than the common shell. Thus, comparing two Canet shells of 74.6 mm., the bursting charge of the common shell was 0.484 lb., that of the high-capacity shell 1.584 lbs., in these shells, time and percussion fuses were already fitted to the nose. A shell then in use was the "mitrailleuse," filled with balls like the shrapnel, and having a nose fuse. But the explosion took place in a chamber connected with the fuse in front of the bullets. The chamber was in a cast iron head, and the balls were contained between this and a base of cast iron which were connected with a steel envelope. The bursting of the cast-iron nose opened the envelope, discharging the bullets.

The fuses employed in these shells were in essentials and almost in details similar to those now employed The percussion fuse was made as a distinct element, and the combined time and percussion fuse also. The needle and spring, the time rings with the slow-burning composition, and the safety shearing pins were almost identical with the present designs. The shrapnel shells used in American guns about 1898 were of two forms, substantially like those employed to-day, but with the difference in detail. The time and percussion fuses resembled those of the present and were screwed into the nose of the shell. But the shell cases were of drawn tubing, in order to afford the largest space for the balls. These were sometimes embedded in discs of cast iron, with recesses to receive them, in place of an earlier filling of resin and sulphur. Now resin is used again. In another shell, common then, the bullets were embedded in plaster. Again, two classes of shells were made, the earlier with the bursting charge in a powder pocket in the base. The charge, as now, was connected by a powder tube with the fuse in the nose.

The shells in use at the present time are the armor-piercing, the high explosive, the common shell, the shrapnel, and those used only for drill practice. The first three have thick walls, the walls of the others are thinner. The armor-piercing shell must penetrate the armor before it explodes, to be fully efficient. The shrapnel contains some hundreds of lead balls, which are discharged from the case on detonation. The common shell is a less power type of the same family as the high-explosive shells, which contain lyddite or melinte or T.N.T., which shatters the case to fragments. The drill shells are made of cast iron, or in some cases of wood loaded with a lead core.

The shrapnel for the 9.2 in. guns is typical of the general arrangement, which is modified in nearly all particulars in shell for use in different guns, in the several "marks" for the same gun, and as made by different nations. This steel casing is strong enough to resist detonation under the bursting charge, since if it should become expanded within the gun it would jam, or tear out the rifling grooves. The case contains about 698 9-ounce shot embedded in resin. The resin provides a tracey smoke which indicates the flight of the shell to the gunners. These shot are driven out by the powder in a cup at the base, which is fired by a fuse screwed into the socket of the nose. The explosion passes down to the cup through a central tube, and the bullets are driven out by the steel disc at the rear. The fitting of the wood head and the thin steel cup is less common than the screwing of a steel socket into the nose of the shell to receive the fuse, the copper driving-band is squeezed into the rifled grooves by the discharge of the shell, and various profiles are given to the band in different sizes of shells and in those of different nations.

In all the small shells the cartridge case which contains the propelling charge is firmly attached to the base of the shell, and contains some kind of smokeless explosive which is fired by a primer in its base. But for the large heavy shells the cartridge is carried in a separate bag of silk cloth. In one form the charge is built up of cordite in cylinders, with an annular recess at the base to receive the igniter. This contains powder in shalloon discs which are stitched across the compartments. It is protected with a millboard disc, which is torn off before the gun is loaded.

In the eighteen-pounder high-explosive shell the brass cartridge case is attached to the shell base. When its charge of smokeless powder is exploded by the primer in the base the shell is driven out, breaking away from and leaving the empty brass case in the breech, to be extracted by the breech mechanism. The fuse, which is screwed into the nose of this shell, acts by percussion only. But the action is delayed by the gaine, which is a tube that extends into the cavity of the shell among the high explosive. It contains different detonating materials of successively increasing power. The result is that the shell is able to penetrate fortifications before it explodes, with increased destructive effects.

Highlanders Will Retain The Kilts

New Order Based on Reports From the Front.

OTTAWA, July 6.—The recent decision of the military authorities not to authorize the organization of any more Highland battalions will not be adhered to. Sir Sam Hughes stated that reports received from the front are all in favour of the kilts for trench work, chiefly because they do not become water soaked when there is a foot or so of water in the trenches. There have been fewer cases of pneumonia and other forms of lung trouble amongst the men of the Highland brigades than in the other infantry regiments. The order to discontinue the issuance of kilts caused a good deal of disappointment in many parts of Canada, more particularly where the Scotch predominate. The decision to countermand the order, it is believed, will be generally welcomed.

Another reason why the Minister of Militia has decided to restore kilts to their old time prestige is that they are more economical than trousers. Kilts, it has been found, last as long as four pairs of trousers.

The Right Word.

"Ma husband's very po'ly, ma'am. He's got dat exclamatory rheumatism."

"You mean inflammatory, Martha. E'xclamatory is from exclaim, which means to cry out."

"Yes, ma'am, dat's what it is. He hollers if anyone goes near him."

Forced To Leave School, Had St. Vitus' Dance

Astonishing Cure of This Nervous Trouble Effected by Use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Here is a case where life-long gratitude will be felt for Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. As a school girl and in later life Dr. Chase's Nerve Food came to the rescue when the nerves gave out. Now a healthy, robust woman happily gives the credit to this great food cure for restoring her to health and strength.

Miss Sadie M. White, 38 Waterloo street, Fredericton, N.B. writes:—

"When ten years of age a friend of mine had St. Vitus' Dance and she had to leave school and go under a doctor's care. Instead of benefiting by the treatment she appeared to get worse. Her tonsils and tongue became so swollen that she could scarcely take any nourishment. For two weeks she was this way and then took convulsions and nearly choked to death. She was ordered to the hospital, but soon got worse again. I recommended Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to her and she used nine boxes, steadily growing better. Three years later a severe fright brought on the nervous trouble again, and she suffered everything a human being could endure. Her mother bought a dozen boxes of Nerve Food, and with this treatment she was fully restored. I wish you could see her now, a strong, healthy, robust woman with two lovely babies. She still uses the Nerve Food when she feels out of sorts, but has had no return of the old nervous trouble."

For weak, puny, nervous children there is nothing like Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to enrich the blood, restores the starved nerves and start them on the way to health. When they fail to get proper nourishment from the food they eat, this food cure presents the necessary ingredients in condensed and easily assimilated form, and strength and vigor is restored. 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Limited, Toronto.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S SHIRT WAIST.

By Anabel Worthington.

Figured and flowered effects will be high in favor during the summer and will be used to develop blouses in all one color as much as in the scheme of contrasting note for collar and cuffs which has been so much the vogue. Lace or edging will be appropriate trimming, but will not be extravagantly used, so that the charming simplicity of a model will remain unimpaired. In the illustration, No. 7,000, we have evidence that all plain waists are not waists alike—the sleeves extend to neck edge, and the shoulder fronts are gathered to the top of the sleeve, which really supplies as a shoulder yoke. The revers, faced with material, have edging for a finish to match the low collar, and the very tempting cuff with its downward flare is finished in harmonize. The closing is at center front.

This pattern is cut in sizes 32 to 42 bust measure. To make in size 36 will require 1¾ yards of 36 inch material and ¾ yards edging.

To obtain this pattern by sending [illegible] the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Address—The Examiner Pattern Service, The Examiner, Peterborough. Price 10 cents, or 2 for 15 cents.

PILES

Do not suffer another day with itching, blind, bleeding or protruding Piles. Medical operation unnecessary. Dr. Chase's Ointment will relieve you at once and in comparatively short time, in most cases, will entirely cure you. 60c. a box; all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Don't suffer from these torturing pain and [illegible] Ointment.

SHE GAINED 16 POUNDS.

Mrs. George Bradshaw, Harlowe, Ont., writes: "I was troubled for many years with weak, watery blood and dizzy, bad nerves, headaches, dizziness and sinking spells, and was in fact, a confirmed invalid. Doctors told me my heart and kidneys were diseased and gave me up but by using 10 boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I have been cured of many of my old complaints and gained 16 pounds in

MOTHER AND BABE TAKE DIZZY PLUNGE IN AN AUTOMOBILE

EARTH EMBANKMENT GIVES WAY BENEATH WHEELS OF VEHICLE—DROP 18 FEET

Windsor, July 6.—Mrs. Julia Payne, widow of the former proprietor of the Road House on the river front, Sandwich East, and her 6 months old daughter, had a very narrow escape from death when the automobile which Mrs. Payne was driving plunged down an 18-foot embankment int six feet of water in the drainage canal.

Mrs. Payne was endeavoring to move the machine from the brink of the canal bank, when it suddenly turned turtle after the ground under the rear wheels gave way, precipitating the car down the steep side of the canal. It rolled over twice, striking the water on its side. Mrs. Payne was pinned between the steering wheel and the seat, while the child was thrown out and fell beneath the wrecked car.

Both Mrs. Payne and the child would have perished had not Arsas Droillard, a fishery inspector for North Essex, who had witnessed the accident, come to the rescue. He jumped from the high bank, and first released Mrs. Payne, not knowing that the child was under the car. He managed to find the infant, which was near death, when its rescuer reached shore with it.

After Mrs. Payne was able to talk she said that she had lost the sum of $185, which was in her pocket when the car took the plunge. The money was found a few hours later by two labourers, who restored it to the owner.

CHEESE SOUFLE.

Make white sauce of two tablespoons butter, 3 tablespoons flour, 1 cup sweet milk, 1-4 teaspoon salt and a little pepper. Cook thoroughly and add six tablespoons grated cheese. Beat whites of three eggs stiff and add beaten yolks. Mix with sauce, and bake 20 minutes in slow oven.

THE BRITISH RESUME THEIR OFFENSIVE

IMPORTANT TACTICAL SUCCESSES GAINED

British Make Simultaneous Smashes on a Wide Front

Captured 1,000 Yards of Trenches East of La Boiselle After Severe Fighting---A Gain of Great Importance Linking Up With Eastward Advance of the French North of the Somme---Germans Counter Attack Desperately in an Effort to Fling Back the British Line.

ENEMY SUFFERED HEAVY CASUALTIES

LONDON, July 7.—The British troops resumed their great offensive against the Germans at dawn to-day with simultaneous smashes against the German lines on a wide front.

One official statement from General Haig said: "This morning we resumed a vigorous offensive at dawn. The Germans simultaneously launched heavy attacks against our new trenches near the Ancre Brook and north of Fricourt, resulting in violent fighting between the Ancre and Montauban, and in the vicinity of Orvillers, LaBoiselle and Contalmaison.

Several important tactical successes were gained. East of LaBoiselle severe fighting occurred with heavy enemy casualties. We captured 1,000 yards of a German trench. Northwest of Thiepval the enemy temporarily regained two or three hundred yards of lost ground.

During last night the enemy heavily bombarded our new positions in Bernaby Wood, at Montauban and near LaBoiselle, some times using Lachrymose shells. At the Loos salient the enemy artillery was particularly active, and also opposite Dulluch. Southwest of Thiepval a determined enemy attack was completely repulsed.

The British gain east of LaBoiselle is of particular importance, because it links up with the eastward advance of the French north of the Somme. The Germans had massed large forces on this sector, and counter-attacked desperately in efforts to fling back the British line.

Lloyd George Installed as War Secretary

Examiner Special:

LONDON, July 7.—King George received David Lloyd Geroge in audience to-day and handed him the Seals of the Secretaryship of War. Lloyd George assumed his new office this afternoon.

Jellicoe's Report Removes All Doubt

Examiner Special:

LONDON, July 7.—Admiral Sir John Jellicoe's report on the Jutland naval battle has removed the last lingering doubts in the minds of the English people that the engagement was not a distinct British victory. These doubts had been created by the unfortunate wording of the Admiralty's first announcement. Some critics, however, point out that Jellicoe failed to explain why torpedo boats and submarines scouting off the German coast failed to discover the sally of the German fleet before Admiral Beatty's scout cruisers reported the German's presence.

Utter Calm on The Somme and at Verdun

Examiner Special:

PARIS (French Official), July 7.—The lull in the fighting on the French front on both sides of the River Somme, where the Allied offensive is under way, continued throughout last night. The War Office to-day reported utter calm on the Somme front. The open town of Lura was bombarded by the German air squadron and eleven women and children were killed and three wounded. The War Office announced to-day that the French will reserve reprisals until later.

The night passed without infantry fighting on the Verdun front also, though a violent bombardment occurred on the east side of the Meuse in the region of Thiaumont, Fleury and Chenois Wood. In the Lepretre Wood, southeast of Verdun the Germans made an unsuccessful attack on the French trenches. French grenadiers retaliated cleaning up a German trench and taking many prisoners.

Unionist Leaders Await Developments

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 7.—Unionist leaders met at the Carlton Club this afternoon and discussed the Irish situation for two hours, finally deciding to await further development before making a definite decision.

Bonar Law, Lord Lansdowne and Walter Hume Long, Unionist leaders urged the acceptance of Lloyd George's plan for Home Rule Parliament in Ireland on the grounds of imperial necessity. A strong delegation of Unionists, demurred and the afternoon meeting adjourned without a decison.

Will Exchange Civilian Prisoners

Special to The Examiner:

COPENHAGEN, July 7.—England and Germany have agreed to an exchange of civilian prisoners according to information received by Americans here to-day. The exchange will affect many thousand Germans who were interned in England after the Lusitania sinking, and a large number of English civilians in German internment camps.

Serious Disturbances Reported in Potsdam

Special to The Examiner:

GENEVA, July 7.—People arriving from Germany report the most serious disturbances yet in Potsdam, right under the walls of the imperial residence. Great crowds gathered and tried to coerce troops into revolt. Printed sheets as follows were handed out: "Death to the Kaiser, death to the Crown Prince and every other man who wants war. Long live free Germany, free from parasites who have led it to ruins." The crowds were finally dispersed by mounted troops.

GENEVA, July 7.—Dissension between Austrian and Hungarian statesmen over the disposition of the Austro-Hungarian armies was reported in the advices received here to-day.

LANCE-CORP. W. S. McINTOSH — He returned home this morning after more than a year in various military hospitals.

AYEAR AND EIGHT DAYS IN MILITARY HOSPITAL IN ENG.

Lance Corporal Wilbert McIntosh of 16th Battalion Was Through Ypres and Festubert.

RIGHT LEG SHORTENED

After a year and eight days in various military hospitals, Lance Corporal Wilbert S. McIntosh, son of Mr. Angus McIntosh, Cedar street, arrived home this morning with his right knee stiffened for life and the leg shortened an inch and one-quarter. He returned to Canada on the Grampian and had been detained in Quebec by the examining board. His discharge from the army is now pending, but it may be six months before it is finally declared.

Lance Corporal McIntosh enlisted in Hamilton with the 16th Battalion, known in the Canadian Scottish brigade as the Argyles. The other three clan regiments were the Camerons of Winnipeg, the Seaforths of Vancouver and the Gordons of Victoria. The 16th saw its first real action while acting as a support at Neuve Chapelle. Then came St. Julien or the second battle of Ypres at which Lance Corporal McIntosh's regiment was badly cut up. This was the regiment so largely responsible for the retaking of three guns which the Germans had captured in their first assault. It lost heavily in both officers and men, and Lance-Corporal McIntosh saw many of his pals drop around him but continued the advance with the mental expression something like "There goes another." For three days they had nothing but their iron or emergency rations of "biscuit and bully," and for an unbroken stretch of seventeen days they remained in the trenches.

Followed the engagement at Festubert, May 20th, where the 16th again participated, and counted more of its men on the casualty list. Of Lance-Corporal McIntosh's company he knows only three or four who survive. An outbreak of boils had been bothering him and shortly after Festubert an attack of septic poisoning laid him out and finally caused his removal to an hospital nearby on June 4th, 1915, and then the trip to England, where he was moved from hospital to hospital and convalescent home, receiving treatment in six or seven of them.

Such in short was the experience of this Peterborough boy who has returned with a limp and a heavier boot heel than he ever wore before. Otherwise he seems in good health, and is looking forward to the time

PTE. MAX BRECKENRIDGE, who enlisted here with the 39th Battalion, and who has been killed in action.

SIXTEEN YEAR OLD PETERBORO BOY IS KILLED IN ACTION

Pte. Harold Henry Who Enlisted Here With The 39th Battalion Meets Death at the Front. Pte. Max Breckenridge of Same Battalion Killed and Pte. Copson Wounded---Recruiting Staff Gone to Barriefield Camp ---Orders and General Military News.

KILLED IN ACTION.

Pte. Harold Henry, Canadian Infantry (formerly 39th Battalion), 1013 Water Street.

Pte. Max. Breckenridge, Canadian Infantry (formerly 39th Battalion).

WOUNDED

No. 412428, Pte. Harry Copson, Canadian Infantry (formerly 39th Battalion), Chamberlen Street.

Pte. Harold Henry, only son of Mr. Wm. Henry, Superintendent of the Children's Aid Society, and undoubtedly one of the youngest soldiers to wear the uniform of the Canadian Expeditionary Force, has been killed in action. The tragic news reached his parents this morning in the shape of a wire from the Record Office, Ottawa. Pte. Henry was only fifteen years of age when he enlisted with the 57th detachment to the 39th Battalion early last year. He celebrated his sixteenth birthday on the firing line, having been born in Peterborough on November 7, 1900. The young soldier had only just left the Queen Alexandra School when he joined the 39th Battalion. Although but a boy he proved a keen reliable soldier, and his letters home were invariably models of cheerfulness. His parents will have the sincere sympathy of a very large circle of friends, as well as of the community generally. The case is a particularly sad one inasmuch as Pte. Henry was the only child. He was a bright, likeable youngster, who made many friends.

Pte. Henry was killed on June 17th or 18th.

PTE. MAX. BRECKENRIDGE.

Pte. Max. Breckenridge, son of Mr. Matthew Breckenridge, of Westwood, who enlisted here with the 39th Battalion, has been killed in action, word to this effect having reached his relatives. Pte. Breckenridge was widely known, not only in his native village of Westwood, but in Peterborough as well, as he was a resident of this city for some time before enlisting, being employed as a drug clerk by McDermid and Jury. While living here, Pte. Breckenridge resided on Burnham Street, East City. He was formerly an enthusiastic member of the Norwood Cadet Corps, and was particularly interested in signalling. As a result when he joined the 39th Battalion he became one of the Battalion Signallers. He went overseas with the 39th Battalion and was afterward transferred to another battalion at the front.

PTE. HARRY COPSON.

Pte. Harry Copson, another Peterborough man, who enlisted in the 39th Battalion here last year, has been wounded, his name appearing in the official casualty lists. Pte. Copson, before enlisting, resideded on Chamberlen Street West, and was employed at the Canadian General Electric Works. He was born in England, but had been a resident of Peterborough for some time before signing on for overseas service.

Capt. Dodds, chaplain 155th Battalion, and Sergt.-Major Miller, W.O., 93rd Battalion, had a very interesting conversation on Wednesday, when it developed that both were in No. 1 company, 57th Regiment, on a trip to Ottawa exactly twenty-five years ago. Both were in the ranks, but neither knew of the other until the conversation on Wednesday at the camp.—Kingston Whig.

Kingston, July 6.—Major R. D. Ponton, Instructional Cadré, was presented with 500 cigarettes, a box of cigars and a large panoramic photo of the 93rd Battalion by the officers of that battalion in appreciation of the work that the Major has been doing since the 93rd was organized. During the winter Major Ponton was in Peterborough on many occasions as assistant to Lieut.-Col. W. J. Brown, G.S.O., looking after the training of the battalion, and the progress made then and now at Barriefield is due to a great measure to his interest in their work.

Barriefield, July 6.—Lieut. N. Muncie, adjutant School of Signalling, is inspecting the signalling sections of the 93rd and 109th Battalions. Every section of each of the battalions at the camp is being inspected by the staff of the School of Signalling to determine their efficiency for work at the front.

So far the results have been more than satisfactory, showing the good work that was carried on by the school, of which Major Mundell is commandant.

OTTAWA, July 6.—Announcement is made by the Naval Service Department to-day that the British Admiralty have requested the department to enter another hundred men from Canada to train for probation and flight sub-lieutenants in the Royal Naval Air Service. The period of service is for the war. Candidates must be between the ages of 19 and 26 years, but particularly suitable applicants between 18 and 19 will be accepted. Only athletic and perfectly physically fit men of good education and intellectual capacity will be accepted. Perfect eyesight is also required of the applicant.

When the number of volunteers asked for have been secured, Canada will have contributed 350 airmen to the Imperial Service, a large number have already rendered valuable service and probably a score have been killed or injured.

Barriefield, July 6.—The "casuals" of the 93rd Battalion are now being given their instruction in musketry. This battalion will soon be leaving for the front, and the work must be finished up as soon as possible. The battalion is excused from all work except this, so that every opportunity is afforded for its rapid completion.

In instructing the soldiers in musketry at Barriefield camp, the work

GUNNER ELLIOTT WAS SHOT BY A SENTRY

PTE. HAROLD HENRY, sixteen year old son of Mr. Wm. Henry, Water street, who is officially reported killed in action.

Peterboro Boy Dies in Kingston General Hospital—It is Stated That He Failed to Produce His Pass Whereupon Sentry Fired at Him.

AN INVESTIGATION

The news that Gunner Russell Elliott, a Peterborough member of the 74th Battery, had been shot and fatally injured at Kingston last night, will cause great sorrow throughout the city. The young soldier was one of four brothers who had joined the colours. A reference to Gunner Elliott's death will be found on page 1 of to-day's Examiner, while the following telegram received this afternoon from Kingston, gives the details of the sad affair as far as could be ascertained to-day.

KINGSTON, Ont., July 7.—Gunner Russell Elliott of Peterborough, a member of the 74th Battery, was shot down by Gunner West of the 73rd Battery at the Cereal Barracks last night and died in the General Hospital at 3 a.m. this morning. According to the military authorities Gunner Elliott was asked to produce his pass and approach with it. He told the sentry to come and get it and West fired immediately. The action of the sentry is regarded as rather hasty, but military men say that, technically, he was justified. It is not known how many shots were fired. On bullet entered the abdomen, while there is also a small wound on the left arm. A post mortem of the arm is to be held to ascertain if the wound was caused by a bullet wound, a fall, or probably the point of a bayonet. The civil and military authorities are investigating, and should the evidence justify it, Crown Attorney Whiting will take immediate action following the inquest to-night.

RUSSIANS ARE PREPARING FOR DRIVE IN NORTH

Czar's Big Guns Are Hammering The German Lines Near Riga With Tremendous Intensity and Russian Infantry Will Soon be on The Move.

THE BERLIN STATEMENT

PETROGRAD, July 7—The Russian bombardment in the offensive against the Germans near Riga has reached a tremendous intensity and it is expected the Russian infantry will in a day or two be equalling in the north against the Germans the big successes their comrades in the south have gained against the Austrians. The Russian artillery is fifty times stronger than when the Germans invaded Russia.

BERLIN ADMITS IT.

BERLIN, July 7.— Severe fighting is going on both north and south of the Somme, where the allies have resumed their offensive, the war office announced this afternoon.

German troops have abandoned certain lines in the region of Czartory in Volhynia under attack by superior Russian forces, it was officially admitted.

FORMER RESIDENT KILLED

Mr. Harry Kirke Meets Tragic Death in Detroit

Mr. Edward Courtney, East City, received the tragic news this morning that his son-in-law, Mr. Harry Kirke, formerly of Peterborough, has been killed in Detroit. No particulars have been received as to the manner in which Mr. Kirke met his death. He was for a long time a resident of Peterborough, but for the past twelve years had lived in Detroit. Mr. Courtney and his daughter, Mrs. Bothwell, are leaving for Detroit to-day.

ALL SAINTS' KIDDIES AT JACKSON PARK

The Primary Department of All Saints' Sunday school held their annual picnic to Jackson Park this afternoon. The day was an ideal one for such an outing and a large number of children of the Sunday school spent the day amid the shady haunts of the old favourite resorts at the end of the car line.

New York Stock Market

Summary of To-day's Activities on the New York Stock Exchange

Examiner Special:

NEW YORK, July 7.—Munitions and nine shares were driven downward during the first half hours trading on the stock exchange to-day. Mexican specialties were strong and rail road stocks were steady.

Baldwin Loco sold off 3 1-4 making a new low record for the year at 68 1-2 Crucible lost 2 points, Westinghouse 1 1-8 and American Loco 1. American zinc and butte and superior made new low records for the year. Mexican petroleum later lost its gain and sold below yesterday's close.

Advance of the call money rate to 4 point attracted much attention in the street to-day. Nickle plate this afternoon sold at 84 1-8, off 1 1-2 from yesterday's close. Railroad shares softened and coppers and munitions.

The recruit was not very robust, and during a trying route march had to fall out no fewer than five times. The sergeant, an Irishman, got exasperated.

"You're in the wrong regiment," he shouted. "It's not this way you should be in at all."

The recruit looked puzzled.

"It's the flying corps you should be in," continued the sergeant. "An' then you wud only have to fall out wance."

DOG DAY DOGMATICS.

Supporters of the Hearst government are insisting that prohibition is a proper and pertinent issue in the North Perth by-election; and are pathetically appealing to the electors to support the candidate of a government which "passed a prohibitory measure." The government does not deserve very much credit for that — not enough to make it a sole issue. If it had taken steps to carry out the Liberal policy of its own accord; if it had originated the idea of prohibitory legislation; if it had not enacted prohibition solely to save its skin, it might have deserved some credit. As it is the government deserves not much more credit than a rubber stamp. It simply provided for registering the votes of both parties in the House. There was no question of politics in the prohibitory measure that was passed in spite of the government, which was, with perhaps the exception of its head, known to be hostile to prohibition. Then why the frantic and pathetic and humiliating pleading to stand by the Hearst government in North Perth and vote approval of a measure for which the government deserves no credit and which is not even in force, and whose merits or demerits are unknown, and can only be known by actual experience But the dog-days covers a multitude of sins. Newspapers in this heated time naturally write a good deal of twaddle. Dog day dogmatics are to be expected for party purposes.

CANADA SUPPLIES IRELAND.

It is possible that the arrangement by which a modified form of home rule will be applied to Ireland may bring at least temporary domestic peace to that land of factions and agitators. Any condition of war that might develop during the great war would be a trivial affair compared with the great struggle on the neighbouring continent. And the initial success of Home Rule will be helped if His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, is appointed the first Governor-General. His title Connaught, taken from the five-county province of that name is itself a commendation, and that added to the fact that the members of the royal family have always been popular in Ireland, will make the Duke persona grata and tend to give smoothness of operation to the initial working of the Home Rule machinery. It was generally felt that no change would be made in the governor-generalship of Canada during the war; and the fact that different arrangements have been made, might be construed into a feeling among the Home authorities that the war is practically over —at least so far as the certainty of the outcome is concerned. If the Duke of Connaught meets as great success in Ireland as he has done in Canada his appointment will be well justified. Faction and the fruits of faction are the chief elements to be combatted and subordinated in Ireland We are not without the element of faction in Canada, and the Dukes' experience and observation of its workings in this country will not be a disadvantage in his new position.

WOMEN AND MEN.

The war has made many changes. In industrial and commercial operations, emergency has created a speeding up of production, and the relative status of labour to employment has been changed. And another change has been the admission of women to forms of employment heretofore held, in practice at least, as reserved to men. This means a change of relation, not only industrially, but as between the sexes. In the not remote past we have been able to regard women as modest, timid, dependent, shrinking beings. But nearly all that has been changed. There is nothing modest about the modern woman, so far as assertion of her personality and rights is concerned. There is nothing timid either about the modern woman. She also shows that she possesses many courage and contempt for danger. There is nothing dependent, either, about the women of to-day. They are making their way in the world, relying upon their own exertions for support and showing less and less a dependence upon the precarious support of the man kind. There is nothing shrinking, either, about the women of to-day—unless it be the length of their skirts. Aggression has taken the place of shrinking and effacement in the modern woman. Women, instead of posing as merely ornamental features of the world of action, are becoming its most practical elements. In nearly all spheres of activity they "push us men for our seats" and annex our jobs.

Especially in this war have they invaded the domain of masculine rights and privileges and possession. Hereafter we shall have to reckon with women as practical factors in the practical things of this world. Women will make formidable industrial competitors. They have been trained by centuries of slavery to domestic servitude and drudgery—this is their own claim—to long hours, so that they will not be likely to strike for shorter hours. They will be content to do with smaller wages because they can live more cheaply; board themselves, and make their own clothes—an easy matter under the regime of abbreviated and economical amplitude of drapery. Women will be formidable rivals of men. Women in employment, politics and commerce, and in social life, are, in the opinion of the sex coming to their own, and in the same opinion, men are coming to their own—in the slang of the day, "getting what's coming to them."

It is probable, too, that we shall see other changes. In the past women have been clamouring for their rights as against the arrogant monopoly and assumption of man. The time does not seem far distant when the condition will be reversed; when men will be demanding their rights from women—when "men's rights" clubs will take the place of "women's rights" clubs!

There's a great chance of serious conflict of interests between the sexes; and the outcome is not doubtful; for it is easily conceivable that woman will continue to have her own way in the end, as she has always done. Not many years ago votes for women seemed as impossible and impracticable as perpetual motion. but by the exercise of the only form of perpetual motion in existence—the tongue of women—they have talked themselves into the ballot, and with that all other things can be made to come. The world is getting on the balance, when equality of right as between sexes, so long denied, is un fait assompli, or so mightily near it that it is no joke for us mere men.

There may be more things to define, settle and adjust when this war is over than international boundary lines, and the indemnities the Teutons will have to pay. In deference to logical order of precedence, we shall have to write and say, instead of "men and women," "women and men."

THE RESPONSIBILITY.

The Conservative organs— some of them—declare that the Liberals alone are responsible for the North Perth by-election, by having the "cheek" to put up a candidate. If Premier Hearst had desired to avoid an election contest he had the power in his own hands. When Mr. James Torrance, the sitting member, told Mr. Hearst that he wanted to resign his seat, because he wanted to accept a position of "graft" under the Dominion government, Premier Hearst could have told him that he couldn't accept his resignation:

"You must wait till after the war is over or a general election comes, for your Dominion government job If the seat is opened there will certainly be a by-election. The seat must be filled, as you know the disloyal Grits won't give us a walk over. They will say that they will exercise the right of Britons whose principle the world is fighting for to day, and nominate a candidate. The Grits are not only disloyally disregardful of the tremendous interests at stake in this war, but they are mighty cocky. They have knocked the government out or knocked it "groggy" in all the by-elections; and they will think they can win in North Perth and I'm afraid they will. No, Jim, I can't accept your resignation. It would be disloyal, and what is more important, it would be dangerous to open North Perth now. You can't depend upon these Grits. They believe in their rights as British subjects, and they will as they have a right to do, be sure to nominate a candidate, and we shall have the evil of a war time election and the government will be responsible for it."

There could be no more humiliating confession of funk, than for a government with 57 majority in the House, begging the Grits to spare it the risk of meeting defeat in a constituency where it had in the last election a majority of 1,317

CONSERVATIVE M. P. DEMANDS DEFEAT OF HEARST CANDIDATE

W. F. McLean M. P. Scores Both Borden and Hearst Governments Over The Nickel Situation

The electors of North Perth have now opportunity of passing on the policy of the Ontario Government in allowing a foreign nation and company—the latter under German control— to mine, export, refine, sell, control, the nickel stores of Ontario —to the great destruction as it has proved to the sons of Canada and of the empire; to the almost annihilation of British freedom and British rule. That supreme cause of liberty is still at stake, and Canadian nickel has been made an agent of that danger.

If the electors of Perth rebuke that policy now ther will be an end of it forever; if they do not the fight must be carried on until the Hearst government are forced to abandon the unpatriotic course they have been lead into pursuing by the designing agents of the International Nickel Company. These agents of the International Nickel Company, and of the Metal Trust that rules the world from Frankfort, Germany, have been able to assure the two Conservative governments of Canada that they need not fear any organized criticism from the Liberal opposition in either the legislation or in the commons.

Not to condemn that policy now is to pave the way for its continuance; to condemn it now the Hearst government and the Borden government will be forced to abandon it once and for all and to prohibit any export that is not absolutely controlled from Canada.

We have the world's monopoly of nickel and we have turned it over to foreigners; and the Canadian representatives of these foreigners have been one of the most potent factors in our politics now for years! And we think we know of what we speak. Once for all this must stop.

Canadians have been shot to death with nickel surreptitiously taken out of Canada for that very purpose; and this game has been aided and abetted by the agents of the great armament and metal trust in Britain. The strength of the metal and armament trust in selling to every belligerent and in promoting and encouraging war, the strength of the armament trust that is seeking to dominate munitions and nickel armor in the States as against the Wilson government is in their control of the Canadian nickel output. The armor trust, headed by the Bethlehem Steel Company in the States, has appealed to congress, and, after the hardest kind of a fight, has been beaten. The United States will make her own armor plate hereafter without the intervention, dictation as to price, without a possible enemy using the industries of that country to forge munitions and armor plate that may be turned against the United States.

Shall we in Canada do less after our bitter experience? Never was so sacred and far-reaching an issue put up to the Canadian people. It transcends all others ;and yet there are men gone into Perth to-day trying to cover up the misguided and unpatriotic policy of which the Borden government and the Hearst government are the protectors, by trying to make the real issue one of beer and prohibition—beer and skittles so to speak. That has been settled. But nickel has not. The nickel truet are trying to steal by!

Let the men of Perth in the discharge of the most sacred issue ever put before them settle it now and forever. And they can only do it in one way, and that is to defeat the candidate of the government that has refused to put an end to the greatest blot that has been put on Canada in the world-wide war!

We may have been fooled; our statesmen may have been fooled; but when the people know and have the facts, they will be fooled not any longer. Canadians, we believe, are in no temper to stand for further deception and attempts to mislead the issue.

If it is not checked now the most powerful and the most dangerous factor in the next general elections in Ontario and Canada will be the Nickel Trust!

Let the electors ask men like Colonel Denison what is their solemn judgment on this matter after they have studied the facts, and they will find everything that The World has published for years is true, and all the more disgraceful to Canada because it is true.

The undersigned takes the fullest responsibility in so advising the electors of North Perth to declare against the all powerful influence of the Nickel Trust in Canada to date!

North Perth Issue is Extravagant Issue Of People's Money

Special to the Examiner:

TORONTO, July 7.—On Monday next the electors of North Perth will have an opportunity of voicing their opinion on the record of the present administration at Toronto. Both the Liberals and Conservatives are well represented, the former in the person of Mr. F. Wellington Hay, and the latter by Mr. J. A. Mal[illegible].

Every effort is being made by the opponents of Mr. Hay, backed by the Premier and several ministers, to becloud the real issue of the fight; and as Mr. Hay expresses it "to appeal to the racial prejudices of the people of Ontario by the introduction of the bi-lingual question, in orders to divert attention from the real issue, which is the wasteful expenditure which has characterized the administration of the present Government".

The Conservatives maintain that in contesting the vacant seat, the Liberals are violating a party truce, but, as a matter of fact, no "party truce" is tenable, as it is not within the province of either the Leader of the Government or the Opposition to decide whether the electors of any constituency shall or shall not have a contest. The decision, under the statute rests with the electorate. Mr. Rowell, in a letter to Mr. Hay specifically denied that there was any understanding between him and the Premier that there should be no bye-elections during the war. It would appear from the fact that Mr. Hearst wired Mr. Rowell when the Liberal Leader was in Ottawa recently, as to whether he would dispense with registration under The Manhood Suffrage Act in the coming contest, that the Government really knew of no good grounds for expecting the Liberals not to contest the seat, and for that reason were anxious to bring on an election as soon as possible. The Liberals, on their part feel that the cause of the vacancy—the retirement of Mr. Torrance to accept a government position—justifies their taking the opportunity to register a protest against the extravagance of the Government.

Whilst the Conservatives are introducing Prohibition and Bi-lingualism as issues in the contest, the Liberals feel their policy and records on both these questions are too well known to warrant any controversy at this time, and the Government supporters are sadly disappointed that they cannot make the Liberals fight with these weapons. In their indignation they have designated the campaign of the Liberals as a "whispering campaign". The truth is they are decidedly nervous over the probable result of the election, as in the last three bye-elections the change against the Government amounted to 2,916 votes. Peel turning a substantial Tory majority into a comfortable surplus for the Grits.

The Liberal candidate has taken a strong stand in support of Mr. Rowell's policies, and depends for his election upon the constructive nature of these policies, as opposed to the destructive incompetence of the present Government in handling the affairs of the Province. He and his supporters feel that in strengthening the Opposition in the Provincial Legislature they will be conferring a benefit on the community at large by increasing the check on the Government.

The huge increase in the Provincial Debt in eleven years from less than $2,000,000 to over $49,000,000; the failure of the Government last year to collect $300,000 in taxation from The Canadian Copper Company; the double salary collected by the Attorney General ($11,400); the wasteful expenditure on Government House authorised at $400,000 and now largely exceeding $1,000,000; the unnecessarily large increase in the number of Civil Servants employed, with the consequent drain on the people's purse, each of these items is being placed before the electors by Mr. Hay and his supporters as examples of the Government's inefficiency, together with their failure to keep pace with the public demand for advanced legislation in regard to Agriculture, Tax-reform and Social Problems.

Everything points to a particularly interesting contest; and the possible outcome is the subject of eager discussion, both inside and out of the riding.

OFFICIAL SCHEDULE OF PENSION REGULATIONS

The New Rates of Pensions in Connection With the Canadian Expeditionary Forces And the Regulations in Regard to the Same—Important Information That Should be Preserved.

The following official schedule of the new pension regulations should be read carefully and kept by all interested, as it will be found of great assistance at times:

1. There shall be a Commission to be known as the Board of Pension Commissioners for Canada, consisting of three members appointed by the Governor in Council (hereinafter called the Commission). Each Commissioner shall hold office during good behaviour for a period of ten years from the date of his appointment, but may be removed at any time by the Governor in Council, for cause, and a Commissioner, on the expiration of his term of office, shall be eligible for re-appointment. The Commissioners may, from time to time, elect one of their number to be Chairman of the Commission.

2. Subject to the regulations hereinafter set out, the commission shall have exclusive jurisdiction and authority to consider and make all grants and payments of military and naval pensions, and of gratuities, allowances and assistance to persons wounded, injured or incapacitated in the military or naval service of Canada (hereinafter called members of the forces), or to their dependent relatives, and shall have exclusive jurisdiction and authority to deal with all matters pertaining to such pensions, gratuities, allowances and assistances.

3. The Commission shall have authority to engage such clerical and other assistance as they may consider requisite for the transaction of their duties, and at such salaries as may be approved by the Governor in Council.

4. In the administration of their powers by the Commission great care shall be taken to insure all applications being considered and determined with the utmost despatch.

5. There shall be no appeals from the decisions of the Commission, but every applicant for a pension, gratuity, allowance or assistance may present his or her case either personally or by counsel before the full Commission sitting for the purpose of hearing the complaints of those who may have been dissatisfied with decisions given in the ordinary course of administration.

6. The pension or other grant awarded any member of the forces, or any dependent of such member, shall not be assigned, charged, attached, anticipated or commuted, nor shall any assignment, charge, attachment, anticipation or commutation be recognized in any way by the Commission or any officer or servant of the Crown.

7. All pensions awarded to members of the forces shall be determined by the disability of the applicant without reference to his occupation prior to enlistment.

8. Each case shall be subject to review at the end of a year from the time when the pension is first granted, except in those cases where the disability is obviously permanent, and then there shall be no further review.

9. No deduction shall be made from the amount awarded to any pensioner owing to his having undertaken work or perfected himself in some form of industry.

10. The Commission shall make provision for the vocational training of those who are desirous of taking advantage of it, and for the supplying, from time to time, of artificial limbs and appliances to those who would thereby be benefitted.

11. The Commission shall have power to entrust to a reputable person for administration the pension or other grant to any pesioner or beneficiary when the Commission is satisfied that it is being improvidently expended by the pensioner or beneficiary, and the expense of such administration, if any, shall be borne by the Crown.

12. The following shall be the scale of pensions for total disability:

	Yearly
Rank and File	$ 480.00
Squad, Battery or Company Sgt.-Major; Squad, Battery or Company Q. M. Sergeant; Colour Sergeant; Staff Sergeant	510.00
Regimental Sgt.-Major not W. O.; Master Gunner not W. O.; Regimental Q. M. Sergeant	620.00
Warrant Officer	680.00
Lieutenant	720.00
Captain	1,000.00
Major	1,200.00
Lieutenant-Colonel	1,500.00
Colonel	1,800.00
Brigadier-General	2,700.00

13. Those who are entitled to be awarded pensions shall be divided into six classes, and each member of each class shall be awarded a pension in direct proportion to his partial or total disability, as follows:

Class 1. Total disability, 100 per per cent.

For example—
Loss of both eyes.
Loss of both hands, or all fingers and thumbs.
Incurable tuberculosis.
Loss of both legs, at or above the knee joint.
Insanity.
Permanent extreme leakage of valves of heart.

Class 2. Disability 80 per cent. and less than 100 per cent; pension 80 per cent. of Class 1.

For example: Loss of one hand and one foot; loss of both feet; disarticulation of leg at hip.

Class 3. Disability 60 per cent. and less than 80 per cent.; pension 60 per cent of Class 1.

For example: Loss of one hand; loss of leg at or above knee; loss of tongue; loss of nose.

Class 4. Disability 40 per cent. and less than 60 per cent; pension 40 per cent. of Class 1.

For example: Loss of one eye; loss of one foot; total deafness; loss of two thumbs.

Class 5. Disability 20 per cent. and less than 40 per cent; pension 20 per cent. of Class 1.

For example: Loss of one thumb; anchylosis of elbow, knee, shoulder, wrist or ankle.

Class 6. Disability under 20 per cent., a gratuity not exceeding $100.

For example: Total deafness in one ear; partial deafness in both; loss of index or other finger.

14. To those, up to and including the rank of Lieutenant, who are totally disabled and in addition are totally helpless so far as attendance to their physical wants is concerned, a further allowance may be of an amount not exceeding $250 a year, but such special allowances shall be subject to annual review.

15. Those, up to and including the rank of Lieutenant, who are disabled and are entitled to a pension in the 1st, 2nd or 3rd Class shall be paid, in addition to the personal, pension, a special allowance of $6 a month for each child; of the rank of Captain $7 a month for each child; of the rank of Major, $8 a month for each child; of the rank of Lieut.-Colonel, Colonel or Brigadier-General, $10 a month for each child. Child shall include a step-child and also a child in respect of whom the pensioner was loco parentis, but in either case only if the relation had been established before the pensioner's disability arose.

16. If a member of the forces has been killed, or has died as the result of injuries received, or disease contracted, or aggravated while on active service, the widow, until re-marriage, shall be entitled to the equivalent of the pension mentioned in Class 2, and also be entitled to draw the allowance for children. On the re-marriage of the widow her pension shall cease, but she shall be entitled then to a gratuity of an amount equivalent to one year's pension.

17. If a member of the forces who has been killed, or had died, as the result of injuries received, or disease contracted or aggravated while on active service, was a widower, but leaves a child or children as defined in Regulation 15, said child or children shall receive an allowance of $19 per month each.

18. In the event of an application being made for a pension on behalf of a woman who has, without being married to a member of the forces, lived with him as his wife, or on behalf of the child or children of any such man or woman, the Commission shall be authorized to grant the customary pension and allowance for a wife or for a child or children, on being satisfied that the circumstances were such as to warrant the conclusion that the woman had at the time of enlistment and for a reasonable time previously thereto, publicly been represented as the wife of said member, or if the Commission is satisfied that justice would be done by the recognition of such woman, for the purpose of a pension, as the wife of such member. On the marriage of the woman her pension shall cease, but she shall be entitled to a gratuity of an amount equivalent to one year's pension.

19. No allowance shall be paid to or in respect of any child, if a boy, over the age of seventeen, unless owing to mental or physical infirmity the child is incapable of earning a livelihood, in which case the allowance may, if in the discretion of the Commission it seems best, be continued until the child is twenty-one. No allowance shall be paid in respect of a child after the marriage of such child.

20. No pension or allowance shall be paid to a member of the forces or any person dependent upon him when the disability or death in respect of which the claim is made was occasioned by the negligence of such member, unless the Commission otherwise consent.

21. In all cases the claims by members of the forces for pensions must be made within two years of the date of the appearance of the disability in respect of which the claim is made.

22. A widowed mother, step-mother or grandmother wholly or mainly dependent upon a member of the forces who is killed or dies as the result of injuries received, or disease contracted or aggravated while on active service, if such member was without dependent children and unmarried, or, a widower, shall be entitled to a pension of Class 3, provided, however that no such woman shall be entitled to more than one pension. On the marriage of the woman such pension shall cease, but she shall be entitled then to a gratuity of an amount equivalent to one year's pension.

23. A father, wholly or mainly dependent upon a son who is a member of the forces and who is killed or dies as the result of injuries received or disease contracted or aggravated while on active service, if such member was without dependent children and unmarried, or a widower, shall be entitled to a pension of Class 3.

24. If a member of the forces to whom a pension has been granted in either Class 1 or Class 2 dies, leaving a wife to whom he was married at the time of his incurring the disability in respect of which his pension was granted, or a woman occupying at said time the position of a wife within the purview of Regulation 18, or leaving children by such wife or woman, the pension for the class next below that granted the said member shall be given said wife or woman, and the allowance on behalf of any child or children shall be continued subject to the restrictions as to age as provided by Regulation 19. On the marriage of the wife or woman her pension shall cease, but she shall be entitled then to a gratuity equivalent to one year's pension.

25. Pensions of widows and allowances to children shall take effect from the day following that on which the death of the member of the forces in respect of whom said pension is granted occurred, and a gratuity equivalent to two months' pension, or two months' allowance, shall be paid the first month in addition to the pension.

26. Subject to the approval of the Governor in Council the Commission may make such rules as it deems necessary for carrying out these regulations and the other duties assigned to it.

27. These regulations shall openly apply to or in respect of members of the forces serving in the Canadian Expeditionary forces during the present war; and shall be deemed to have come into force on the Fourth day of August, 1914, and shall apply to or in respect of all casualties occurring in the said forces since the said Fourth day of August.

amounts to practically an examination of what was done during the winter months and what is being done by the battalion now. The men are first tried out on the gallery ranges. Here the instructors learn the real value of the men as marksmen, and they are then advanced to the ranges. The 100 and 200 yard ranges are used for this, and the firing is done in every conceivable position.

So far the results have been entirely satisfactory, and when the men leave this district for the front they will most certainly take away a splendid musketry record.

Capt. W. E. Swaine is in charge of the work and has an able staff of assistants, who, being thoroughly experienced instructional work, are able to use the time to the best advantage.

The Kingston Whig says: The programme of moving pictures and illustrated hymn slides was added to in pleasure and profit by Master Percy Luther, of 93rd Battalion, and Pte. Farr, 93rd Battalion, who ably sang two solos on Tuesday night.

The big tent of the 93rd Battalion has been packed, and the general arrangements for a response to the call for quick overseas service are being made. No more entertainments for this battalion can be planned, but the men are really too busy making ready for their move for this work now in any case.—Kingston Whig.

The Kingston Whig says: There is more talk of a new battalion being formed to take the place of the 146th, but so far no announcement has been made. There are rumours that Peterborough, Belleville and Kingston will each be honoured with a battalion.

The recruiting proposition is becoming more and more acute now. The returns show that some 400 men enlisted in this district in the last two weeks of June. The supply is much less than the demand, and the young men do not appear to be coming forward in large enough numbers to fill in the vacancies caused by the men falling at the front. Though there may be some large French and British victories on the bulletins now, there is undoubtedly the resultant wastage of men.

Lieut.-Col. C. G. Dilliams, formerly of a little pariah near Lindsay, has taken on himself the task of raising the necessary number of recruits that should come from this district. He has secured a competent staff, and is receiving the assistance of the Women's Emergency Corps. Addresses on the need of men are being given practically every night in different places throughout the district for the cause.

It is a tremendous amount of work to raise men to complete the establishment of the units of this district and to secure enough men to fill others which will be raised. Every effort in home made, however, and with public support the result should be accomplished.

The majority of the recruiting staff of the 93rd Battalion and other members of the battalion here on sick leave or special duties left this morning for Barriefield camp to report for duty to the battalion. Among those who left were Sergt. Coleman, Sergt Theobald, Lance-Corp. Degan, Lance Corp. Livingstone, Pte. T. Hatley, J. Morrow, R. Mitchell, J. Cadd, Wildman, Corp. J. Semay, Pte. J. McFadden.

Petawawa, July 5th, 1916

THE ARMY SERVICE CORPS

There's a handful of men in the army, who seldom shoulder a gun;
And it's little they know about them when everything's said and done,
And they try to escape any notice as they quietly slip off to war,
For they never expect a send-off, in the Army Service Corps.

But they don't aim at capturing prisoners, nor at taking the enemy's flag,
But they serve in a humble vocation, for the sake of the grand Old Rag;
Amid the inferno of battle, in spite of the cannon's roar,
They keep on silently working, in the Army Service Corps.

When the foeman's heavy gunfire has scattered and smashed their supplies,
They take a good grip on their upper lip, with a "never-die-die in their eyes,
They hustle around and square things up, and they put them in order once more.
For they don't know the meaning of quitting, in the Army Service Corps.

While their fellow soldiers are resting, awaiting a new day's dawn,
They are desperately heaving and straining, with muscle, sinew and brawn,
For they must deliver the rations, altho they are weary and sore:
They are ripping good men who can stand it, in the Army Service Corps.

And when the war is over, and peace again shall reign,
This handful of men will silently turn back to their homes again
And they'll try to escape any notice as they quietly slip ashore;
It's a way they have of doing things in the Army service Corps.

DR. HUTCHINSON TELLS HOW TO COMBAT PERIL OF INFANTILE PARALYSIS

Disease 3,000 Years Old and Not Gravely Dangerous If Parents Act Quickly—(By Woods Hutchinson, A. M., M. D.)

The World's Best Known Writer on Medical Subjects.

Nowhere is the cynical old proverb, "There's nothing new under the sun," more nearly true than in the realm of human diseases. We hear much talk and excited comment about new diseases and modern diseases and diseases of civilization, but almost every one of them when we come to investigate it, has a written history centuries long and most of them are as old as the pyramids.

And this is no mere figure of speech for the latest "invention" of the devouring surgeon, according to popular superstition, appendicitis, was clearly described in the Seventh Book of the great Papyrus System of Medicine of the Egyptian priests.

While arterio-sclerosis, or hardening of the arteries, the most modern and threatening of modern plagues, is found in perfection, in its calcareous or chalky form in the mummies of the Seventh Dynasty.

The distressing and rapidly infectious paralysis of children which is now causing such alarm in Brooklyn, is no exception to this statement.

DATES BACK CENTURIES.

Though it was only recognized, named and clearly described about a hundred years ago, sudden and apparently uncaused paralysis, or laming of a leg or an arm in children, has been commented on by both laymen and physicians almost since the dawn of history.

One instance is even recorded in Scripture, that of Mephibosheth, the youngest son of Saul, King of Israel, who had a lifelong lameness in his feet," beginning in childhood. The case is the more interesting and typical, because the usual explanation is given for it, which is almost invariably forthcoming at the present day, that he was dropped by his nurse or had a fall of some sort.

It would be practically impossible to injure a healthy child by dropping him in such a way as to produce lifelong paralysis of one limb or one arm, without at the same time inflicting practically fatal injuries.

But some explanation of the lameness had to be furnished, and as a child's life is simply one unbroken series of tumbles, the history of a fall can always be produced on 48 hours' notice.

NOT GRAVELY ALARMING.

So that serious and distressing as the disease is, there is nothing new or gravely alarming about it. The one thing that stands out most clearly in its at least three thousand years' history is its comparative rarity, and the fact that it almost always occurred either singly or in small groups of rather scattered cases.,

In fact this was the reason why it was not recognised as an infectious and epidemic disorder until within comparatively recent times, when diseases began to be studied from the community and public health point of view.

Even to this day it is chiefly a disease of country districts, and few of its epidemics run over a few score of cases. And while occasionally it gets a foothold in the suburbs of the large cities, and here may run up to a thousand or more cases, it seldom spreads to their central and denser regions as the epidemic of 1900 in New York City did. For all of which there is a reason, as will be seen.

CHARACTERISTICS OF DISEASE.

Three things are characteristic of infantile paralysis.

First, its sudden and apparently causeless appearance. A child will be fretful and feverish for a day or so, go to bed practically well and wake up in the morning with an arm or a leg paralysed and motionless.

Second, its age limit, three-fourths of all cases being between two and five years of age ,although elder children, and occasionally even adults, may be affected, but this is rare.

Third, the scattering of the epidemic. Seldom is more than one child in a family affected and it will usually take a group of fifty or sixty families to furnish half a dozen cases. In fact, in country districts it usually takes several weeks to discover that an epidemic exists.

These peculiarities of the disease are due to the fact that it is until the paralysis strikes an infection so mild and so slight as to almost escape notice, or to be regarded as a common cold or touch of the grippe; or, as it comes usually in warm weather and is sometimes attended by vomiting, some form of digestive disturbance.

DOES NOT ALWAYS DEVELOP.

The infection can only attack children of a particular age, or who are especially susceptible to it, or else, as seems more probable, a great many children have the infection, with the fever and headache and digestive disturbances, who never develop any symptoms of paralysis.

The first point in prevention, then, is to promptly put to bed in a separate room every child who, during the absence of an epidemic, shows any signs of illness, particularly if there be fever.

This will both protect others, and probably diminish the likelihood of paralysis developing. Seldom do more than five to ten per cent. of the children who are exposed to the disease catch it, so far as we are able to estimate, at least to the extent of developing paralysis.

Children who develop the disease should either be sent to a special ward in a hospital or else be kept strictly isolated in a separate room, with only one adult in attendance upon the patient, and that one not coming in contact with any other children.

FARM LABOURERS WANTED.

The Western Provinces of Canada have experienced an acute shortage of farm labourers for spring seeding and summer work this year.

Even when times were normal throughout Canada moreover, it was always necessary to bring from twenty to thirty thousand labourers from eastern points for the harvest season.

As voluntary enlistments have been very heavy and inasmuch as a successful crop is predicted by the experts, grave fear is being felt along the lines of the Canadian Northern Railway, on account of the difficulty experienced in obtaining labour, which means steady work and good wages for all who visit in the districts served by the C.N.R.

Armenian Girls Are Sold In The Streets of Beirut

Misery of the People of Mount Lebanon is Beyond Description —A Whole People Doomed to Extinction.

CAIRO, May 26.—I cabled you last week of the death of 80,000 people in Mount Lebanon, Syria, of starvation. The cablegram of the United Syrian Society of New York in reply, asking for further details, was received today and will be read at the general meeting of Syrians here, which will be held at the Patriarchates of the Greek Catholic Church.

A Maronite priest sent from here to investigate conditions in Mount Lebanon was taken on a French torpedo boat and landed somewhere on the Syrian coast. He had great difficulty in getting into and out of the country. His story, as I have it from his own lips, is that the misery of the people of Mount Lebanon is past description. In one town alone, Ashkeut, only ninety-four people still exist, the rest of the people having perished of starvation. And the death rate has risen to such an extent that the Mutasarref (Governor) Munif Pasha, issued a decree allowing the people to bury their dead without a legal permit. But when he was appealed to he said: "And has any woman eaten her own child yet in Mt. Lebanon? No? Then there is no hunger and no famine in the land."

What little flour reaches Mount Lebanon is sold for 25 piastres a roll (about 20 cents a pound), while in Beirut it is sold for 5 piastres. And this flour is but a ground mixture of oats and fodder and sawdust.

Any one in Beirut or in Damascus who is found carrying bread to Mount Lebanon is arrested and punished, beaten with the lash.

Armenian girls are sold in the streets of Beirut for 10 or 20 piastures each; sold to Mohammedans only, for it happened that a Christian one day bought some of these girls to rescue them; but when the matter was brought to the attention of the Government they were taken away from him and he was whipped.

Among the many who were hanged for political offences was Joseph Hany, whose name was subscribed to a petition found in the archives of the French Consulate in Beirut, asking of France that Beirut be included in the autonomous plan of Mount Lebanon.

We have appealed to the French agent and the English Viceroy in Egypt, who promised to communicate with their Governments to the end that the Government of the United States or its agents undertake the distribution of food among the stricken people.

The last news reaching us from Mount Lebanon confirms the past reports. I quote from the latest communication, which is presumably from the Patriarch of the Maronites: "Send us food, not gold. For if gold were of any use to us at present I should have long since disposed of the gold and silverware of the churches to feed the starving people."

The relief committee which is to be organised under the auspices of the Sultan of Egypt, with one of the princes of the royal family for its chairman, is going to obtain for us permission of the Turkish Government to introduce foodstuff into Syria and Mount Lebanon.

The people of Mount Lebanon, according to the latest reports, are suffering untold miseries and privations; they are actually dying of hunger; the country is threatened with famine. And the recent visit of Enver Pasha to Syria, instead of affording hope of instant relief, has added to their distress and despair.

For Enver Pasha has cut off all food supplies from Mount Lebanon, except a miserable excuse for flour, a black mixture of oats and sawdust, of which a person gets but four kilograms every twenty-five days. This flour is not only nourishing, but engenders disease. The result is that people are perishing of hunger. Many of them are found dead on the roads and in the valleys, where they go seeking nourishment in the herbs, which they cannot find, for the locusts, to add to the afflictions of the country, have been for the last eleven months its unwelcome guest and have scarcely left a green thing.

All mules and horses and cattle have been requisitioned for the army, whole families have been driven, either by hunger or by the Government, to the interior; and the number of the dead is so increasing day by day that a permit was issued for the burial outside the cemeteries.

In many villages a third or more of the population have died of starvation. It is true that the people of Mount Lebanon are not permitted o buy any of the immediate necessities of life in Beirut. And whoever is found smuggling flour or bread into the mountains is stripped by the soldiers on guard and whipped. Hunting rights too have been suspended, and no one dares carry a shotgun.

Up to this month (May) about 80,000, it is estimated, have died of starvation.

As for the money that was sent to the people of Lebanon and Syria from their relatives in America, the Government has ordered the American missionaries who kindly undertook the transmission of it to deposit all sums received, in the names of their respective recipients, in the Imperial Ottoman Bank of Beirut. And then it issued an order to the Bank that said sums shall be paid in monthly instalments a year after the date on which they were deposited. And the payments shall be in bills, not in gold, at the rate of exchange of 80 piastures a pound sterling, which in normal times is worth 176 piastres.

A whole people, under these appalling circumstances, is doomed to extinction. And the gallows, which are still standing in the squares of the leading cities, are adding to the horror of the situation. Last month 11 people were hanged in Beirut; eight in Alei, Mount-Lebanon; seven in Damascus and nine in Haifa.

Overland Cars Selling Well

Thirty of These Popular Priced High Class Cars Sold by C. R. Banks

The sale of Overland Automobiles in Peterborough, to date, has reached the number of 30 (Thirty).

Mr. Banks has been advised by The Willys Overland Co. that prices for 1917 will be higher, and would suggest that intending automobile buyers look into this matter of rising prices, as it is a certainty that this condition will exist as long as raw material continues to advance.

Advance in price of some of the materials entering into the manufacture of automobiles, totals in some instances, to 1000 per cent.

The moral of the above is, buy now.

Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Personally I appreciate the intelligent view taken by the "Examiner" in its last evening's addition regarding the decision the Board of Education in adopting the moderate expenditure for improving the South Central School.

From all I can learn, the consensus of public opinion approve the wisdom of the 30 and I was not so much surprised to hear approval from the average ratepayer, who perhaps, has the present high rate of taxation uppermost in his mind; but I was not so sure of what practical men—our contractors and builders—had to say on the subject.

But they, too, are strongly in line with the intelligent ratepayer.

It was a narrow escape from the domination of "the old crow!" It is the first time in some years that they have had a check put on their policy of high-handed school expenditures. The condition of our affairs seemed to weight with them, their ideals were so high, and mighty, and wise. They were the people, and couldn't stoop to curb their clinical impulses or restrain their lofty (?) ambitions.

One was cheered and encouraged to read the sensible remarks of one of the new members of the Board, Dr. Neil. During the warm discussion his practical views on the subject and the kind of valuable information which he handed out to the Board, will give him a well merited place of regard in the views of the ratepayers.

SOUTH RESIDENT

Hairs Will Vanish After This Treatment

(Toilet Helps)

You can keep your skin free from hair or fuzz by the occasional use of plain delatone and in using it you need have no fear of marring or injuring the skin. A thick paste is made by mixing some of the powdered delatone with water. Then spread on the hairs and after 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and all traces of hair have vanished. Be careful however, to get real delatone.

Who Can Help In This Case?

Pte. Fitzclarence, who has been at the Kingston Home for partially disabled men is back in the city. He was considerably shaken up in doing his share and carries a hand that has been through the Langmaek fight. He wants a position as watchman, janitor or some such employment. Good man, in all respects. Who can help him to a place? Phone the Patriotic Fund office, and you will do a deserving service.

Annual Picnic of Park St. Church

The annual excursion of the Park Street Baptist Church and Sunday School took place to-day to Bewdley, on the shores of Rice Lake. The steamer Stoney Lake left the George Street wharf this morning with a full boat load, the fine, smiling morning causing all the members and friends of Rev. Dougald Brown's Church to take in the outing.

Warmest Day So Far This Year

The hot spell is still with us and is here with a vengeance. The thermometer to-day registered eighty-eight in the shade and thus marks to-day as the warmest day this year.

Yesterday the thermometer ran up to eighty-six. The warmest before that had been eighty-two which was registered some days ago. Judging by the present condition of the atmosphere Old Sol hasn't done his worst yet and the mercury may run up higher before the week end. This is no doubt one of the weatherman's annual extremes, known as the dog days.

LABOURERS WANTED—At once. Apply at the Gas Works. 3dg

WOODMEN EXCURSION

The annual excursion of Sherwood Forest Camp W. O. W will be held on Saturday July 8 to Harwood by steamer Stoney Lake, Reserve this date. The boat will leave at 1.30 o'clock

Divers Are Busy Trying To Float Steamer Price

EFFORT MAY BE MADE SHORTLY TO TURN CRAFT OVER.

Sarnia, July 7.—A representative of the press to-day made a trip to the wreck of the overturned steamer, Charles S. Price, which is being wrecked by the tug Favorite of the Great Lakes Company, and which is in a semi-floating condition ten miles out in Lake Huron from the mouth of the St. Clair River.

The work of wrecking the steamer Price, the forepart of which is floating while the back rests in 18 feet of mud, on the lake bottom, has not made much visible progress lately, as far as can be seen from the surface, but two divers have been working for ten hours a day during the fine weather of the past week in cutting a large hole in the hull near the stern, but which they expect to be able to get into the hull of the overturned craft and shut the compartment doors, which will enable them to keep the air into the forward section of the boat and also get considerable air into the aft section, which it is expected will be sufficient to hold the boat on the surface.

IS IN THE MUD.

The divers would give very little information about their work but it was learned from the crew that the stern section of the boat is in the mud about eighteen feet, while the deckhouses and upper works have been crushed flat by the weight of the hull resting on them.

The wreckers are not using any extensive plant to raise the boat, at the present time there being only a scow for each diver to work from, and the two tugs, Favorite and Sprankle. The latter being small tug compared to the Favorite and is used for running back to port and getting supplies.

The Favorite is anchored by a six-inch cable's point to one side of the wreck, and is held away this distance from the wreck at all times, an extra anchor being put into use when heavy weather sets in.

At different points in the bottom of the boat, which is at present the top, owing to her upside down condition, large valves have been placed, and through these with the use of an air-hose the boat is supplied with compressed air, which forces out all the water and keeps it afloat.

It is expected by the crew that they will have very little trouble in turning the craft upright when she is finally raised to the surface, but the wrecking master, Captain Cummings, would not give out any information as to how this feat will be underaken.

Furious Driving Causes Accident

Vehicle in Charge of a Couple of Men Collided With Automobile—One Man Removed to the Hospital

What came near being a very serious accident occurred at the corner of Hunter and Aylmer Street, late last evening, when a buggy, being driven north on Aylmer street, collided with one of Fountain's cars which was spinning west on Hunter street. It appears that the two occupants of the buggy, Edward McNutt and John Robinson, were indulging in some furious driving, having the idea, perhaps, that they were on a private driveway, instead of a public and rather busy thoroughfare. The result was that when the corner of Hunter was reached the car hove in sight, it was impossible to avert a collision and the automobile and buggy met. Both men in the buggy were thrown out of their seat, Robinson escaped scott free, and his partner, McNutt, receiving a severe cut in the head. Dr. Gallivan and Dr. Bruce Marshall rendered first aid to the injured and the injured man was removed to St. Joseph's Hospital by Dr. Gallivan.

Local Police Good Drivers

"We can't allow people's lives to be endangered by drunken drivers" remarked Magistrate Dumble this morning as he fined a local carter two dollars and costs for attempting to drive a horse whilst he was not in a condition to handle the reins. The accused was making such a poor attempt at driving last evening that East City residents complained and the local police had the kindness to take care of his outfit and drive it and its powerless owner to the station.

SWARMING BEES AND HOW TO CATCH THEM

This is the Swarming Season and a Flock of Them May Gather Any Time Now on Your Verandah Post or on the Chimney is one of the features of the routine affairs of nature at this particular season, and from different parts of the city have come little stories of the manner of the bees' hiving here and there in the strangest and, to their owners, the most incommoding places. One swarm swirled about the G.T.R. station on Wednesday and finally, led by the little queen, settled in a huge clump on a limb of one of the trees on the station green. Jack Foster rescued them in the prescribed way, without even as much as the sign of a sting. In fact they say that swarming bees are too full of honey to sting, and that it is a comparatively simple manner to capture them in the clump. The whole swarm follows the queen. In that respect they manifest a certain form of astigmatism that is almost human. However, when the bees are pending from the limb of a tree or an arm of an electric lamp post, the owner approaches with a long stick and a box on the end of it. At the same time he must be whistling "I'll be your honeysuckle, etc", in order to attract the queen. Any line of bunk like that gets the most of them. Then, while the little tyrant is looking around to decide which way to buss next give the tree, or the telegraph post a little shake and the whole piled up swarm drops with a honeyed thump into the box. It is very necessary that the queen should be there, and with her a captive the lid of the box is quickly dropped and home you go to the hive. It is unnecessary to bother about a few stragglers that have escaped the box. They will follow the box and eventually the entire swarm finds its errant self back in its own little two by four.

WHO CAN HELP.

HAVE YOU ENJOYED THE CIVIC BATHING PLACES? WHY NOT?

What many a man, and woman, too no doubt, would prefer these days instead of turning at street corners on the way to the store or factory would be to continue walking straight for the nearest water, and without hesitation, wade right into it, clothes and all. But with a measure of self-restraint, one can endure the welter until evening falls, and in the coolest part of the day hie himself or herself to the public bathing places, with their carefully raked and sandy beaches, their anchored floats to which one may swim out and pull himself on to like a turtle on a partly submerged log, then drop back again, return to the beach and enjoy the spring boards. It's great sport, thanks to the foresight of the city fathers who not only provided such splendid facilities, but also preserved for the people's enjoyment and use so many litoral stretches which might have been grabbed up by railways, industrial corporations and similar interests. Just about that time you pull the rubber plug, letting the water run out and inwardly remark, "thank goodness we still have our little tub."

Water Mains Now As Far As Smith Street

The new water main on George street being laid by the Utilities Commission, is down to Smith street today, having been carried south from Auburn crossing from Water street, at the north end of George street. The next work will be taken west on Smith street in the comprehensive scheme the Commission has outlined for service to the west and extreme south end of the city.

Remorse Believed Cause of Orphaned Chorus Girl's Death

NEW YORK, July 7. — Remorse probably killed pretty "Teddy" Roberts. Police investigating the asphyxiation of the girl in a Brooklyn apartment where she and two other couples had been having a week-end party had about decided on this theory to-day. It is expected that Chas. E. Lester, the young woman's companion in the apartment of his parents, would be released from custody.

"Teddy" Roberts' real name was Louise Mason. She was from Johnston, N. Y. An orphan early in youth, she was always vivacious, pretty and ambitious.

Not long ago she came to the city to study nursing. She craved just a little of the excitement the pleasure and the joy of life she saw everywhere downtown. The work was hard and she was lonely.

The theatre fascinated her and when a girl friend suggested her pretty face and figure would gain her a place on the stage she remembered her early success as a member of the village choir at home and left the nurses' school. Her striking beauty earned her an immediate engagement as a member of the Hippodrome chorus.

But the work was hard there, too, and she was still lonely. So one night she flirted just a bit with Charles Lester.

Their acquaintance grew. Lester gave her a glimpse of New York's Broadway glitter and last week, when he proposed a party with several others at his flat—Lester's parents being out of town—the girl consented.

When Lester awoke Monday morning, he smelled gas from the room adjoining, and entering, found pretty "Teddy" Roberts dead. She had left a note.

Her farewell message has not been made public, but the police theory of remorse was based on some of the bitter phrases of self-reproach which that farewell missive contained.

Italy Hard Put To Get Army's Iron

WORKS SARDINIAN MINES USED BY ROMAN REPUBLIC

Rome, July 7.—The iron mines of the Island of Sardinia, worked in the times of the Roman Republic to obtain metal for the arms of her legions are to-day being worked by the Italians in their need for artillery munitions. Never in her history has Italy so felt the need of iron or so recognized the lack of it in her soil.

Of the largest countries of the world barring Japan, Italy's soil is the poorest in iron ore, despite her care in developing the mines that she possesses. She yearly produces slightly more than four hundred thousand tons of pig iron, compared to more than 30,000,000 tons in the United States, 10,000,000 in England, 20,000,000 in Germany, and 2,300,000 in Austria-Hungary.

WAR ITSELF IS THE CRIME

NOT BRITISH BLOCKADE, SAY SOCIALISTS, BUT THE GOVERNMENT THAT PERMITTED THE WAR.

London, July 7.—A despatch to the Morning Post from Berne, says:

Swiss Socialist newspapers reproduce the text of a manifesto which is being distributed throughout the German Empire, in spite of the authorities, by a section of the Socialist party, which, led by Herr Haase and Herr Ledebour, is opposing the war. The broad sheet bears the title "Hunger" and following are some of the chief paragraphs:

"In Leipsic, Charlottenburg, Brunswick, Magdeburg, Coblenz, Oanisbruck and many other places there are noisy gatherings of hungry people in front of the provision shops. The only reply the Government has to the hungry cry of the masses is martial law, the police sabre, and military patrols.

THE RESPONSIBILITY

Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg accuses England of the crime of making Germany hungry, and those whose interest it is to continue war repeat it after him. The German Government must know, however, that this would necessarily happen; that a war against Russia, France and England must lead to the isolation of Germany, and that it has always been the endeavor of belligerents to cut off the enemy's supplies. It is the war that is the crime; the starvation plan is only a consequence of this crime."

The manifesto concludes with an appeal to the men and women of the working classes to raise their voices against the continuance of the war.

EXEMPTION FROM WAR TAX

Distilleries and Breweries Seek It—Deputation Visits Ottawa.

OTTAWA, July 7.—A deputation representing the Licensed Victuallers' Association of Canada asked the Government to exempt distilleries and breweries from the provisions of the War Tax Act in provinces where there is prohibitory legislation. Consideration was given the request, but no answer.

The deputation met in the office of Sir Thomas White. Other cabinet ministers present were Sir James Lougheed, Hon. E. L. Patenaude, Hon. Frank Cochrane, Hon. J. D. Reid and Hon. C. J. Doherty.

Ques.: "How much walking time" do you lose?"

Ans.: "Come again, Joe, I don't see it."

Ques.: "How often do your employees take a walk at your expense?"

Ans.: "Say—It's lunch time, don't keep me."

Ques.: "Wait a minute, this means hundreds of dollars to you. Answer me this one—where is the time recorded in your plant?"

Ans.: "At the factory door, of course."

Ques.: "Then they do take exercise at your expense? Your employees, I mean. They can take a quite a promenade couldn't they, from factory door to department door?"

Ans.: "Promenade, nothing. Why, what, what's the point?"

Ques.: "Why not put a Time Recorder at Each Department door? Then your employees can take all the time they need in the halls or the lavatories or cloak rooms. But they can't get into the bench until they are all ready for work and just then they "punch the clock." How about it?"

Ans.: "Sounds good. Put me next."

Ques.: "Will you write a letter TODAY? Address it to the International Time Recording Co., corner McGill and Notre Dame Street, Montreal, or to their Head Office, Anderson street, Toronto, for latest folders and prices. Remember your strongest competitor may be able to under quote you because he buys the biggest of all raw products, WORKING TIME, closer than you do. Shouldn't delay, should you?"

Lindsay's New Government Arsenal Will Employ 2,000

Operations Will be Under Way by September 15th—Corner Stone Will be Laid in a Few Days With Public Ceremony.

SIR SAM IN NEGOTIATIONS

LINDSAY, July 6.—The first wheels will be turning by the 15th of September in the new Dominion Government small-arms ammunition factory in this town. One cause largely contributing to Lindsay's getting this big Dominion arsenal is the fact that she has a large supply of electrical energy on tap.

The plant will be located in the South Ward, where a site of one hundred acres has already been bought and paid for. The contract for building the factory is in the hands of Westinghouse, Church & Kerr Co., engineers and contractors, of New York, who purpose to employ fully four hundred men on the erection of the buildings and the installation of machinery, bringing in a large number of men for this purpose. The buildings will be of concrete, steel and glass.

The number of employees is to be two thousand, it is announced, half of them men, one-fourth boys and one-fourth girls. They will work eight hours a day, and their wages are to be regulated by the Civil Service schedule. Millions of dollars, it is said, have already been expended on machinery, and a big rolling mill plant has been purchased outright in the United States.

Arrangements are under way to have the corner-stone of the factory laid with public ceremonies within the next few days.

A number of men from Lindsay will be sent to the ammunition factory at Quebec to learn the details of manufacture, to take responsible positions in the plant here.

Lieut.-Col. Weatherbee of Quebec, has charge of the Government end of the operations. Mr. T. H. Stinson acted as local purchasing agent for the Government in securing the site. A local committee of leading citizens worked in conjunction with the Minister of Militia in the negotiations.

LATE WAR DESPATCHES

ROME, July 7.—Italian troops here captured two important positions near Caserazebio and Malgaposza, repulsing a violent counter attack and driving back the Austrians with heavy losses.

AMSTERDAM, July 7.—That a portion of the German High Seas forces swept through the waters close to the English coast on Wednesday last capturing the British steamer Lestris, was announced in an official statement from the German Admiralty to-day.

PETROGRAD, July 7.—Russian armies in Southeastern Galicia are now within ten miles of both Stanislau and Nadvorna, and are pressing their advance westward despite increasingly stubborn resistance, the Austrin force that evacuated Mikuliczyn giving the Russians comand of an important railway are now retiring southward toward the Carpathian mountains. The number of prisoners captured since the offensive began is more than 242,000, including many Germans.

GRUMBLER'S COLUMN

The "dog-days" are to all appearances upon us with a vengeance and the tired, dressed up adult is beginning to writhe and sweat under the burning rays of a "dog-day" sun. Oh, for the happy days of untroubled, unattired youth before we were shod with twentieth century footgear and 'ere the inevitable burden of daily labour was laid upon our young shoulders. Those days when we wended our way to the favourite swimming haunt and disported all day in the refreshing, cool "aqua" and rivalled the "finny tribe" itself in our stunts of diving and remaining under water. True we may not have known the comforts of pocket money or pay days, but we had the happy faculty of being able to dodge the cruel weather man when he reached one of his intolerable moods and ran the mercury up "sky-high." It was ever thus and since man "was born to murmur and complain' poor weak, human nature must be pardoned when it rails and cries against the vagaries and whims of the weather man.

Man can never be expected to reach the utopian stage of complete satisfaction with himself and existing conditions of life and its environments, even as regards weather, so when your neighbour kicks about the weather and the heat, show your policy and knowledge of human nature by kicking with him.

PROPOSED BY-LAW WAS CONSIDERED

FUNERAL OF LATE LILY M'GREGOR

The funeral of Lily McGregor, of Atwood, wife of the late Dr. Kidd, took place today at three o'clock from Bellegham's undertaking parlours and proceeded to Little Lake cemetery for interment. Rev. Mr. Wilson of Oshawa, a relative of the deceased lady, officiated at the grave.

A YEAR AND EIGHT MONTHS IN HOSPITAL

when walking will not unduly tire his leg as it does now.

Of the determined spirit exhibited by the people of England, of their kindness to the soldiers, and especially the care and solicitude of those ladies who have both the leisure and the means to visit the hospitals, Lance Corporal McIntosh stated that these were everywhere wonderful experiences. Lance Corporal McIntosh desires his friends who sent him comforts and other remembrances while he was in the hospital to know how much he appreciated their thoughtfulness, and asked the Examiner to thank them for their many gifts.

Before leaving England he met his brother Angus of the 21st Battalion, and another brother, Corporal Lionel McIntosh of the 92nd Battalion is spending a few days with him at home.

SOLDIERS' STORIES OF THE OPENING OF THE BIG PUSH

QUESTION OFTEN ASKED HAS BRITAIN AMPLE SUPPLY OF SHELLS.

Press Camp, British Army in France, July 7.—Battalions which have been fighting since the battle began now have been relieved from the front line and are in billets in quiet villages or towns free from the sound of shell blasts or cracking bullets. Answering questions as to what they wanted most when relieved, they invariably answered in three words, "Sleep, wash, shave."

Every battalion is proud of keeping its formation until the first line of the German trenches was reached and of the fact that the new army made good. One battalion with whose officers the correspondents talked, met machine gun fire and lost its officers and men before reaching the first line trench, but fought its way on another thousand yards to an objective set for it, where it entrenched, and maintained its position. One of the officers of this battalion served out biscuits and half a bottle of soda water to each man from supplies found in the German dugouts. The British, who had to subsist on their travel rations for the first few days, in some instances, were served from shortage by the German rations which escaped destruction by shell fire. These included canned German beef, which was found to be good.

GERMAN LETTERS FOUND.

Talks with prisoners generally revealed that the German soldiers have food, while letters from their homes in every part of Germany indicate privations of the civilian population.

Asked what he thought of the great naval battle, one prisoner said he never heard of it. Another said that fresh eggs had been a great luxury in the German army and that a basket of them had just arrived and that the Germans in his trench were feasting their hungry eyes upon it when a British howitzer made a direct hit. One British officer found his favourite brand of cigars in a German officer's dugout.

German Toys Lose Favour After English Exhibition

London, July 6.—The idea that England was necessarily dependent on Germany for her toy supply is one of the illusions shattered by the war. In future Hun toys will be replaced by British made toys, or toys made in America, or by Britain's allies in the present war. One is directly reminded of the Hun in the Toy Exhibition at the Whitehall Art Gallery only by some unsparing effigies of German unstabilities, and a set of ninepins surmounted by pickelhauben.

Since the war began great developments have taken place in the toy-making industry in England, and the progress made in design and craftsmanship is well illustrated in this exhibition.

Prominent among the larger toys is a set of seven models, the Gates of Old London, just as they appeared about the middle of the eighteenth century. A collection of silhouette toys, made of wood, includes a hunt in full cry. For the war like there are knights, clad in realistic tissue armor, on mettlesome chargers of shock-resisting wood.

A Tudor doll's house, the work of the Queen's Park toymakers, was purchased by Queen Mary.

Some of the most attractive exhibits have been made by disabled soldiers and sailors, and much is the work of children. Under supervision they will turn out a market place with every figure keen on a bargain; or again, fired by Scott or another, a tournament in which the horses are no less desperately in earnest than the combatants.

There are of course many charming dolls in elegant apparel and animals innumerable. One remembers especially a stuffed elephant positively bursting with suppressed sagacity. And all are amiable, save one mirthless monkey, which is haranguing a guffawing hippopotamus.

There are examples on work by men and women artists, East End working girls, cripples, cottagers, all arranged with artistic care. One is especially struck by the wit and humor, the vitality and movement of line which characterise many of the toys. In the Noah's ark, for instance, cleverly chiselled animals literally prance into the ark, each with an individual and jocund gait. Curiously enough, there are comparatively few military toys, peaceful subjects such as farmyards, windmills, merry-go-rounds, dove cotes and so on, being much more popular. The ugly toy of the "gollywog" variety has practically disappeared. There are not many mechanical toys in which "the wheels go round."

But there are dolls, hundreds of dolls, lent by Mr. Edward Lovett, of Cardiff, who is willing to give them, with many other toys, to form the nucleus of a museum for children in some poor part of London. Many of them are ancient and superstitious, fashioned to valet the dead man in his coffin, or ranged about the domestic temple—the hearth—to preserve the living from drought or flood. Among them is a curious wooden image carved by a Lancashire lunatic, which, anticipating as it does some recent developments in painting, suggests the reflection that what mad Lancashire thinks to-day artistic London may think to-morrow.

There are dolls from Palestine and dolls from Russia, jolly little peasants from Switzerland and stuffed dolls made by the natives of the Crimea; dolls from Belgium, and dolls from Serbia, edible dolls and spirit dolls, ancient dolls and performing dolls, and a host of others.

A splendid collection of toys, the work of a Russian artist, was made to the order of the Board of Trade and will serve as models for future workers.

On the mascot industry it is interesting to see the war has had a stimulating effect. It has for instance sent up the price of cauls from 15 cents to $10.00.

"Remember The Boyne" Shout Ulstermen as They Charge

Prom Camp, British Army in France, July 7.—The story of the Ulster division's share in the first day battles of the Anglo-French offensive is now accessible. It had one of the most terrible parts of the difficult attack in the northern section of the offensive. Its trenches were disadvantageously located on ground facing a ridge where the German batteries had an enfilading fire.

Through curtains of shrapnel fire, in the face of machine-guns and under enfilading fire from machine-guns in a village, the division captured the first German line, shouting, "No Surrender" and "Remember the Boyne," and started for the second line.

Still under cross fire and every kind of shell-fire, the troops of the Ulster division continued on until they gained a strong redoubt on the summit of the ridge. There those who had survived dug in. Against German counter-attacks and machine-gun and rifle fire from two sides, they held on until they had no more bombs or cartridges.

FIGHT ALMOST TO LAST MAN

Hopelessly shut off from further supplies by German curtains of shell fire, they had to fall back, bringing two hundred prisoners to the German first line of trenches, passing through curtains of fire to do so. Here they established themselves and stuck until help came.

An English battalion from York-shire and Lancashire, caught in the same position so far as known, fought almost to the last man in heading the Germans north of the Ancre, while battalions further south made uniform progress.

All reports of prisoners agree that the Germans expected the real centre attack would be north of the Ancre. Regular army officers say that nothing in the annals of the Guards, or of any other regular regiments in the battle of Ypres, or in the history of the British army surpasses the gallantry of these Kitchener battalions, which kept pressing on towards the objective not for them when half their numbers were down.

CANNOT CRY "SLACKERS" NOW

"The world will not refer to the English as slackers after this, we hope," said one of the surviving officers. Already the gaps in the battalions are being filled with drafts. Again and again officers and men of the battered battalions were heard to say they hoped the army would continue to press the offensive while the enemy was staggering.

The irregularity of the losses, in which some battalions came off almost unscathed, while others were badly hammered, is characteristic of modern frontal attacks.

GERMANS SAVE MONEY

Probably Because They Can't Buy What They Need.

THE HAGUE, July 7.—According to the Sparkasse, the organ of the German savings banks, new savings accounts during the second year of the war have increased in Germany as never before during times of peace.

To avoid the long lines of meat ticket holders that have blocked the streets outside the butcher shops, butchers in German cities are issuing numbered tickets. Announcement is made on the slip before of the numbers which entitle their holders to make purchases.

WORLD'S GREATEST STOREKEEPER SAYS ADVERTISING PAYS

John Wanamaker, of Philadelphia, Tells of His Own Experience—Sends Open Letter To Advertising Clubs

PREACHES GOSPEL OF GOOD ADVERTISING AND TRUE ADS.

Philadelphia, July 7. — Numerous meetings of the various departmental and sectional bodies of the 12th annual convention of Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, were on the programme, and many interesting papers on various features of advertising were read and discussed at the recent convention.

An asphalt ball was a novelty provided. A square on Broad street was washed and scrubbed and the delegates and others at the recent convention, danced on the thoroughfare to music furnished by the city's band.

JOHN WANAMAKER'S IDEAS.

When John Wanamaker, founder of the greatest retail store in the world, closed his first day's business in 1861, he had $24.67 "in the old-fashioned till under the counter."

He left the 67 cents in the till to start the second day's business, and spent the $24 in newspaper advertising.

Ever since, he says, he has been using the daily newspapers because he found "that the only advertising of direct and instant benefit to both merchant and customer is in the daily newspaper of known circulation."

Mr. Wanamaker tells the story in an open letter which he addressed to the Associated Advertising Clubs convention now holding its session here. He says:

"This great advertising convention may do for Philadelphia a splendid work, and its influence may spread the country over.

"The advertising convention that assembles to-day at the University of Pennsylvania, for this week at least, draws the eyes of the whole country upon Philadelphia, and it is a very important convention, because its opportunities are so large.

"Doubtless, people, who buy goods from stores all over the country are waiting to see what it will do to clear up all the uncertainties and remove the poison gases that have caused so many to begin wondering whether advertising is a good thing for the customer or not.

THINGS AD. MEN CAN DO.

"This important work is within the power of the convention to do:

"1. It can put the branding iron of its disapproval upon the practice of merchants who continually claim to sell merchandise for prices less than the merchandise is worth in the market.

"2. It can warn the publishers of the newspapers against printing on their white paper, now so costly, many unbelievable statements which they accept without verification, and which the public finds to be untrue.

"3. It can call on the officers of the law to regard their oaths and enforce statue laws, painstakingly devised and solemnly enacted to protect the people from dishonest advertisers.

"4. It can silence the tongues of so-called 'advertising experts' and 'advertising counsellors,' who go about the country claiming to be the teachers and educators and trainers of an advertising profession, inventing club schemes and star days and hour sales and other such devices by which unthinking people are fooled.

"5. It can explain openly and frankly and sincerely, once and for all, that many high priced advertising experts are trying to do something to deserve their high salaries rather than in the interests of the public.

"When this little store closed its doors on the first day's business away back in 1867, the sum of $24.67 was found in the old fashioned till under the counter; the 67 cents was left there and the $24 was taken out by the founder and spent with the newspapers, which were asked simply to say that the new store was open and doing business, and had a good stock of goods useful to the public.

"Our little allowance of advertising money went to the newspapers then, as it goes, nearly altogether, to-day, because if I ever have a monument for discovering anything it will be for finding out that the only advertising of direct and instant benefit to both merchants and customers is in the daily newspaper of known circulation. All others are vanity and vexation of spirit. To have learned this fact has greatly helped my enterprises, though often there has been serious discomfort in saying so publicly, and breaking away from leaflets and weeklies.

"Throughout fifty-five years of experience we have not been able to discover that there was any other rightful function of advertising than to do just that one thing—to inform the public that the merchant had brought in certain goods, with a proper description of them, and what the honest prices were.

A LESSON FROM THE PHOENICIANS.

"It is just as it was in the old days of trade, such as were mentioned a short time ago by Vice Provost, Dr. Josiah H. Penniman, of the University of Pennsylvania, when he made a speech, in which he mentioned that among the earliest traders were the Phoenicians, who lived on the coast of Palestine, and carried on by sea commerce with other people.

"It is easy to look and picture in the mind those early merchandise mariners bringing their ships into the ports of Tyre and Sidon and Carthage and sending messengers about the streets to tell the people that they had brought to them the goods that they needed.

"That was advertising in its true, useful sense—and that is all we merchants have any right to do to-day—simply to send forth our messengers to tell the people that we have been at pains to get the goods they want, and that we have them ready.

"Our greatest effort for years has been to keep to this simple, serviceable form and go no further.

"What is the use of building up a tremendous, vastly expensive, unnecessary army of advertisers throughout the country, almost as big and certainly as costly as the largest army that the most enthusiastic preparedness advocates want to have the government raise to carry rifles?

"What good does it do to have a false advertising element stand between the merchant and his customers?

"Surely the people will after a while realise that there is an immense amount of wastage, and it must be paid for by the people who buy the goods.

A TASK FOR THE CONVENTION.

"What will the advertising convention with its delegates gathered from all over the United States do to correct the manifest evil?

"1. Who will stand up and say plain words to halt the magazines and the newspapers which insist upon great sums of money to be paid for advertising without taking any steps to ascertain whether qualities or prices are as stated?

"2. Who will make up the committee to take yesterday's and to-day's advertisements in the newspapers, and compare their statements strictly and expertly with the merchandise that is offered and find out what is true, and what is false?

"3. Who among the newspaper publishers and managers in this convention will stand up and declare that they will accept no more advertising at any price whatever until it has been proven true?

"Gentlemen of the advertising convention of the world:

"You are in the front rank of the highest business intelligence in America to-day. You are members of a great legislature and judicial body powerfully influential.

"You have made yourselves responsible by your guiding power over commercial publicity.

"And it is to you that all of us outside of your membership (being plain merchants and not professionals in advertising) will listen to hear what you say, and will weigh carefully the result of your deliberations."

"BILL" BRYAN, PEACE MAKER, STARTS RIOT — IN U. S. ARMY CAMP

PEEKSKILL, N.B., July 7.—An unusual censorship of news at the state camp near here yesterday, the refusal of officers to be interviewed and the reticence of enlisted men about the affairs of the camp led to the disclosure to-night that something akin to a riot had occurred in the camp of the 47th Regiment, National Guard, New York, of Brooklyn yesterday. It was reported that Company M, practically to a man, had been ordered under arrest, and put under guard in the company's street in the absence of a guard-house commodious enough to quarter the whole company.

Such versions of the affair which became public were given by soldiers who visited town and were led to talk to acquaintances made here since the 47th went into camp. They talked little, however, and never when another member of the regiment was within hearing, so accounts lack detail.

They concurred in the declaration that Company M had gone on the rampage. The outbreak came, it appeared after Wm. Jennings Bryan who had been a Fourth of July visitor to the camp, had departed. Mr. Bryan made an address to the centennial celebration of this town, and while he did not speak on peace exactly, he expressed the hope that none of the guard-men would be called to kill or to be killed.

Whatever the sentiments of the soldiers, Company M apparently waited only until the former secretary of state had left camp before they armed themselves with tin cans, sticks, pans, and anything that would make a racket and started down the company street toward the mess tent at the end. According to the various stories of the occurrence, the company contented itself with raising a din and shouting that it wanted more to eat and a chance to fight, one or the other, or both, but no more inactivity and poor grub.

THE FIRST HALF HOLIDAY

Splendid Water Trip to Gore's Landing on The Stoney Lake

Yesterday was the first Thursday in July. As a consequence it was the first half-holiday of the summer season.

Among other attractions offered was a trip by the good steamer "Stoney Lake" to Gore's Landing, promoted by the "Ladies' Aid" of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church. But the company assembled was by no means confined to good Presbyterians, for Anglicans, Romanists, Methodists and others were to be found enjoying themselves on a God-given day, without any question of sect or creed.

The day was everything to be desired. The sky was cloudless, the sun shone forth with all its might, but the keenness of its rays was tempered by a delicious breeze.

At 2 p.m. the Stoney Lake loosed from its moorings at George street wharf, carrying a company of somewhere around two hundred and twenty-five, all bent on enjoying the delightful cruise down the Otonabee river and across Rice Lake. The trip down the Otonabee is always pleasant, the various windings of the river, which give it its name—an Indian one which means serpentine—providing ever varying scenes and vistas.

At 5.15 p.m. Gore's Landing was reached, where a stay of an hour and a quarter was made. Of course picnic hampers were immediately raided by those who brought them, others went to the hotel. Some went to visit the pretty little Anglican Mission Church near the landing or roamed into the woods until the warning whistle tooted at 6.30. In ten minutes everybody was back on board and the return trip was commenced. Everyone enjoyed the sail homewards, with music and mirth to vary the different pastimes, and knitting ran them close seconds.

It is needless to say that every attention was given to the numerous passengers by Mr. Frank Young, the managing director of the Stoney Lake Navigation Co., who accompanied the trip. And it goes without saying, that Captain Scollard, who always contributes so well to the comfort and happiness of his human freight, made no exception in this instance.

At 9.45 the steamship was moored at the government wharf, all and sundry having expressed the idea that this, the first half holiday trip of the season, had been a huge success.

An Easy Way To Get Fat And Be Strong

The trouble with most thin folks who wish to gain weight is that they insist on dragging their stomach or stuffing it with greasy foods; rubbing on useless "flesh creams," or following some foolish physical culture stunt, while the real cause of thinness goes untouched. You cannot get fat until your digestive tract assimilates the food you eat.

There is a preparation known to reliable druggists almost everywhere which seemingly embodies the missing elements needed by the digestive organs to help them convert food into rich, fat-laden blood. This modern treatment is called Sargol and has been termed the greatest of flesh-builders. Sargol aims through regenerative, re-constructive powers to coax the stomach and intestines to literally soak up the fattening elements of your food and pass them into the blood, where they are carried to the starved, broken-down cells and tissues of your body. You can readily picture what results this amazing transformation should produce as with increased weight the cheeks fill out, hollows about neck, shoulders and bust disappear and from 10 to 20 pounds of solid, healthy flesh is added to the body. Sargol is absolutely harmless, inexpensive, efficient. All leading druggists of this vicinity have it and will refund your money if you are not satisfied, as per the guarantee found in every package.

If you find a druggist who is unable to supply you send $1.00 money order or registered letter to the National Laboratories, 78 St. Antoine St., Montreal and a complete ten days' treatment will be sent you postpaid in plain wrapper.

NOTE.—Sargol is recommended only as a flesh builder, and while excellent results in cases of nervous indigestion, etc., have been reported care should be taken about using it unless a gain of weight is desired.

In an Ohio town is a colored man, whose last name is Washington. Heaven has blessed him with three sons. When the first son arrived the father named him George Washington. In due season the second son came. Naturally he was christened Usher Washington. When the third male child was born his parent was at a loss for a name for him. Finally, though, he hit on a suitable selection. The third son, if he lives, will go through life as Spokane Washington.

Common Meals For The People

Spartan System Revived as a German Experiment.

Early in the war Germany reverted to the age of Lycurgus by coining iron money. Now another Spartan usage is to be adopted, the syssitia or phiditia, the common meals which gave origin to the phrase "Spartan fare." It does not appear that any general introduction of this system is to be made at present, but Karl H. von Wiegand, a trustworthy Berlin correspondent, says that the experiment is to begin at Charlottenburg, the fashionable residence suburb of the Prussian capital. If it succeeds it will be extended.

But the fare at this common mess will not be the notorious "black broth" of Sparta, which at once tried the stomachs of visitors and gave them a wholesome dost of the people who could subsist on such rations. In many ways Prussia offers the closest parallel to Sparta to be found in the modern world. In Sparta, we are told in the books, "the citizens only existed for the State, he had no interest but the State's." The country was a camp, and every man a soldier. The system prevailing was a combination of aristocracy and socialism. Every citizen was entitled to a share in the common inheritance, for the express purpose of providing the commonwealth with a great number of stout soldiers. The work which is now largely done by machinery was given to helots, so that the Spartans might have more time for military drill. The State "took care of a Spartan from his cradle to his grave, and superintended his education in the minutest points, and this was not confined to his youth but extended throughout his whole life."

In paternalism Prussia has little to learn from Lacedaemon, but in the matter of appetite the Baltic has little in common with the Mediterranean. It was part of the Spartan programme to destroy any insidious beginnings of luxury by providing a diet which mortified the stomach. The German people have no taste for mortification of that kind, and Mr. von Wiegand lays stress upon the quality of the fare to be offered at the common mess: "As food will be purchased by the city in vast quantities, cooked and prepared in immense kettles under scientific supervision, it will insure both quality and quantity, which home buying and cooking cannot give."

How the quantity will be increased is not very clear, and superiority in quality by wholesome advantage appears to be a competitive advantage which must disappear if the common table should become general. Yet even in this respect the common mess offers obvious advantages, in cooking if not in buying, for every article of food, good or inferior, can be used according to its quality, which is not always possible in the household. In so thorough and so scientific a country we may expect to see the thing done as well as it can be done; a common table in England, where quality is sought in the foodstuff rather than in the cookery, would be likely to prove a common mess in more senses than one.

If the "phiditia" proved successful in war time, the question will arise whether they are to be given up in peace. In Berlin proper where the system is not at present to be attempted, vast municipal kitchens are to be provided which will serve some the same purpose so far as the poor people are concerned. The first is to be opened in the great market hall in Tragowstrasse on July 10, and that others to follow soon will provide a quarter of a million rations daily at the cost of 8 cents each. With the economy in time, work, and [illegible] be so striking that the public will insist on the continuance of the municipal kitchen when the emergency is past? The war has brought true socialism, a dream of socialism, and this part-a far dream of a common mess [illegible] the abolition of kitchen drudgery, one that has fascinated most believers of Utopias. At all events, the experiment in Charlottenburg will be most interesting to watch.

A young fellow who was the crack sprinter of his town—somewhere in the South—was unfortunate enough to have a very dilatory laundress. One evening, relates Harper's, when he was out for a practice run in his rather airy and abbreviated track costume, he chanced to dash past the house of that dusky lady, who at the time was a couple of weeks in arrears with his washing. He had scarcely reached home again when the bell rang furiously and an excited voice was wafted in from the porch. "Foh de Lawd's sake! won't you-all tell Marse Bob please not go out no mob till I kin git his clo'es round to him?"

Germans Send Reserves To Check Drive

Paris, July 7.—The vastly important fact of the Picardy offensive, which is not important from surface indications, is that General Joffre, thanks to the deathless Verdun stand and the Somme drive, has forced the Kaiser's western legions into five distinct armies.

This means that General von Falkenhayn has found it necessary to prepare for the moment when open battle shall decide whether he stays in France or seeks behind the Rhine refuge or destruction.

Half a million men, commanded by the Bavarian Crown Prince, are trying to stem the Franco-British attack. At least another half million, under the Imperial Crown Prince, are committed to the life and death struggle in the Meuse.

THREE OTHER ARMIES.

The remaining three Teuton armies are the Duke Albert of Wurtemberg's force, including all the German marines, facing Ypres; Von Heeringen's army, holding the centre line in Champagne, and the Landwehr and Landsturm formation in the Vosges and in Alsace.

The cream of the German armies as regards quality and numbers, therefore, is fighting under the eyes of the two Crown Princes, heirs of the Prussian and Bavarian houses, the mainstays of the Empire.

"It is significant," said my informant, "that the dynastic scions should emerge as the leaders at this supreme moment of the war.

"The Bavarian Crown Prince's army is the only section of the German forces on the western front that has not passed through the Verdun furnaces. It has been held in readiness to meet the Franco-British stroke.

If the Allies shatter it, the moment for the general German retreat will have been sounded, for the Imperial Crown Prince's badly mauled army is not in condition to retrieve the disaster further north.

FORCED GERMANS TO ECHELON.

"We have forced the Germans to echelon their armies in deep columns. They can no longer carry out their trench warfare as previously, for they have not sufficient men.

"The moment is not far distant when the Bavarian Crown Prince's line will be worn so thin that he will be compelled to muster his troops for a gigantic pitched battle, which will prove the crowning point of the offensive.

"Already his losses have been so severe and the situation has become so critical that, as we know, the general emergency reserve for the whole western front, which can be employed only at the Kaiser's orders, has been ready in automobiles from Cambrai to the Picardy front.

"These reserves consist of two Prussian guard divisions."

WEDDING BELLS

McCALL—DAVY.

At the residence of Mrs. Thomas Castle, 166 Dufferin street, on Wednesday, July 5, Rev. Benj. Greatrix united in marriage Mrs. Alice Maud Davy and Mr. Charles McCall, of Smith Township. The attendants were Miss V. Castle and Mr. B. Micks.

Mr. and Mrs. McCall will reside in Smith.

PLUMPTON—HILL

A very quiet wedding was solemnized at the George Street Methodist parsonage on Wednesday, July 5th, when Elizabeth Grace Hill, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Hill of Lakefield was united to John Charles Plumpton, third son of Mr. and Mrs. Levi Plumpton of Peterborough. They were assisted by Mr. William Hill, brother of the bride and Miss Anna Gifford, friend of the bride.

The bride was dressed in a white silk flowered voile with hat to match, while the bridesmaid was dressed in pale blue silk chiffon. After the ceremony the happy couple motored to the home of Mr. and Mrs. David White, 533 Waterford street where a dainty luncheon was served. The happy couple will reside at 533 Waterford street.

FORESAW 50,000 WIDOWS.

Lord Kitchener Expected Deaths in War Would Exceed Estimates.

LONDON, July 6.—Lord Kitchener's estimate of the number of women in this country who would be made widows by the war was mentioned by Hayes Fisher when presiding at a meeting of the Royal Patriotic Fund Corporation at Middlesex Guildhall.

"I well recollect," said Mr. Fisher, "in the early days of the war, when I was consulting with the members of the Government as to the number of widows that in all probability would be created by the war. They did not number more than 2,000 then, and the highest estimate of any one was 50,000, a suggestion made by myself. When that figure became known to Lord Kitchener he sent a message to those who were responsible for making provision for the war widows, saying that they must make provision for at least 80,000."

Since the war broke out, added Mr. Fisher, grants had been made by the Royal Patriotic Fund to 34,000 widows of soldiers, 1,000 widows of sailors, 34,738 children, and 24,000 other dependents. The total cost of this had been $1,784,530. The Admiralty had just informed him that as the result of the recent great naval battle there had been added 1,550 widows to the list and 1,200 to the list of other dependents. Grants to these were being sent week by week, and the grants would apply to all whose claims arose before June 30.

PART PLAYED BY VERDUN

PARIS, July 7.—In announcing the Russian success in Galicia to the French troops at Verdun on June 18, General Joffre issued the following order of the day:

"The plan ripened in the council of the coalition is now in full operation. Soldiers of Verdun, we owe it to your heroic resistance, which has been an indispensable condition of success and the basis of our approaching victories, for it is that resistance which has created on the whole European war theatre a situation from which will emerge the final triumph of our cause."

Death Of A Lakefield Resident

The death occurred in Lakefield this morning of William Cox. Deceased, who resided on Regent street, was widely known and highly respected. He was seventy years of age.

The funeral will take place on Monday from the family residence, Lakefield, at three o'clock. Service at two-thirty o'clock. Interment at Ray's cemetery.

HOW YOU MAY REDUCE YOUR WEIGHT

Overstoutness is a very unwelcome condition especially in the present day, when slender figures are so fashionable, and every reader of this paper has noticed the tendency of some people to put on an excessive amount of fat.

If you happen to be one of those whose weight is more than it should be, don't try to starve yourself, eat all you want, but go to your druggist and get oil of orilene in capsule form and take one with each meal.

Oil of orilene increases the oxygen-carrying power of the blood and dissolves the fatty tissue, in many cases at nearly the rate of one lb. per day. Be sure to get oil of orilene in capsule form. It is sold only in original sealed packages. Any good druggist has it, or a large size box will be sent on receipt of $1.00. Address D. J. Little Drug Co., Box 1503, Montreal, Can.

COMPLAINS OF ILLNESS.

THE ENEMY FAILS TO STEM THE RUSSIAN ADVANCE

Russians at the Carpathians Menace Hungary, Beat Teutons Back in Galicia and on Dvina

Initiative Passing to the Allies, Both East and West, and While There is Comparative Lull in Battle on the Somme the Tsar's Armies Are Crushing the Austrians and Holding Germans Back Further North.

HALF A MILLION TEUTONS OUT OF ACTION

LONDON, July 8.—With an admitted Austrian defeat below Kolomea, a retirement by Count von Bothmer's Germany army in Galicia and the cutting of one of his railway supports, the terrific punishment being inflicted on the Germans in Lithuania and, above all, the active menace by the Russians against Hungary, the Eastern theatre of war loomed large in yesterday's news.

The results of the staff conferences of the Allies in London in May and June are becoming continually more apparent in the co-ordination of the Allied attacks on the Teutonic forces and increasing evidence of the initiative passing from the Teutons to the Allies at almost all points.

The French and British armies are now engaged in reorganizing and preparing for the second phase of the battle of the Somme and there is a comparative lull on the Western front, but the day's news from Petrograd is highly important in the light of the future development of the Somme battle. The news that the Russians have captured 5,000 prisoners on the Dniester front appears to leave little doubt of the collapse of the Austrian forces between Buczacz and Stanislau.

The prospect of Field Marshal von Hindenburg being able to make an effective diversion is believed here to be dwindling, and while the Germans are desperately engaged in trying to meet the Russian offensive at Baranovichi, the Russian General Kaledines is developing a strong attack on both sides of the Kieff-Kovel Railway.

The question arises among military men here how Germany can come to the assistance of her Austrian allies without further denuding her forces on the Western front, and it is considered impossible for Austria to risk withdrawing more of her own troops from the Italian front. It will be interesting to watch the reaction of the Western and Eastern fronts on each other in the development of the battle of the Somme and the continued German offensive on the banks of the Meuse.

HALF A MILLION PRISONERS.

The great strain the Russian offensive is putting on the Central Powers is forcibly illustrated in the following despatch received from Petrograd last night:—

"Nearly half a million Austrians and Germans have been put out of commission since General Brusiloff began his great advance, a month ago to-day. The grand total of prisoners to date is, in round numbers, 235,000, of which 4,500 are officers.

"Without the actual figures regarding the dead and wounded, careful estimates by military experts, based on the best information, places the latter at 200,000 to 220,000. The Austrians predominate overwhelmingly among the prisoners, but among the dead and wounded it is said that a fairly large percentage are Germans. The German losses in stopping the Russian advance on Kovel and in counter attacks made in solid ranks were enormous.

"The booty captured reaches incalculable figures. It is figured that 250 guns of various sizes and upwards of 700 machine guns is a conservative estimate. In addition vast quantities of munitions, supplies and transports have fallen into the hands of the Russians."

The Russians Take Two More Villages

German Reinforcements Unable to Stem the Tide of Victory For Czar's Troops---Violent Fighting Occurred Before Huns Were Driven Out of the Places---Italians Make Gains in Various Sectors --- Artillery Continues to Make Progress.

LATE WAR DESPATCHES

PETROGRAD, July 8.—Following their advance in the region of the Lower Styr, the Russians have occupied two villages and a railway station.

The War Office announcement says that the villages of Komarow and Grady and the railway station of Manevitchi are now in Russian hands.

These three points are in the region to the west of Czartoryak, where there has been violent fighting for several days, the Germans having thrown in heavy reinforcements to check the Russian advance toward the important strategic position of Kovel. The Manevitchi station is 14 miles west of Czartoryak, on the railway line between Sarny and Kovel. Komarow and Grady are southeast of Czartorsy. A German retirement in this region was announced in Berlin yesterday.

ITALIANS MAKE GAINS.

ROME, July 8.—The Italian offensive is being pressed strongly and in various sectors further progress has been made. The account of these operations from the War Office yesterday follows:

"Between the Adige and the Astico there is intense activity on the part of the artillery, particularly the enemy's batteries which are bombarding the slopes of Monte Majo. North of the Posina the enemy still resists our attacks on Monte Cimone, while our artillery continues to make progress along the Rio Freddo and Posico Valleys.

On the Sette Comuni Plateau we renewed the attack, with the support of our artillery, on the strongly fortified line of the enemy."

OTTAWA, July 8.—The Minister of Militia may organize two infantry divisions and train them here for direct transportation to Flanders.

MESSAGE OF PRAISE.

LONDON, July 8.—King George has sent a message praising his troops.

The Coalition Plan is in Full Operation

Special to The Examiner:

"The plan ripened in the council of the coalition is now in full operation. Soldiers of Verdun, we owe it to your heroic resistance, which has been an indispensable condition of success and the basis of our approaching victories; for it is that resistance which has created on the whole European war theatre a situation from which will emerge the final triumph of our cause."—General Joffre in an order of the day to the French troops at Verdun announcing successes by the Russians.

REMINDER OF TEUTON DEEDS

French Society Organized to Put Up Monuments to "Atrocities."

With the object of never allowing the people of France to forget the outrages said to have been committed by the German invaders during the war, an association called "L'Oeuvre des Plaques et Monuments Commeoratifs des Atrocites Allemande" is raising funds for the purpose of erecting monuments on spots where the alleged atrocities occurred, and affixing commemorative plates to buildings said to have been the scenes of such acts.

In the appeal for funds sent to Americans, General Secretary Noyer and Treasurer Gagnepain say that they have no doubt that the numerous American tourists who will go to France after the war to visit the battlefields will be happy to see these commemorative tablets and plates. The office of the association is at 9 Place de la Bourse, Paris. Memberships range in price from 40 cents to $20. Among the members of the Honorary Committee of the association are General Pau and Louis Raemaekers.

Draw Reserves Into The Fray

Must Be Wiped Out By Artillery Before Another Advance.

Paris, July 8.—Commenting on the situation on the Somme, Marcel Hutin, the military expert of the Echo de Paris, writes: "Our armies will not endeavour to press further forward until the disorganization of the enemy be judged sufficient." By this he means the sufficient German reserves have not yet been drawn into the conflict. These strong bodies, usually stationed at the rear of the front battle zone, must be wiped out by artillery, if not by infantry, before the next forward stride can be taken.

"It is also necessary that our brave British allies, on their side of the battle front, shall come to a level with us. They are holding with force all the positions which they have conquered, and we are assured of new conquests by a re-grouping of their forces, and a new stroke by their artillery. I, for my part, am convinced that the Germans will soon abandon that part of the front held by the troops of Sir Douglas Haig."

Under General Foch, now commander of the French troops of the Somme, is General Fayolle, famous as an artillery expert.

County Constible Charged With Sedition

Fleshertou, July 7.—County Constable Edward Graham of Eugenia Falls, was before Magistrate J. L. McMullen here charged with using seditious language to a recruiting officer, and upon the evidence produced was committed for trial at Owen Sound. Crown Attorney Dyre of Owen Sound prosecuted. Bail was accepted.

Hardware and Metal Market

Recent improved weather conditions have had a beneficial effect on the hardware and paint trade generally. Business has shown considerable improvement of late and there is a more pronounced demand for summer lines. There is a good demand for all staples. Difficulty is being experienced in securing supplies of many lines of iron and steel goods. The labor problem has reached a serious stage and many manufacturers have on hand large stocks of partly finished goods for which a ready sale could be had if skilled help was available to complete the manufacturing processes.

Ingot metals show further weakness and several price declines have taken place during the week. Manufactured steel products are showing an easier tendency. There is an acute shortage of tin plates, and it is only possible to give nominal quotations. Many jobbers are to-day quoting prices considerably below those noted by the manufacturers. Price cutting on many hardware lines is becoming prevalent. There has been some improvement in the demand for paints for outside work. The linseed oil market is very unsettled.

"Cash Only; No Jewels Wanted" Says Lone Bandit of Yosemite

Yosemite Valley, Cal., July 8.—Five stage loads of tourists entering the Yosemite Valley were held up at Wawona, by a highwayman, who operated single handed and collected about $400.

Except that the bandit rode a motor cycle and the stage coaches were all motor driven vehicles, the hold up was not unlike the performance of early mining days.

The bandit stopped the first car by means of a log which he rolled across the roadway. As the car stopped he stepped out from the brush and with a sawed-off shot gun assumed charge of the situation. He wanted until the five coaches had reached the blockade. He then ordered everybody out into the road.

"Cash only—no jewelry wanted," he told them.

When he had finished taking up the collection he mounted his motor cycle and disappeared at full speed.

Among his victims were a number of Southern Pacific railroad officials from the east, including A. Simons, freight and passenger agent at Philadelphia; J. W. Crump, Boston; M. N. Kean, the travelling passenger agent, Chicago, and E. H. Williams, travelling freight agent, of Kansas City. Other victims were Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Gibert, of New York.

Allege That Soldier Is An Absconder

Windsor, July 7.—Canadian police and military authorities have asked the United States Immigration and Police Department to locate Private Douglas Brooke, alias Bourke, who it is alleged absconded from Canada after obtaining $700 by forging the name of Major J. C. Tolmie, of Windsor, paymaster of the 99th Batt.

Brooke, it is said, left London a week before the battalion sailed and at the same time there disappeared a book of Militia Department cheques, taken from the office of Major Tolmie, the paymaster. Brooke, it is said, left a trail of forged cheques from London to Windsor.

When he presented a letter, purporting to be from Lieut.-Col. T. B. Welch, commander of the battalion, to a Windsor bank manager, asking assistance to secure employment here, as he had been discharged because of physical disability, it is stated that he was recognized as Douglas Brooke, formerly a clerk with a Belleville company, who it was charged, left his wife and family in that city after embezzling more than $2500 of his employers' funds.

WIFE AND DAUGHTER ARMED BY CONSTABLE

THREE CHECK NEAR-RIOT IN JERSEY BY ANGRY ALIENS.

Germansville, N. J., July 8.—For a time it looked as though there would be a riot here as the result of the arrest of Thomas Musto, whose home was raided by the authorities and 60 cases of beer confiscated.

Harry Hamilton, the constable who figured in the arrest, was attacked by several foreigners who called at his house about 9 o'clock, and said they wanted revenge. Hamilton gave his wife a gun and his daughter a revolver and told them to go to the second floor and shoot anyone who attempted to enter the house.

Hamilton then used his blackjack. He knocked a couple of men down, ran to the road and accosted the first automobile that came along. In it was Dr. J. C. Gerry of Woodbury, who had a party returning from a fishing trip. Hamilton was brought to the hotel here and collected a number of men, who went back with him, but when they reached the home, the foreigners had left.

SIR JAMES WATSON'S OPINION CONSIDERED MOST VALUABLE

You catch a little cold to-day, and by to-morrow it has reached the throat, next day the lungs are affected and you wish you had used "Catarrhozone" which kills colds in five minutes. In the first place Catarrhozone soothes the irritated membranes and relieves congestion,—then it cuts out the phlegm and destroys the germs. It enables the blood to retain a natural supply of oxygen, lung-food, and vitality. In any cough bronchitis or Catarrh, it's guaranteed to positively cure. Beware of dangerous substitutes offered under misleading names for genuine Catarrhozone which is sold everywhere, large size containing two months treatment costs $1.00, small size 50c; trial size 25c.

SHOOTS WIFE FOR TRIP WITH FORMER HUSBAND

Oswego, July 8.—Because his wife returned with her first husband, Steele Babcock, of Sayre, Pa., to that city last week to adjust some property matters, Bert Cuddebeck of Athens, Pa., who has been living at Pulaski, with his wife for the last three weeks, shot her in the head last night with a revolver, inflicting a serious wound. A few minutes later he took his own life with the same weapon. Mrs. Cuddebeck is in a critical condition, and it is said cannot recover. The shooting took place on the main street of Pulaski, at six o'clock last night in view of a crowd of shoppers.

Swear Terribly in Flanders Now As Did Long Ago

Corp. Lee Smith, M.P., the junior member for Northampton, is now serving in France. In an interesting letter to a constituent he gives some advice to the older men soon to be called up. He writes:

"I imagine I was much accustomed to comfort and as little adapted to this life as any one of them, but I have found one thing, that nothing has been so unpleasant or difficult as I expected before I had to do it.

"Everything depends upon the spirit in which one makes it all. If a man, although he is elderly, makes up his mind that it is a discipline through which he has to go cheerfully, he will find he can do it. In some ways the elderly man has the advantage over the young ones, for if he has less strength of body he ought to have acquired more strength of spirit.

"I do not say that this is a happy life, because it is not, but the unhappiness does not arise from its hardships, but from the fact that we are all homesick."

Long ago someone said, "the British swore terribly in Flanders," and judging by Corp. Lee Smith's letter there has been no weakening in expression with the efflux of time.

"I am afraid that those who are soon to be called up will have a rude shock at the language of the Army," he writes. "It is no use beating about the bush, the volume and virulence of the swearing, at any rate out here, are simply appalling. There is so much of it that it ceases to mean anything. Men out here introduce an oath or two into each sentence merely by force of habit, and without intending to convey any meaning whatever. The habit is very infectious.

"One of my fellow corporals, who in private life is quite a weighty and dignified headmaster of a large school, told me yesterday that he found it very difficult to avoid catching the habit, and was, in fact, succumbing to it. The Army at present is made up chiefly of quite young men, very impressionable to habits good or bad, who, without any malice, pick up without thinking, the language which they find around them. I hope the older men who are coming in, will retain the civilized language of civilian life."

At Any Cost

Such is the statement of Mr. A. O. Norton, of Boston, the largest Jack Manufacturer in the world. His voluntary testimonial regarding ZUTOO follows:

286 Congress St., Boston, Mass.

"I have been a sufferer from Headache since childhood and have used all, or nearly all the so-called 'cures' on the market. Some months since my attention was called to Zutoo Tablets and I have been using them ever since with the most gratifying results. I find they cure a 'sick' or 'nervous' headache in a few minutes and leave no bad effects. My family use them whenever needed with equally good results. I have frequently given them to friends who were suffering from Headache and they never failed to give quick relief. I always carry Zutoo Tablets in my grip on the road and WOULD NOT BE WITHOUT THEM AT ANY COST."

KING'S OWN SERVANTS CHARGED INTO DEATH

Few Survivors of Company of Sandringham's Heroes—An Epic of Gallipoli is Described

Of all the tales of gallantry told, and yet to be told, of the desperate fighting in Gallipoli, none perhaps will surpass the heroism of the Norfolk Territorials, with whom the King's Sandringham servants went to fight. Of them Sir Ian Hamilton wrote in his now historic despatch: "Among these ardent souls was part of a fine company enlisted from the King's Sandringham estates. Nothing more was ever seen or heard of any of them. They charged into the forest and were lost to sight or sound." Writing of that magnificent charge into the "misty unknown," a correspondent from King's Lynn says: "It is a story of the men who never came back; of Colonel Beauchamp and sixteen officers who led 250 men across ploughed open fields, thinking of nothing but the order, 'Anafarta must be taken by dusk.' To-day only a dozen, it would seem, are alive as wounded prisoners in Turkish hands, some day to tell a tale, perhaps, that will add a silver lining to one of the most glorious but saddest records of the British army.

"It is a breathless story. Think of every eligible man from the King's Sandringham estates enlisting in a body and forming a nucleus of C company; men whose wild 'at 'thrills' had been talk of a recalcitrant bull on the Royal estate. Others from office stool and counter. Twelve months of skilled training, in which Colonel Beauchamp was a past master. A pleasant cruise across open blue sea aboard the Aquitania, and a midnight landing on an enemy's unknown and unmapped coast. 'Anafarta must be taken by dusk.' That was the responsibility entrusted to them. For more than two and a half miles, across open country which would not shelter a field mouse, these Norfolk neophytes to gunfire charged. Maybe it was the very gallantry of these super-heroes that was their undoing. The Turks could not face that thin line of glittering Norfolk steel. They broke and fled.

"Bold and confident, Colonel Beauchamp, waving a simple Nilgheeri cane, outpaced his men. 'On, the Norfolks, on!' 'Come on, the Holy Boys!' and 'Forward, the Hungry Ninth!' came the resounding echo from these ardent souls close upon their leader's heels. The fighting grew hotter; the Norfolks came into a terrible enfilading fire on both sides. Shrapnel and machine guns swept the earth bare of those men whom the Turkish infantry could not face. Exhausted by thirst and decimated by the fire, into the woods they continued. And then—who knows? Only twelve survive, and they are wounded prisoners.

"So to-day the little village of West Newton and Derbingham and the cottages of the King's estates are all in mourning. Gardeners, keepers and woodmen have paid the great sacrifice. Aching hearts are scarcely less heavy because the King himself has tried again and again to secure a release from suspense. These women, materially, want for nothing. Every family receives from the King the same pay as if its man was at home."

KITCHENER IN EGYPT: A DAZZLING CAREER

Spy Became Sirdar and in Fourteen Years Avenged Gordon—His Chance Came Through Indiscipline

In the early days in Egypt Kitchener was daring almost to rashness, living among the sons of the desert for months at a time, in order to acquire a knowledge of the Mahdi's movements and conspiracies. And so clever was he in disguising himself that even his own comrades did not know him. Indeed, one day a soldier flung a brickbat at Kitchener, whom he mistook for "a bloomin' nigger," inflicting rather a nasty scalp wound. His cleverness in disguising himself, coupled with a knowledge of Arabic, which he had picked up in his wanderings in Syria, made him invaluable to the authorities. He was chief of the Secret Service, living for two years with the Arabs as one of themselves, and the following incident, the truth of which is vouched for by one of Lord Kitchener's relatives, strikingly illustrates his personal courage and cleverness. Two Arab spies feigned deafness, and Kitchener could get nothing from them. In half an hour another spy was caught and bundled into the tent with the other two. They were left for an hour, talking briskly all the time, and then the door was thrown open and the third spy demanded to be taken to headquarters. It was Kitchener himself, who had, of course, found out all he wanted to know.

Wept Over Gordon

Long years after Gordon perished at Khartoum, Sirdar Kitchener re-took the city in triumph after Omdurman and gave the martyr Christian burial. The scene is sketched by Steevens as follows: "The troops formed up before the palace on three sides of a rectangle. The Sirdar, the Generals of division and brigade, and the staff stood in the open space facing the palace. The Sirdar raised his hand. A pull on the halliards; up ran, out flew the Union Jack. 'Three cheers for the Queen!' cried the Sirdar; helmets leaped in the air, and the melancholy ruins woke to the first wholesome shout of all these years. Then came forward the pipers and wailed a dirge, and the Sudanese band played 'Abide With Me.' Perhaps lips did twitch just a little to see the ebony heathens fervently blowing out Gordon's favorite hymn; but the most irresistible incongruity would hardly have made us laugh. And there were those who said the cold Sirdar himself could hardly speak or see, as General Hunter and the rest stepped out and shook his hand. What wonder? He had trodden this road to Khartoum for fourteen years, and he stood at the goal at last."

It was characteristic of so unconventional a nature that his first step to fortune and greatness was a piece of indiscipline. He was on leave in Alexandria on the eve of the famous bombardment, and, knowing that a telegram recalling him to Cyprus was imminent, he arranged with a friendly press-man to delay its reaching his hands until the weekly boat to Cyprus had gone.

Why Egypt Worshipped

Spoken of reverently as "El Lord" or "Kdoch-Nohr," he came to be regarded in Egypt and Sudan by the masses of the people almost as a semi-divinity, such as were Seti and Rameses by the Egyptians of old. For the races of the Sudan he was a far greater one than the old Mahdi. The triumph of Kitchener in Egypt was the triumph of youth. Here he associated with his great task young men of tried mettle in whom he could place confidence. He was, in Steevens' words, "a blend of French audacity of imagination, American ingenuity and British doggedness in execution. Everybody told him that he would never get the gunboats over the Fourth Cataract; a General who had been there in the Wolseley days delivered a lecture demonstrating unmercifully the mad impossibility of the scheme. A day or two after the Sirdar sent the boats over."

EIGHT SONS IN THE ARMY

Old Couple Left in Poor Circumstances

A letter from the King congratulating them in having eight sons in the army is the proud possession of Mr. and Mrs. G. Coward, of 12 Chapel avenue, Addlestone, Surrey. Mr. Coward was a plasterer, but for twelve years an injured foot has kept him from work. Mrs. Coward had five of her sons at home, all giving her money, but now they are gone and the home must be kept going as well as may be on an army allowance of only $9.00 a week. Her family comprises ten sons. All but the two eldest are serving, and of these two the elder has given his only son and the younger has tried three times to enlist, only to be rejected because of a defective foot.

Actors Star in War

The late Lieutenant Wilber Dartnell was the first actor to win the V.C. He had served during the South African and Matabele campaigns, and he went to East Africa with the 25th Battalion Legion of Frontiersmen Fusiliers in February, 1915. The action that gained him the V.C. cost him his life, but he will never be forgotten by his friends. Other distinctions have been won for the combined professions by Robert Loraine, the actor-aviator, who has been awarded the D.S.M., and Chief Petty Officer Arthur Tennant, formerly assistant manager of the Hippodrome, Manchester, and manager of the Tivoli, Manchester, who received the D.S.M. for conspicuous gallantry in the Dardanelles.

Home Made Presents.

"I thought I'd be economical this year and make my Christmas presents myself, instead of buying them," said Mrs. Harlem; "so I bought a book of instructions and went ahead."

"How did you make out?" asked Mrs. Brenz.

"The materials footed up to $43.50, and I put in a month's hard sewing and cutting."

"How did that compare with last year?"

"Last year I bought all I wanted for $25."

TOWNSHEND A PROPHET

Hero of Sieges Was Also a Student of Napoleon

Some interesting remarks concerning the early days of General Townshend, who put up such a remarkable fight against the Turks at Kut, are given by one who knows him. It was after his heroic defence of Chitral in 1894 that General Townshend, then only a lieutenant, became fired with ambition. He made everything subservient to his study of strategy and military organization. There was no greater student of Napoleon. Every work on the military theories and practices of the great general he procured and studied. He made it a rule to put in seven hours a day at this study, and, moreover, visited every battlefield on which Napoleon had fought, reconstructing for himself the disposition of the forces of the battles which decided the fate of nations in the early part of the nineteenth century. Frequently the small hours found him poring over the maps and books which enabled him to follow the strategy of Napoleon, and there is no greater authority on this subject than General Townshend.

Long before 1914 General Townshend held the opinion that when Germany declared war Great Britain would not be able to rely solely on her navy, but must have a great army ready for the field. He favored compulsory service, feeling that this country would need an army of millions instead of thousands. He held that Germany would attack France through Belgium and eventually attack England, and he many times surveyed what he considered would be the coming battlefields and formed his theories and plans of campaign.

Navarre Winged Them

Lieutenant Navarre of France thus described bringing down his sixteenth and seventeenth aeroplanes of the foe: "The first one was flying over Vauquois at 3,000 yards. I was 200 yards above. I played various tricks round and over the enemy, who emptied his machine gun upon me without effect, but I was then coming down, and getting within range of my anti-aircraft gun. The only thing was to glide down upon the enemy. My first machine gun fire scrapped his motor, my second killed the observer. I glided down once more and killed the pilot. The enemy machine then dropped dead in front of our trenches. This was my sixteenth. My seventeenth was an Albatross. When I met him I was below him. He threw bombs, which I luckily escaped. I climbed up and attacked, and he never even replied, why I do not know. He seemed to be unarmed. Anyhow, he upset, and fell straight down into the woods."

When a man starts out to beat the other fellow's game he will find plenty who are anxious to give him a chance.

A becoming hat will often do more toward making a girl's face attractive than a double application of kalsomine.

VICTOR EMANUEL CHAPMAN.

Victor! Perfect name for thee,
Splendid lad of dauntless heart!
Royal was thy victory,
Royal was thy end, and we
Proudly smile through tears that start.

Loyal sons of bleeding France
Matched thy flights of daring skill;
Bold as thine was their advance!
Unlike thee, they sought the chance
For their land their blood to spill.

Sacred is the mother-call
Which a country sends her sons:
Thine it was to fight and fall
For the highest Cause of all,
Standing guard at alien guns!

'Tis for Liberty and Truth
Thou hast greatly dared and died,
Cast away thy precious youth,
Done thy best, sans fear, sans ruth—
Fighting on the angels' side!

A CAUSE OF INDIGESTION

People Who Complain of This Trouble Unusually Are Thin Blooded

Thin blooded people usually have stomach trouble. They seldom recognise the fact that thin blood is the cause of the trouble, b t it is. In fact thin, impure blood is the most common cause of stomach trouble: it affects the digestion very quickly. The glands that furnish the digestive fluid are diminished in their activity; the stomach muscles are weakened, and there is a loss of nerve force. In this state of health, nothing will more quickly restore the appetite, the digestion and normal nutrition than good, rich, red blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills act directly on the blood, making it rich and red, and this enriched blood strengthens weak nerves, stimulates tired muscles and awakens the normal activity of the glands that supply the digestive fluids. The first sign of improving health is an improved appetite, and soon the effect of these blood-making pills is evident throughout the system. You find that what you eat does not distress you and that you are strong and vigorous instead of irritable and listless. This is proved by the case of Mrs. J. Harris, Gerrard St. Toronto, who says: "About three years ago I was seized with a severe attack of indigestion and vomiting. My food seemed to turn sour as soon as I ate it and I would turn so deathly sick that sometimes I would fall on the floor after vomiting. I tried a lot of home remedies but they did not help me. Then I went to a doctor who gave me some powders but they seemed actually to make me worse instead of better. This went on for nearly two months and by that time my stomach was in such a weak state that I could not keep down a drink of water, and was wasted to a skeleton and felt that life was not worth living. I was not married at this time and one Sunday evening on the way to church with my intended husband I was taken with a bad spell on the street. He took me to a drug store where the clerk fixed up something to take and my intended got me a box of Dr. William's Pink Pills. By the end of the first week I could feel some improvement from the use of the pills, and I gladly continued taking them until every symptom of the trouble was gone and I was again enjoying the best of health. These Pills are now by standby and I tell all my friends what they did for me."

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills from any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

SWEET CLOVER PILLOWS.

Sweet clover dried flower heads are very fragrant and may be used for sachets in the linen closet or among one's clothes. It is the season now to dry all manner of fragrant flowers and leaves as they come along, using them later to fill sachets, or fancy pillows. A pillow filled with dried rose leaves, or with a combination of fragrant dried flowers, is a gift that is much appreciated by friends in town or city, and one that costs very little beyond thought when flowers are in bloom.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

BY JOHN W. S. McCULLOUGH, M.D., D.P.H., CHIEF OFFICER OF THE PROVINCIAL BOARD OF HEALTH.

A FRIEND of the writer in discussing the importance of promoting social life in the country brought out the importance of utilizing the country schools for the purpose of the education of the farmer's boys and girls in respect to the possibilities of Canada, and particularly of our own Province of Ontario. He pointed out that by co-ordinating the activities of the various departments of the Government, the agricultural, the educational, the structural and the institutional including the public health department, and showing them in the form of film pictures a most useful and entertaining social circle might be formed in each rural school section. A most satisfactory film machine, producing excellent pictures, can be purchased for about $225.00 or in large numbers perhaps for about half that sum. If the Government would provide the picture films and to the local ones add these illustrating the geography, history, and scenery of other countries what an educational feature might be established. There is no limit to what it might achieve! In addition, the film pictures which have been shown all over the province by the Provincial Board of Health might be advantageously introduced and prove of lasting benefit to every community. There are enormous educational opportunities in the moving picture. Its valuable features are not confined to the Charlie Chaplin variety so much exploited in cities and towns; beyond all these it has an importance and value which will be realised before many years have passed by.

SOCIAL LIFE IN THE COUNTRY

* * *

Patent medicines have had a wide use in this as well as in older countries. Great fortunes have been made by their exploitation, the chief cause of their success being not in the value of the remedies themselves but in the skilful manner in which they are advertised. The trade in patent medicines has not been as successful in recent years as formerly. One reason is that the public is better educated than it used to be and the truth as to the character and usefulness of these remedies has been placed before the people. The rank fraud found in many cases, the absurd promises of cure for every kind of ill, which have been advertised, and the knowledge of the great mass of the people that these promises have not been made good have made people wary of purchase. There is a question if any patent medicine is of much value. There is no doubt that many of them are a downright injury to those using them.

PATENT MEDICINES

The American Medical Association, through its Journal, has done an enormous service to the people of America by its exposure of the frauds practised upon the public by the hundreds of so-called "cures" sold under the guise of Cancer cures, Consumption cures, cures for drunkenness, for female sickness, for baldness, obesity, and hundreds of other human ills. If the patent medicines of a past generation had possessed the power claimed for them they would have continued to sell them no longer advertised; or, if there was no sale for them, it would be because they had banished sickness from the earth.

Of the patent medicine fakes perhaps the greatest have been those purporting to cure consumption or tuberculosis of the lungs. Few place any reliance upon such advertised remedies for consumption nowadays, because the knowledge has been spread far and wide that consumption is cured only by means of living in the fresh air, by rest, by good food, and by abstinence from alcohol. No medicine is of any value in the treatment of the disease except such as promote the appetite and allay cough, pain, and other complications. The death-rate from tuberculosis in Ontario as well as in all civilized countries has been materially reduced of late years. In 1901 the death-rate in Ontario was 148 per 100,000 of population. To-day, thanks to increased application of knowledge in regard to this disease, the rate is 85 per 100,000 of population. This death rate is still capable of much reduction. In fact if people utilized all the knowledge we have of it the disease would be wiped out in the next generation and a death from consumption would be as rare as a death from smallpox. People are learning not to fear fresh air. They do not seek to keep it out of their homes. Milk from tuberculous cows, the greatest cause of tuberculosis in children, is pasteurized and the germs of the disease killed in the milk supply of most of our cities. Many anti-tuberculosis societies have been established all over the country. Boards of Health have spread the truth about the disease. Sanatoria for the care of the afflicted have been started here and there through the agency of philanthropic people.

CONSUMPTION CURES

TO REMOVE GRASS STAINS.

The green color is very tenacious, and boiling water very generally produces no effect. Dipping the spot in molasses and letting it lie for a little while is effective. Rinse the molasses out with clear water, warmed, and the stain will be gone. When everything fails a solution of chloride of tin (moderate strength) may be used.

PACKING AWAY SUMMER CLOTHING.

The advent of bright sunshiny days makes us think of putting away a lot of the clothes which we have worn through the winter months, but unless these things are put away in the right manner they will look anything but nice when they are brought out again. If you want to do the job thoroughly, wait until you can spare a whole afternoon or evening, and then go through all your winter garb with care and common sense, deciding definitely what is to be kept and what discarded.

Heavy coats and skirts, great coats, and such garments should be well brushed and shaken, and have any spots or stains removed from them. Then stuff the sleeves with crumpled newspapers and fold up the garments with plenty of old newspapers between the folds. If there is no box or drawer which will take the coats and skirts full length, fold them over from the top—coats from the neck and skirts from the waist—and put a roll of crumpled paper in the fold to prevent a crease being made.

"Papa, George says he is very much worried about his income." "I should not think he would worry about a little thing like that."

FASHIONS IN FABRICS

Striped Linens, Homespuns and Ponge es Favoured—Figureda nd Plain Cottons Combined in Frocks

Summer finds us very much inclined towards stripes, in linens, pongees tussahs, voiles, crepes and the various imported and domestic novelty cottons. The ground of these materials is usually white, or the natural crash or linen colour, and the stripe; either a vivid or a soft tone, according to the purpose of the frock, or the fancy of the wearer. These striped materials are usually combined with a plain fabric, corresponding with the colour of the stripe, or the ground. On the Russian blouse models, and the other designs, Norfolk and the various peplum models, now so well liked, the striped silk or linen is used for the coat, and the plain for the skirt, or vice versa.

ANOTHER FIND IN THE UPHOLSTERY DEPARTMENT.

PLAIN AND BLOCKED VOILE TAFFETA TRIMMED

Last summer we took cretonne from the upholstery department and transferred it in great quantities to the dress-goods counter; still on the lookout for novelties, we discovered this season, that the plain and striped cotton and linen homespuns, intended for summer cottage furnishings, were charmingly suited to sports suits and skirts, being especially practical for those which require a bit harder wear than the ordinary linen or silk garment will stand. These also have the natural crash and linen grounds, and are striped in the same tones, barring the softer shades. The black and white combination is especially smart, and there are bright green, purple, orange, and a wide choice of the other bright shades which are so much in favour for sports wear. This material is wide and inexpensive. One especially effective suit developed in this homespun has a plain crash-colour skirt, combined with a black and white striped coat. The pocket flaps on the skirt were of the striped material, and collar, cuffs, pocket flaps and belt of the Norfolk coat, of the plain.

COMBINATIONS OF FIGURED AND PLAIN MATERIALS IN LINGERE FROCKS.

As we combine stripes with plain materials in our sports costumes, so do we combine figured with plain fabrics in our lingerie and tub frocks, both for grown-ups and for small girls.

There are sprigged and dotted dimities, embroidered and printed voiles, flowered organdies, embroidered muslins and batistes, each with its corresponding plain material, to be combined in the slip-on blouses, Russian, and numerous other smart peplum designs. The flowered dimities are especially pretty for the very small girl, and many a tiny frock of rosebud and white dimity, trimmed with frills of Valenciennes lace and insertion, is being displayed in the smart shops, for the little miss of two or three summers.

The flowered, printed or embroidered crepes and voiles are very pretty used this way, and there are printed silks being combined with plain taffetas and satins, in the same way, for afternoon frocks.

SCOTCH SCONES.

Two cups flour, 1 cup sugar, 1 teaspoon (scant) of saleratus, 1 teaspoon (scant) of cream of tartar, 1 teaspoon (scant) baking powder, 1-2 teaspoon cinnamon, 1 teaspoon salt. Put all through the flour sifter, put in 1 tablespoon lard, 1-2 cup of sultana raisins. Mix with 1 cup sweet milk. Divide dough into halves, putting it in two large deep pie tins. Spread evenly with the back of spoon. Wet the fingers in milk and wet all over the top. Bake in a moderate oven until brown. These are delicious spread with butter.

HOME HEALTH CLUB

By DR. DAVID H. REEDER

Constipation—The publicity ingenuity of what is called "Medical Ethics" or professional ethics, on the part of manufacturers of proprietary medicines, is wonderful. The manufacturers of proprietary remedies are supposed to advertise and sell them only to physicians and they write an advertisement exhorting the virtues of their remedies in technical terms, but make claims that would put to shame some of the rankest advertisers of fake remedies and that would cause a certain investigation by the "Department" under the pure food and drug laws. I have just been reading such an ad. which started out beautifully on the subject of "The Modest Woman," and told how she had been swindled into purchasing all kinds of advertised remedies because she could use them at home and without exposing her person for treatment at the doctor's office. The writer of the ad. proved conclusively to the physician that the woman should by all means have come directly to his office in the first place and then to cinch the sale of his own remedies explained in detail how well they were adapted to the condition of almost any case that might be presented, and best of all the patient could safely use them at home "under the direction of her physician," of course, and there need be no shock to the modesty because the remedies were safe in any event, and by taking them under the direction of the physician she would of course pay the physician's fee and incidentally 50c for six treatments of the medicine.

In another advertisement on the subject of "Constipation," which is my subject this week, real intelligence is first given, from which I quote:

"The routine treatment of persisting costiveness, seems to change with the introduction of new and novel drug combinations and the adaptation of substances that are found to influence fecal evacuation.

"Laxative and cathartic preparations spring into popularity with a regularity that almost equals the ever-changing fashion in female apparel, and they as duly pass from favor. It is a far cry from the rude jalap, gamboge and kindred purgatives that "worked by main force" to the ultra-refined liquid petrolatum of most recent vogue; in between we have seen aloes, cascara, phenolphthalein and many other drugs, come into the ascendant, enjoy brief popularity and decline to the commonplace.

"The significance of this condition is that the treatment of constipation has been haphazard; drug exhibition has commonly been a matter of convenience, rather than of adaptation to meet a definitely determined etiology. This state of affairs may be expected to continue as long as constipation is viewed by the profession as a more or less necessary evil and by the laity as an inconvenience rather than an important pathologic factor."

The balance of the article is given over to criticising other popular remedies and exhorting the virtues of a special form of castor oil, the name of which at least is under the exclusive control of the advertiser. Now, if there had been a desire to help the people instead of selling them a remedy why not tell them frankly what constipation is, and that its cure is all a matter of diet, drink and exercise intelligently applied.

It is the mission of the Home Health Club to educate its readers on health matters and in the next article I will tell you of some of the special diets that suits the case.

Choice Recipes

SUMMER SALADS.

To make assorted fruit salad you prepare the bananas, oranges, grapefruit, chopped celery and minced green pepper. Put all in a bowl and marinate in a French dressing made with olive oil, salt cayenne and lemon juice. Then pile on a mat of tender lettuce leaves. The bananas may be left out and other fruits added as liked.

Combination salad—Wash a head of romaine salad in several cold waters. Then take large shears and strip the leaves into pieces about an inch wide. Clip green peppers in the same way, cutting these almost to threads. Put these in a large bowl, add some canned asparagus tips carefully drained of liquid, two tablespoonfuls of chopped chives, and four tender beets cut in thin slices, and then throw in the tender hearts of two bunches of celery, cut in small pieces. Use French dressing made of olive oil, salt, pepper and lemon juice. This salad should be kept as cold as ice before serving.

MARTHA WASHINGTON PIE.

Cream two eggs, three tablespoonfuls of butter and one cup of powdered sugar together. Add alternately a half-cup of milk and two small cups of sifted flour. Beat well, then add one heaping teaspoonful of baking powder and bake in jelly cake tins.

When done lay up with thick layers of jam and dust the top with powdered sugar.

LARDED SWEETBREADS, SAUTE

Parboil and blanch the sweetbreads, and run through each four or five thin strips of fat salt pork. Do this with a larding needle, or a sharp, narrow-bladed knife, and let the ends of the pork project on each side. Have a tablespoonful of butter in the blazer, and cook the sweetbreads in this, turning often. Let them cook rather slowly.

BISQUE GLACE.

Boil three-quarters of a cup of sugar in one pint of water for 25 minutes. Beat the whites of four eggs very stiff and pour the syrup very slowly over them, stirring all the time. Set away to cool. Put a dozen macaroons in the oven to dry; when brown roll them fine and sift them. Whip one quart of cream until dry and add to the egg and sugar. Then add the powdered macaroons, stirring well. Put the mixture into an ice cream freezer that has been previously cooled. Put the cover on, salt and let stand for five or six hours.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S SHIRT WAIST.

By Anabel Worthington.

A woman needs as many shirt waists that, of course, as much variety of style as is possible, is to be desired, if consistent with fashion's rule. The artistic treatment of a yoke alone will give much individuality to a blouse in all one material; there is proof of this in the illustration No. 7,760, showing a lovely blouse with a one-piece drop yoke, which also forms the upper part of the sleeve. The handsome collar is made richer with edging frilled all around the edge, and the very deep cuffs on three-quarter sleeves are similarly finished. A silk ribbon tie adds much to the smartness of the model. A summery and graceful style.

The pattern is cut in sizes 34 to 44 bust measure. To make like the illustration in size 36 will require 2½ yards 36 inch goods, 3 yards of edging and ¾ yard of ribbon.

You may obtain the pattern by sending [illegible] to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

VIEW OF VERDUN, RUINED TO GAIN HONOR FOR CROWN PRINCE OBTAINED BY MR. WHITNEY WARREN ON TOUR OF INSPECTION

Well Known American Likens Scene to Ruins of Pompeii, but Is Confident That While Germans May Win Some Defences They Will Never Enter the City.

By Whitney Warren.

PARIS, Saturday.—I recently had a most interesting day at Verdun. For a long time I have been anxious to go there in order to constate with my own eyes and ears the conditions existing, the possibilities of the resistance being successful and the cause of the persistent and continuous effort on the part of the Germans against a place the military strategic value of which all the authorities agree on as being nil. The journey from Bar-le-Duc was made in motor over the famous road on which all the communication between the two cities has been kept open during the last three months—it is inconceivable the amount of travel the road has sustained and the perfect condition in which it has been maintained by the engineers during this uninterrupted period of turmoil and agitation, of wear and tear of the most brutal sort which it has had to endure.

It is now relieved by a paralleling narrow gauge railway, but for the first month of the battle everything in the way of men, material and ammunition, coming and going, had to be hauled over it. It was one continuous stream of trucks of the heaviest description, first bringing forth with fresh troops and then scurrying back with those worn out or wounded, but all this has moderated tremendously, and the travel, while heavy the day I went over it, was not cumbersome and one felt that everything was in good wholesome condition so far as supplies and necessities were concerned. We met a certain number of troops returning for rest and we were accompanied by a corresponding, relieving party, but otherwise things were normal, showing admirable organization and sufficiency of resources of every description. Before arriving at Verdun we passed several hospitals not forgetting one for cannon of all calibres many of which were in a rather battered condition.

We entered Verdun by the main road. The suburbs and farms of the suburbs have terribly punished. There is scarcely one—I am speaking especially of the isolated ones—which has not been razed to the ground. This shows how absolutely dense and concentrated the fire of the forces. To be sure, what I remember was along the road, which was the target aimed at, but even as far as I could see nothing remained untouched and the whole land was pockmarked by the holes made by the marmites as they exploded.

The town itself is a pitiable ruin, as the accompanying photographs show; scarcely a house that has not been worse than badly handled. That charming bit along the water front which used to be called "La Venise de Verdun" has especially suffered, nothing whatever remaining. The town is absolutely evacuated, not a civilian remaining, and what sentries there are inhabit sandbag built huts, more or less bomb proof. These few troops, groups of five or six, are simply left to arrest stragglers, and in case of fire to attempt to put it out or keep it from spreading. Many of the houses and shops have their fronts blown off, and the interiors show the haste in which the occupants left—the beds in disorder, baths and clothes still hanging on the pegs, while on the mantels and tables are still standing the objects cherished by the inmates, the household gods.

One's mind instinctively reverts to the scenes which must have taken place on the last day of Pompeii, and the heart is filled with a great feeling of pity and anguish for the poor people. Ah, the misery of it! The vanity and uselessness of it! And all for the Kronprinz, in order that he may return to Berlin the victor of Verdun—marshal of the Empire on the field of battle—for, be it well understood, it is the heritage of the Hohenzollern which is at stake, and it is in the vain hope that he, the Kronprinz, may hold down his job that hundreds of thousands of them brave Frenchmen are being slaughtered and twice as many hundred thousand Germans; the one defending their soil from the aggressor and the despoiler, the other misled by the most cynical and unhealthy of ambitions.

The American people should realize that this is what is going on; that Verdun is not being battled for for any strategical reason, but simply in the hope that the defeat of the Marne may be pardoned by the annihilation of Verdun, so that the Kronprinz, his hands reeking with the blood of the myriads of innocents, Christ inspired on the one hand and Satan led on the other, may place upon his head at some future date the emblem of the dynasty which has loosened upon the universe, not the dogs of war of heroic time, but the lust and rapine of the barbarian. For by brutes and barbarians are they met (the enemy); not that they are not up to date in organization and preparedness—on the contrary—but none the less always barbarians. Oh, that our good people would but understand this and rise in their moral strength to protest the iniquity of it—and those of German descent with us, do they not realize that it was from this very sort of thing that they came to us to escape?

The cathedral, while not demolished, had badly suffered, the roof having been blown almost completely off, but fortunately up to date not set on fire. Close by the exquisite eighteenth century buildings of the College Sainte-Marguérite are in a pitiable condition. Here was installed the principal hospital when the bombardment began. Those who have been to Verdun will remember the Court of the College as one of the gems of eighteenth century architecture, of a composition and proportion quite perfect and by far the most precious document, architecturally speaking, that Verdun possessed, unless it be the chef d'oeuvre of seventeenth century military architecture, the citadel and its outworks, verily the masterpiece of Verdun's genius. Strange to say, these fortifications remain intact. To be sure they are obsolete, and yet, in their grandeur and simplicity, among all these ruins they appear formidable.

The real citadel—the modern one—is under ground and consists of a veritable city, with seventeen metres of rock to cover it. It is a sort of palisade formation, so that the entrances are on the plain well dissimulated and protected. The interior is a vast and admirable organization, capable of lodging any number of men and with inexhaustible stores, all electrically lit and ventilated, and everybody having the luck to inhabit it happy and contented, even to the hospital where I left some tobacco in charge of the chaplain and the doctor. There is nothing—nothing—these good chaps appreciate so much. It is comfort beyond words, believe me.

Afterward we went with General X, who commands the place of Verdun, to the surrounding batteries. The quantities of them is unbelievable. The commanding going on was fierce. The hills are simply covered with them. Standing on the citadel in the evening the effect produced might be compared to what one sees on a summer night when the fireflies are very thick—a continual and perpetual flashing.

On Sunday evening I had the honor of dining with General Petain and his staff—my old friend, Mr. François Flaming, the official painter attached to this army, and "Polybe," the great military chronicler, who accompanied me on my trip, made up the party. General Petain is certainly a wonderful specimen of humanity. He combines all the qualities we Americans like to attribute to the French, and especially to a French chief. Very handsome, very smart in appearance, genial, modest and generous—talent and courage to without saying—and with an absolute sangfroid. He might be our Lafayette of olden time. No detail escapes him; they call him the "terrassier" or "road builder," one of his great concerns being to keep his communications absolutely open and in the best of condition.

RUSSIANS AT GATE TO HUNGARY AND COSSACKS HAVE OPEN ROAD TO ADVANCE ACROSS CARPATHIANS

[Copyright, 1916, by the New York Herald Company—All Rights Reserved.]

(Special Dispatch)

LONDON, Saturday.

Russian armies are knocking at the gates of Hungary, just as they knocked eighteen months ago. They are swarming along the Roumanian frontier, approaching the Carpathian passes and cutting in toward Galicia on the heels of the broken and fleeing Austrians. The entire railroad system of the Bukowina is in their possession, and the advanced columns are almost at the divide which looks down over the fertile fields of Transylvania.

The collapse of the Austro-Hungarian organization is the inexplicable development of the Russian offensive.

Observers are inclined to compare the organization with the pugilist who fights well when the odds are with him but who goes to pieces and drops for the count when the tide turns against him. In pugilists this characteristic, euphemistically, is called "yellow."

Last summer in Galicia and Poland and this spring in Italy Austro-Hungarian troops were marching to success after success. They were filled with martial fervor and, with the support, direct or indirect, of their German allies, swept a path clean before them.

Several weeks ago General Brusiloff struck them at Olyka. He made a wide breach in the defensive works and captured more than 10,000 prisoners.

That was the beginning. With the spread of this attack demoralization set in. Whole brigades, panic stricken, were caught in the net and the retreat became not a withdrawal but a rout. Down in Bukowina the same thing happened. One hard blow along the Pruth and the Austrian line crumbled. The breach here was so wide that General Pflanzer's army was cut in two and one column fled south along the Roumanian frontier, while the other was forced west in the direction of the Carpathian passes.

Pressure on Austria-Hungary.

Events of the last fortnight on the eastern front show why it is a part of the allied strategic plan to press the offensives against Austria wherever possible.

In the course of the Russian advance in Volhynia General Brusiloff came in contact with the right of the German line stretching down from Courland, where it was linked with the Austrian left. There seemed no possibility that the Teutonic front could be maintained intact. So certain was it that the line would be pierced that semi-official announcements were sent from Petrograd showing it to be a fact accomplished. But the German right held and sufficient German troops were hurried behind the Austrians to fill up the holes, stop the retreat and, in the course of a few days, to undertake a counter offensive which now is regaining some lost ground.

In Eastern Galicia another German army, under General Count Bothmer, occupied the line from the northeastern frontier to the Dniester. With Austrian commands in full retreat on the right and left, Count Bothmer held his ground, only falling back a few miles on his extreme right under the influence of the Austrian retreat in Bukowina.

In a paragraph, here is an illuminating illustration of the Entente reason for sharp pressure against Germany's ally: The Teutonic front from the Pripet to Kelki is held by the Germans. Austrians carry it to the Galician border, where a German army takes it up and holds it to the Dniester. Austrians were intrusted with the defence from the Dniester to Roumania. Both these Austrian armies were routed. The Germans maintained themselves stolidly except at two points, where they bent back slightly to conform to their allies' retreat.

Doubt Austrians' Fighting Ability.

No matter what accusation may be made against the Germany army, no one in London or Paris will say that it does not fight. On the other hand, evidence is accumulating that the diverse nationalities which go to make up the Austro-Hungarian organization in the east will not fight if the odds are against them.

In these circumstances observers believe the chief efforts of the Entente will be devoted for the next few months to the punishment and destruction of the Austrian army and, through an offensive from the Balkan base at Salonica, the elimination of Bulgaria, leaving Germany alone in the European theatre to be dealt with in a general and enormous offensive to be undertaken in the spring of 1917. Abandoned by her Continental allies, attacked with all the weight of the Entente on three sides at once, it seems outside the bounds of reason that Germany could withstand such united pressure for any considerable time.

This view is not based on any official confidence, but to the closest students of the military situation it seems the logical conclusion to be drawn from the developments of the spring. In Great Britain there has been a general discouragement of the hope that this year would see an end of hostilities. But at the same time there has been developing a pronounced belief in the prophecy of Lord Kitchener of a three years' war.

Just how is the Entente scheme working out?

Austria-Hungary, before the Russian offensive began, is believed to have had in the neighborhood of 2,500,000 rifles. Approximately half of these were disposed on the eastern front. Four hundred thousand were immobilized on the Italian front and 300,000 additional were sent into Trentino when the offensive against Italy was undertaken. Two hundred thousand more were needed for police duty in Serbia, Albania and Montenegro. This would leave 600,000 men in reserve, but from these must be deducted at least 200,000 for garrison work in the empire and for duty along the communication lines.

German Says Mammon, Not Humanity, Prompted Note

Lieutenant, Writing to American from the Field, Ridicules Fair Play of United States in Protest Against U-Boat Warfare—Compares Struggle to a Prize Fight.

(Special Dispatch)

BERLIN, Saturday.

The Deutsche Tageszeitung, of Berlin, prints a letter written by Lieutenant Hans von Goecke to a friend, a young woman in Pittsburg, whom he had known and fallen in love with when she was traveling in Germany in her girlhood. The letter was written directly after the receipt in Germany of President Wilson's last and firm note on the U-boat warfare and the communication is interesting in so far as it discloses the bitterness which the majority of Germans feel regarding the attitude of the United States and their inability to grasp the real situation.

The letter is dated "In the Field, Easter Sunday, 1916" and is as follows:—

"My Dear Ruth:—To-day I had the opportunity of reading the beloved note sent by the representative of your nation. I must say that I could not have imagined a more unpleasant Easter present. Of course, politics has no interest for me as a soldier. I fight, do my duty for my Emperor and my country, and am ready, if need be, to die. But when I read the friendly letter of your countryman I thought of you. Thoughts will take such channels.

"It is perhaps twenty years since we first became acquainted. It was a beautiful friendship for me, for you were pretty and an American. You spoke German with a charming accent and I fell in love with you up to my ears. You flirted with me, as only a little American of eleven years can flirt. However, there developed between us a sincere and lasting friendship.

Dwells on Friendship.

"We grew older. I became a lieutenant. You remained an American, the only change being that you grew prettier with the lapse of time and then we both began to dance together. All the doors in Berlin were opened to you as well as to me and many hearts were laid at your feet. You were entertained and loved. You were invited everywhere and gladly accepted the invitations. You had every liberty that was denied our own young ladies. You were permitted to attend dances and balls free from the watchful eye of a protecting mamma. You could go to theatre unattended. You could live alone in a pension and invite young men to tea. You could do anything you pleased, for you were an American. I must admit you knew how to take care of yourself, and German society loved and respected you. And close though our friendship grew, it always remained true friendship, and I never even kissed you. We passed many pleasant hours together, and you at one time assured me that you loved Germany as you did your own home, and you repeated that assertion some time later when we met again in Paris at that charming villa of your grandmother's near Saint Cloud, where one of the foreign attachés fell desperately in love with you. All this now comes back to my mind, and I would not write to you now but for the fact that thousands of other Americans like yourself have been Germany's guests and friends for years.

"Tell me, dear Ruth, what do you think of the attitude of your countrymen? Aren't you ashamed down to the uttermost little corner of your heart? Is not your friendship for Germany insulted? Do you not see the vast injustice of your attitude—the injustice of this whole war? You Americans always speak of fair play, and your notes ring with 'justice' and 'humanity.'

Gives German View.

"Shall I tell you, dear Ruth, how the while thing looks to us?

"Two adversaries are fighting each other, and both are of equal strength at the beginning of the conflict. One stands entirely alone; he has no friends and must depend entirely on his own resources and own powers. Nevertheless, he gains advantage after advantage. He fights fairly and squarely. His adversary has many friends among the spectators, and when they notice that no is being beaten they do everything to strengthen him and freshen him up. However, it is of no avail, for he continues to receive punishment. Then the spectators take away the pitcher of water from which the stronger one has the right to drink between the rounds. But it avails not. Then they take from him the towel with which he wipes his perspiring brow. Yet he remains the stronger. The spectators are in a rage, and cry:—

"'You can now fight only while standing on one foot, for one of the buttons from your left shoe flew off and hit one of us in the nose so that it bled.

"Such is the situation, dear Ruth. Should any such scene be witnessed at one of your big sporting events, you would be the first to cry out against it. Yet you speak of fair play. Are you not ashamed of yourselves?

"Of course, I realize the motive that lies behind it all. To you the whole situation is a matter of business. Your constant cry about humanity, neutrality and justice is nonsense. The few countrymen of yours that lie on the bottom of the sea are a matter of indifference to you. You would never trouble yourself about them were it not for the fact that our submarines are likely to ruin your business by sinking the ships in which you send your ammunition to our enemies and thus place them in a very uncomfortable and embarrassing position, leading to financial bankruptcy.

Ridicules "Humanity."

"Don't speak to us of your so-called humanity. Business is business with you. What care you for Germany unless you can make money out of her?

"I wonder, dear Ruth, if your husband is also manufacturing ammunition in Pittsburg. Aren't you happy because of the big profits he is making? And in the evening, when you place around your beautiful throat the rope of pearls which your husband has presented to you out of these profits, don't you notice somebody looking over your shoulders? Don't you then think of that Prussian lieutenant whom you loved so much, and back to whom your thoughts went on your wedding day? And what if this same lieutenant should be killed on the battlefield by one of those very shells made in your husband's manufacturing plant?

"My dear Ruth, I do not want to give you any pain. You are entirely innocent in the whole matter. After all, your people are faithful to their God—only your God is Mammon. Some time you will be sorry for it all.

"You have my best wishes, dear friend, and I trust that you will receive many more ropes of pearls to adorn your beautiful throat and neck, provided the blood that clings to them does not horrify you.

"Business is business. Fare you well, my dear. Yours faithfully,

"HANS VON GOECKE."

Says Airship Will Be Aerially What Automobile Is on Land

(Special Dispatch)

VIENNA, Saturday.

Dr. Constantin Freiherr von Economo, president of the Austrian Aero Club, has written an interesting letter to his associates from the battle front, praising the work of the Austrian aviators and predicting a great future in aerial navigation after the close of the war.

"I send you all my best wishes from the front," he writes, "and regret that my duties are such that I cannot very well be present at your annual meeting to tell you in person of the glorious work that is being done by our aviators. Many of them have died for their country, notably Major Hoffery, whom we mourn deeply. My dear friends and associates—there is one request that I want to make, and that is, to keep our club intact. No doubt in these times the association cannot continue its original purpose of encouraging aviation from the standpoint of sport, but for the great future before us it is incumbent upon you to keep the membership and, if possible, get new members.

"The part that our club has played in this great war will only be thoroughly appreciated after the conflict is over. It made possible the building of the heavy, strong airships which have made such an excellent showing compared to the light machines of the enemy. Austria really was the first to build this kind of airship, and Germany at once recognized our superiority of construction and adopted our principle for heavy, weight carrying ships, and, whether they want to or not, all the countries engaged in the war must also adopt this principle. And for all this credit is due to our club, whose members, by their industry and originality, laid the foundation for the building of the big airships."

SUBSTITUTING INSURANCE FOR PENSIONS

After a trial extending over ten years, the method of pensioning college professors that was devised by the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching is to be abandoned as "unsound, and for it is to be substituted a system of insurance up to 5, followed by annuities for life The funds required by this new system are to come from contributions by the teacher and his institution, the Foundation itself giving protection against disability and guaranteeing pensions for widows, interest on accumulations and expenses of administration.

The reasons offered for this change of plan justify a good many of the criticisms to which it was subjected—by those whom it did not benefit—when it was first announced. It seems that the pensions, as hitherto granted, not only did not take in all the universities and colleges—the result of which, as is well known, has been the creation of a lot of bitterness in educational circles—but they interfered with the natural movements of professors from one seat of learning to another. Worst of all, and as was confidently prophesied would be the case, the pensions have often been treated as a part of the professors' regular compensation and as an excuse for keeping salaries down. That was an almost inevitable effect, so far as concerned the institutions with small endowments, and the tendency would be in the same direction in them all, for even the most prosperous do not have as much money as they want or need, and an opportunity to economize on salaries is always welcomed and usually utilized.

Pensions are most natural for those who, in a distinctly public service, directly risk life and limb. For soldiers, policemen, and firemen they seem entirely right, but dubiety begins when they are extended to other groups, for then, by decreasing the necessity for economy and foresight, they diminish the exercise of those qualities, generally catalogued among the virtues. Insurance is a different matter, though just why an adequately waged worker should be either compelled or helped to pay for it could not be very easily or definitely explained—no more easily or definitely than why there should have to be, or at any rate is, so much persuasion employed in a business which more than almost any other would have excuse for saying to its customers, "Take it or leave it!"

A WEAK CHESTED BOY.

"My daughter suffered from inflamed eyelids and eczema on her head," writes Mr. H. W. Lear, Port Planford, Nfld. "The child was in a bad state and suffered greatly. The doctor failed to help her and on recommendation of a friend I used Dr. Chase's Ointment, which made a complete cure. With a grateful heart I write you this letter."

USED SAME SHOES 17 YEARS

WOMAN SAYS THERE IS PLENTY MORE WEAR LEFT IN THEM.

GEORGETOWN, Del., July 5.—Using one pair of shoes for seventeen years without repairs Mrs. Nathan Messick of Georgetown declares she has the oldest pair of shoes in continued use in the country.

Seventeen years ago she purchased the shoes from William G. Bryan, who kept a crossroads store between George town and Laurel. Since that time Mrs. Messick can recall few Sundays when she has not worn them, which means their employment for 884 days, or nearly two years and a half of solid use.

Mrs. Messick prizes the shoes highly and from appearances declares they will last her five or six years more.

GERMANY'S FRIEND

C. Huntington Jacobs, the Harvard senior whose fiery sonnet, "Gott Mit uns," influenced Professor Kuno Meyer to write a letter to President Lowell of Harvard, berating the university authorities for sanctioning the award of a prize for such an unneutral poem, has written another poetical attack on Germany. Jacobs' poem decries the alliance of Germany with Turkey, and is entitled "The Chant of Love." It is published in The Harvard Illustrated, and is a paraphrase to the English version of "Gott Strafe England." It follows:

Dane and Bulgar they matter not;
A smile for a smile, and a plot for a plot;
We love them not, they love us not;
We hold stern power their heads above,
We have but one and only love,
We hate as one, we love as one,
We have one friend and one alone—Turkey!

He is known full well, he is known full well;
He rules the Land of the Crimson Flood.
Rich in madness, in craft of hell,
Cut off by torrents of Christian blood.
Come let us greet him hand to hand,
An oath to offer sublimely grand,
An oath which conscience shall never shake,
An oath for our sons and their sons to take.
Come hear the word, repeat the word,
Through Kultur's citadels make it heard;
We will never repent our love,
We have all but a single love:
We hate as one, we love as one,
We have one friend and one alone—Turkey!

Take ye the robe of our God in pay,
With Kultur from Krupp your ramparts lay;
Trample their towns to a Belgian slough;
Ye are keen for the work, and we'll show you how;
Dane and Bulgar they matter not;
A smile for a smile, and a plot for a plot;
We have fettered their arms with quill and steel;
And the scars of our lash are slow to heal.
But you will we love with a kindred love;
We will never repent our love!
Love in battle and butchery,
Love of the cleaver and love of the crown.
Love of a nation to hell brought down!
We hate as one, we love as one,
We have one friend and one alone—Turkey!

Little Hullnesses

After one of the successful attacks of the German air fleet on England six little girls in Schleswig-Holstein, the oldest one of whom is eleven years old, sent two dollars and the following letter to Count Zeppelin: "Dear Count:—Will you accept our little gift of eight marks as an expression of our joy over the deeds of your airships? We know that you have plenty of money and do not need our few pennies, but you may give them to the man who threw the first bomb on London, or to some wounded aviator. We made the money collecting acorns in the forest and selling them."

STEEL CORSELETS FOR BRITAIN'S OFFICERS

If Captain Shaughnessy Had Only Worn Novel Armor—Privates Get Helmets

Frederick Palmer writes from British Headquarters in France: "Score one for breastplates," said an officer who had been doubled over by a shell fragment which hit him in the abdomen. Instead of a flow of blood crimsoning his blouse all that was visible through the rent in the cloth was an abrasion on a steel surface. "But for your new corset your aorta would have been opened and you would have been dead by now," the surgeon told him.

Early in the war an officer who wore protection of this kind would have been frowned on by his fellows as unsoldierly. A type of corselet of small plates of highly tempered steel joined together by steel wires is being more and more worn by officers. Its structure adapts itself to the movements of the body, it weighs only a few pounds and, fitting snugly as a vest, it is not cumbrous. If the son of Lord Shaughnessy, president of the Canadian Pacific, who was killed, had been wearing one, his life would have been saved. Since then Canadian commanders have strongly urged all their officers to buy corselets.

Bullets Penetrate

Of course, the corselet is worse than no protection against bullets, unless they are spent. Such is their power of penetration that they go through the thin steel, "mushrooming" and making a larger wound than if nothing had been in their way. But in the trenches unless one shows his head above the parapet and in moving about in the shell zone in the rear of the trenches one is rarely exposed to bullets. When an officer goes into a charge in face of machine gun and rifle fire he takes off his corselet.

On average days in the trenches the main danger is from shrapnel bullets and fragments from shell explosions, which may inflict ugly and fatal wounds preventable by comparatively thin protection to such a vulnerable substance as human flesh. Together a corselet and steel helmet pretty well shield vital parts from missiles of low velocity. The use of the corselet is practically limited to officers, who pay for them out of their own pockets. The expense and labor of supplying all ranks of a great army with them would seem out of the question.

British Helmets Better

But gradually all the British soldiers are being supplied with the steel helmets after their successful use by the French who first introduced them. The French pattern is quite graceful beside the British which is round and somewhat the shape of a toadstool. The British is heavier than the French and there is method in its soup-plate grotesqueness. Thanks to its form, a bullet which strikes it in front, instead of going through the head as is the case with the French helmet, glances and follows the inside of the helmet, passing out at the rear

SILENCE OF KITCHENER

Made Japanese Think Him the Greatest of Europeans

When Kitchener visited Manchuria and Japan upon the expiration of his command in India, 1909, the Japanese laid themselves out to impress him with various exhibitions of their military power, of which they were very reasonably proud. But the most imposing pageant in the world, its pomps and vanities, were as nothing in Kitchener's eyes. His hosts viewed his silence, his expressionless immobility, if with disappointment, at least with profound respect. It was, in fact, like their own ideal of impenetrable reserve, and, as a Far Eastern friend who was in Kitchener's entourage later said, Kitchener was regarded by the Japanese as the greatest European they had ever seen.

GREAT EVENTS PENDING.

British developments on the West front have raised popular expectancy to a high pitch. At last the greatest volunteer army in history appears to be ready for the mighty task committed to it by a waiting civilisation. For two years the British navy and the heroic conscript army of embattled France, have held the Kaiser's stupendous machine in check, while Kitchener manufactured his army out of raw civilians, and Lloyd George harnessed the nation for the production of guns, munitions and supplies.

The miracle has been performed. Five million British men are in khaki. The United Kingdom is one vast armament factory. Half of Northern France is occupied by probably 2,000,000 British troops, not parks but forts of the world's most powerful guns, and storms of munitions that would compel the envy of Napoleon, and all the other military captains of the past. One hundred years ago, 200 years ago, and again 300 years ago, the stubborn, if slow-moving, British, rescued human freedom from the all but successful assaults of world-conquering tyrants. Once more they are about to repeat that splendid performance.

This time they are reinforced by the armies of overseas Britain. In these events, with which 1916 is already big, Canadians, Anzacs and South Africans will play an important role in full keeping with the glory they have won during the early stages of the war. The superb French nation shows no sign of depression, but rather increases in spirit and elan. The Russians and Italians are strongly attacking the Austrian and Turkish forces. But it is on the West front that the decisive events of the next few weeks and months are to be anticipated. The initial successes upon the Somme River are of the most cheering character.

The Germans are getting more than they have ever been able to give in the way of big gun attack and high explosive bombardment. Too much must not be expected all at once. The enterprise ahead of the British army is not an easy one. The foe is still puissant. The Ally commands do not propose to throw their men away. Sustained commanding will precede every infantry advance. The more recruits we raise and the more troops we send forwards, the surer and the sooner will the German spirit be broken and the world escape from the inferno of war into which the Kaiser's mad ambitions plunged it.—Toronto News.

COOLING DRINKS.

When one has heavy work to do, requiring the aid of a strengthening drink, nothing is so helpful and so harmless as home-made drinks, which in all cases should take the place of alcoholics. For oatmeal drinks, stir a quarter of a pound of oatmeal into two or three quarts of water, according to your thirst and heat of the day. Boil this together for an hour, then let cool and strain. If too thick to drink smoothly, add more water. To this amount add an ounce or two of brown sugar, according as you like the taste. Some people prefer to have it unstrained, and shake well before drinking. It not only quenches the thirst but gives strength and endurance beyond any other beverage, with no bad effects.

If not convenient to boil it, stir into cold water the oatmeal and sugar. The quantity of oatmeal may be increased to half, or three-quarters of a pound. Some add the juice of one lemon to the amount but it is just as good without it. It makes a very pleasant drink if one tablespoonful of the meal is stirred into one quart of water, boiled for one half an hour, strained and cooled before sweetening.

BLACKBERRY JAM A 'GOLD PRESERVE'

HEIR OF WOMAN BELIEVED TO HAVE DIED PENNILESS FINDS $5500 IN GOLD IN A FRUIT JAR.

Morgantown, W. Va., July 8. — While rummaging through the effects of Mrs. Alpheus Michaels, an aged woman, who was believed to have died almost penniless, Mrs. F. L. V. Marsden of Albright, found a jar containing $5500 in gold.

Mrs. Marsden, a niece of the dead woman, is the only heir. She took her aunt to her home to take care of her during her declining years.

The jar containing the gold was among a lot of other jars of fruit and it would not have been opened had it not been that it felt heavier than the rest. It was sealed and labelled — "Blackberry Jam."

PATRIOTISM

Patriotism, like Charity, should begin at home. The man who is willing at any time to protect his country against foreign foes should be willing AT ALL TIMES to protect his Family against such common foes as Poverty, Privation and Suffering.

A Life Insurance Company cannot take the place of a Husband.

BUT—

It can preserve the family from want.
It can lighten their load of care.
It can build a barrier against adversity.
It can strengthen the foundation of the home.
It can certify to a man's affectionate regard for his family.
It can place his widow beyond the need of carrying for support.
It can add to a man's years by freeing him from anxiety.
It can enhance the respect and esteem of the public and of his wife and children for him.

BELGIANS FORCED WITH BAYONETS TO WORK FOR TEUTONS

British Foreign Office Protests Against Violations of Hague Convention — Governor General Von Bissing Blamed

AMERICAN AMBASSADOR IS NOTIFIED OF GERMAN "INHUMANITY" TO WORKMEN.

LONDON, July 5.—In a communication address to the Spanish and American Ambassadors and the Dutch Minister here, as patrons of the Commission for Relief in Belgium, the Foreign Office calls attention to a decree said to have been issued on May 15 by Governor General von Bissing, the German Governor of Belgium, creating more stringent laws against Belgian workers who refuse employment.

The Foreign Office protested last September, through the patrons of the commission, against decrees issued by Von Bissing on August 14 and 15 regarding labor in Belgium. Referring to that protest, the present communication states that at that time the Marquis of Crewe wrote to the patrons that if the German authorities used the machinery of the commission and that of the Comite National for the purpose of coercing the civilian population of Belgium, against its will and conscience, directly or indirectly, into sion and the committee considered de- they must themselves provide the relief which those bodies dispense and all arrangements between the British government and the commision would have to cease.

In a subsequent letter, dated, July 17, Sir Edward Grey, stipulated that there must be no interference of any king by the German authorities either with the sale or free distribution of foodstuffs to those whom the commision and the committee consedered deserving of such relief.

A PROMISE—AND A RESULT

Replying to this letter, Baron von der Lecken, Civil Governor of Brussels, stated in a letter to Braund Whitlock, the American Minister to Belgium, and the Marquis de Villalobar, Spanish Minister to Belgium, that Governor General von Bissing would never use the committee as a means of forcing the Belgian population to serve the German army, contrary to the stipulation of The Hague convention.

In August, however, according to the present communication, the German authorities issued two decrees, which provided heavy penalties for those who, having refused work, become a charge on either private or public relief. Both these decrees contained a clause exempting from their operation those cases where refusal to work was based on considerations admitted by international law.

In reference to this Sir Edward Grey stated:—"I am well aware that the German authorities will claim this exemption is a sufficient fulfillment of their promise quoted above." But he expressed the opinion that such promises had little effect on German military tribunals. He charges that recent investigations have disclosed evidence to support the belief that relief committees, communal soup kitchens, etc., in many cases have been forbidden to relieve those classes of workmen whose labour is desired by the German authorities.

The statement continues to say that since Sir Edward Grey wrote the letter quoted above reports have been received of futher attempts by the Germans to requisition labor for military needs. Stories confirmed the avowed policy of Von Bissing, as embodied in the decree of May 15, which supersedes previous decrees, are recounted. The decree of May 15 provides heavier penalties of imprisonment for recalcitrant workers, while all persons, communes, associations, and other groups giving relief to those refusing work are liable to a fine of not more than 10,000 marks and imprisonment for not more than two years. The whole administration of the decree, except a minor provision relating to false declarations of indigence, is placed in the

WORK AT BAYONET'S POINT

The decree includes a provision whereby workers can be forcibly led to places of employment. Evidence of the use of this authority is quoted from the nineteenth report of the Belgian Commission of Inquiry, which states that many workers were forcibly taken from their houses at the point of the bayonet, and that in the absence of the workers members of the family were taken as hostages.

After disorder during which the Uhlans are asserted to have charged peaceful inhabitants, some recalcitrant workers were deported to Germany where it is alleged they were compelled to clear forests and dig trenches under conditions inimical to health and under the penalty of cruel punishment.

"As it is presumably useless," says the communication "to urge upon the German authorities the inhumanity of their actions, his Majesty's government is therefore reduced to base their protest solely on the fact of the decrees of May 15, which is yet another direct and deliberate infraction of the undertakings of the German government to the Commission for Relief in Belgium. The German authorities have promised solemnly to abstain from all interference in the work of relief and leave those dispensing it free and untrammelled. Yet openly, by decrees issued, oppressive measures adopted and the pursuance of these decrees in all parts of Belgium, they not only leave the population of Belgium, to be saved from starvation solely by the United States, but they also seek to bring about that Belgians shall be enabled, by the maintenance thus afforded them to work for their enemy and so postpone by their own labor, the restoration of their freedom and the independence of their country.

Ques.: "What does your pay-roll amount to?"

Ans.: "Oh, say $10,000 a month."

Ques.: "Quite a wad. Of course you insure it?"

Ans.: "Insure it? What's the idea Frank?"

Ques.: "Well—you see, you're paying out $120,000 a year. Now you insure your building, equipment, stock, etc., why not insure your pay-roll, against loss—to you."

Ans.: "Ask me something easy. What's the point and what's the cost?"

Ques.: "The point is that your pay-roll represents your purchase of the greatest of all raw materials—WORKING TIME. Its subject to loss every day—four times a day—or every time your employees come in and go out of your plant."

Ans.: "Yes, but I employ a time-keeper."

Ques.: "Of course you do. But he's human. Who checks your time-keeper? And who checks the man who checks him? You need a cold-blooded machine for that job—so there will be no favorites or no mistakes."

Ans.: "There isn't any such machine."

Ques.: "Isn't there? Probably your keenest competitor to-day is using it and is just that much ahead of you. And it will cost you perhaps $3 a month to use it. I mean the International Time Recorder. It's the cheapest and best pay-roll insurance you can buy. Gives you printed, unchangeable, records, made under lock and key, that become your weekly pay-sheets. If you want real, inside facts and figures on the system exactly suited to your business write International Time Recording Co., corner McGill and Notre Dame streets, Montreal, or to their Head Office, Anderson Street, Toronto, for latest folders and prices."

HOT-WEATHER RULES.

1. Load lightly, and drive slowly.
2. Stop in the shade if possible.
3. Water your horse as often as possible. So long as a horse is working, water in small quantities will not hurt him. But let him drink only a few swallows if he is going to stand still. Do not fail to water him at night after he has eaten his hay.
4. When he comes in after work, sponge off the harness marks and sweat, his eyes, his nose and mouth, and the dock. Wash his feet but not his legs.
5. If the thermometer is 75 degrees or higher, wipe him all over with a damp sponge, using vinegar water if possible. Do not wash the horse at night.
6. Saturday night, give a bran mash, lukewarm; and add a tablespoonful of saltpetre.
7. Do not use a horse-hat, unless it is a canopy-top hat. The ordinary bell-shaped hat does more harm than good.
8. A sponge on top of the head, or even a cloth, is good if kept wet. If dry it is worse than nothing.
9. If the horse is overcome by heat, get him into the shade, remove harness and bridle, wash out his mouth, sponge him all over, shower his legs, and give him two ounces of aromatic spirits of ammonia, or two ounces of sweet spirits of nitre, in a pint of water; or give him a pint of coffee warm. Cool his head at once, using cold water, if necessary, chopped ice, wrapped in a cloth.
10. If the horse is off his feed, try him with two quarts of oats mixed with bran, and a little water; and add a little salt or sugar. Or give him oatmeal gruel or barley water to drink.
11. Watch your horse. If he stops sweating suddenly, or if he breathes short and quick, or if his ears droop, or if he stands with his legs braced sideways, he is in danger of a heat or sun stroke and needs attention at once.

FIND YOUNG WOMAN DEAD AFTER ORGY; COMPANION HELD

William Lester Arrested After Carousal in Parents Apartment

NEW YORK, July 5.—The story of a little orphan girl who came to a big city to make her living sought the white lights as an escape from loneliness, and died after a gay midnight party in the home of a wealthy youth was revealed to the police today while the body of "Teddy" Roberts lay unclaimed on a morgue slab.

The girl, only nineteen years old, and of unusual beauty, was found dead from gas asphyxiation in the home of Charles E. Lister, wealthy commission merchant, in Brooklyn.

Lister's 21-year-old son, William, who entertained a week-end party of three young men and three girls, including Miss Roberts, while his parents were at their summer home, is under arrest on a charge of homicide.

The police are not fully satisfied, they say to-day, with young Lister's story that he discovered the girl dead in bed yesterday morning after smelling gas fumes coming from her room. They believe a farewell note found near her body is framed in a masculine hand, and the disordered condition of the room in which she died they say, indicate the possibility if a struggle.

Detectives with difficulty located relatives of the girl at Johnstown, N.Y. They learned that she came from a good family, and that after her parents died she left for New York to study to become a nurse.

She was lonely in New York. In her search for companions she made acquaintances among chorus girls, who suggested that her beauty would make it easy for her to gain employment on the stage.

She followed their suggestion, gave up all thoughts of becoming a nurse, and became a chorus girl at the Hippodrome.

Three weeks ago she met young Lister. He told the police that he flirted with her in the subway. She told him she was lonely, and after several clandestine meetings he proposed that she join a gay party at his home after his parents went away for the summer.

The party began Saturday night and continued through Sunday. On Sunday night, according to Lister, the two other girls and youths left, but Miss Roberts decided to remain all night.

Lister said the girl occupied a room separate from him, and that he knew nothing of her death until he rose on Monday morning.

ECZEMA ON THE HEAD.

Mr. Peterson, South Bay, Ont., writes: "For years I suffered a sort of eczema on the head. I tried four different doctors, giving each a fair trial, but the disease grew worse and spread to my arms. I got Dr. Chase's Ointment, and it has entirely cured me. I give you my name because I want other sufferers to know about this splendid Ointment."

BABY KILLED WITH SHOTGUN

Vineland, N. J., July 6.—Maria Faraccia, 12 years old, was holding her baby brother, Joseph, on her knee in front of their home this afternoon, when Arthur Faraccia, 10 years old, a neighbor, found a loaded shotgun under the porch, a weapon which the girl's father had kept for crows, he said.

While the children was playing the gun was discharged. The load of shot killed the infant almost immediately, and sent scattering shot into the body of the girl. The police said they would take no action.

Lindsay's New Arsenal to Supplement That at Quebec.

OTTAWA, July 7.—Lindsay's new arsenal will be in operation before long. The arrangements for the plant are practically concluded, and the home town of the Minister of Militia will have an additional industry.

Canada's only arsenal is now at Quebec. Since its reorganization a couple of years ago, it has been doing good work and turning out first-class ammunition. The demands of the war, however, have taxed its capacity and this is the reason assigned for establishing a supplementary plant. It will be operated on quite extensive lines during the war, but even after peace comes it is planned as a permanent institution.

The selection of Lindsay is doubtless due to the influence of Sir Sam Hughes. It is a case of looking after "number one."

Russian Gains Are Continuing

BRITISH AND FRENCH IMPROVE POSITION

Big Austrian Force Is Cut Off By The Russians

Sudden Dash of Russian Ifantry That Captured Miklenczyn Cut off Retreat of Between 20000 and 30000 Troops --Russians Hope to Effect Their Capture---French Make Further Gains and Capture 350 Prisoners East of Estrees.

BRITISH ARE IMPROVING THEIR POSITIONS

PETROGRAD, July 8.—An Austrian force estimated at between 20,000 and 30,000 has been cut off by the Russians southwest of Kolomea.

The Austrians were massed east of the railway leading southward through Jablonitza pass. The sudden dash of a Russian infantry body that seized the railway station at Mikluiczyn cut off their retreat to the south. The right wing of the same Russian army, advancing westward upon Nadvorna severed their communication with the Austrian forces to the north.

To-day's reports to the War Office said that Russian troops were attempting to squeeze the Austrians in against the foothills of the Carpathians and effect their capture before they can escape through the mountain passes. Russian aeroplanes report the withdrawal of enemy heavy artillery on the right wing of Gen. Von Bothmer's German army. From the Volhynian battle ground northward the Germans continue a most stubborn defense. Both on the Riga-Divinsky front, and in the fighting around Sokul, where the Russians have made further progress, the enemy is counter-attacking with great vigor. Large numbers of Austrian troops who were cut off by the Russian advance into Bukowina have crossed into Roumania with arms and equipment and are being interned at Dobrudja.

Second Week Of Allied Offensive

Examiner Special:

Allies are Everywhere Attacking and Maintaining Their Early Gains at Practically Every Point—German Losses Estimated at 35,000 Killed or Wounded and Nearly 20,000 Captured in Fighting in West

LONDON, July 8.—The super-offensive of the Allied armies entered its second week to-day with the Allies everywhere attacking and maintaining their early gains at practically every point, despite heavy enemy counter-attacks. A heavy downpour of rain has converted the battle ground of both sides of the Somme into a great heap of mud and seriously hampered operations. Despite this the French War Office to-day reported further progress.

No official estimates of either French or British losses have been made by the War Office since the offensive began at 7:30 last Saturday morning, but the Germans are unofficially reported to have lost from 35,000 killed and wounded, besides nearly 20,000 taken prisoners by the British and French.

Military critics are certain that the retirement of Gen. Von Bothmer's army under Russian pressure in Galicia is now but a matter of days.

London has high hopes for the success of the new offensive near Riga, but does not entertain the belief that Gen. Von Hindenburg's line can be smashed with the same ease as was Gen. Flanzer's in Bukowina.

Further Advance By The French

Examiner Special:

PARIS (French Official), July 8.—French troops broke the lull in the fighting south of the Somme last night with slight further advances against the German lines southwest of Peronne. In the fighting near Belloy-En-Santerre, the French captured 350 prisoners in the course of a bold stroke made Friday evening, the War Office stated to-day. East of the village of Estrees the French made progress grenades in a German trench, capturing fifty prisoners. Bad weather generally hindered operations on the Somme front throughout the night.

On the Verdun front a violent artillery struggle waged. No infantry actions. In Lorraine a French grenade attack cleaned up a German post near Benzeaux.

5,000 of Prussian Guards Are Killed

LONDON, July 8.—Five thousand of the Kaiser's famous Prussian guardsmen have been killed in the fighting around Contalmaison, east of Albert, says a Paris despatch to-day.

Anxiety in Germany Over Allied Offensive

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 8.—The London newspapers printed several despatches from Holland and Denmark to-day indicating increasing public anxiety in Germany on account of the Western and Eastern offenses of the Allies. The Kaiser, one English correspondent reported, is travelling from front to front conferring with his generals, each advising against the reduction of his forces for the benefit of others. Another correspondent wired that the Crown Prince is being blamed for persisting in the Verdun attack when his forces are urgently needed on the Somme. Military circles in Germany moreover, he reported, are discouraged because of the Austrian weakness. To complete the picture of pessimism, several English correspondents agreed that the food situation in Germany is daily growing more serious. The Frankfurter Zeitung was quoted as saying that the great fight for victory or defeat has only begun.

A RECORD CROWD EXPECTED FOR THE GLORIOUS TWELFTH

Lodges From as Far Away Points as Stouffeville and Orillia Will Spend the Day in Peterboro—Music and Bands Galore.

THE ROUTE OF PARADE

The celebration of the Glorious Twelfth in Peterborough on Wednesday next, promises to be marked by the largest attendance of lodges in the history of the Orange Order in this city. The local committee have been informed that not only will the lodges from the immediate district be here, but that there will be ladges from Stouffville, Markham, Orillia, and other distant points. There will, of course, be music and bands galore. The first trains will start to come in around 8 o'clock and the last is due at 17.30 a.m. Central Park will be the gathering place and as the lodges arrive they will be marched direct to the Park, where they will be allotted their space and then disperse for dinner after depositing their banners, etc., in the Armouries.

Bro. E. F. Reid of Peterborough will be the Grand Marshal. The procession is billed to start at Central Park at 1.30 p.m., and will cover the following route: Central Park, via Murray Street to George Street to Hunter Street to Park Sreet to Charlotte Street to Water Street to Dublin Street to George Street, and return to the Park.

"BEANING" MUST STOP.

Ban Johnson Takes Firm Stand Against Practice.

CHICAGO, July 8.—Ban Johnson, chief consulting physician of our national pastime, came to bat yesterday with a suggestion which he believes will go far towards persuading vindictive pitchers against the use of the "bean ball." There has been much complaint against the practice this season.

Johnson's idea is to give a hit player two bases instead of the one to which he, under the present rules is entitled.

"I am loath to believe," opined Mr. Johnson, "that any player would deliberately injure another, but there seems to be a growing belief that pitchers are resorting to throwing balls at a player's head in order to intimidate or drive him away from the plate. It must stop."

ANOTHER PETERBORO SOLDIER HAS BEEN KILLED IN ACTION

Pte. Geo. Mehwe Who Enlisted With a Second Contingent Battalion Here in November 1912, Has Been Killed at The Front---Lt. Col. Johnston in City To-day--Pte. Nicholls Wounded---Yesterday's Orders and General Military News.

The news reached the city to-day that another Peterborough man had fallen in the good fight when Mrs. Emily Mehew, 139 Rubidge street, received a wire saying her husband, Pte. George Mehew, had been killed in action on June 24th. Pte. Mehew was one of the first Peterborough soldiers to enlist here, and left for Valcartier on August 24th, 1914, with the 34th Field Battery draft. He returned to Peterborough, however, for medical attention and enlisted in November, 1914 with a second contingent battalion.. Mehew was 35 years of age, and leaves behind him a young wife and three small children. He had been in this country but a few years before he enlisted. His wife had received two letters from him this week, the last one being dated June 20th, in which he wrote cheerfully and expressed a hope of coming through all right.

Barriefield, July 7.—The 109th Battalion has the best tug-of-war team at Barriefield Camp, the championship having been won on Thursday afternoon after some of the most strenuous contests ever seen at the camp. The weather was ideal and an immense crowd gathered for the event which was pulled at 4.30 o'clock in front of the headquarters administration building.

All the battalions were represented by teams, and after the preliminary contests had been disposed of, the pull settled down to a match between the team of the 109th and that of the 154th. After four tries and amid shouts from the interested spectators the Lindsay team managed to bring the Glengarry squad over the mark.

At the conclusion, Col. T. D. R. Hemming, camp commandant, presented Lieut. James Leckie, captain of the 109th team, with an order for the prize. Lieut.-Col. B. A. Thomson was judge of the contest, and Major Cameron was captain of the 154th team.

Mrs. Rollins, wife of the 93rd Battalion quartermaster, and daughter, Jessie, her sister, Mrs. McCann, of Kingston, and Miss Margaret Stevenson, also of Peterborough, were guests at the 93rd Battalion for dinner on Thursday evening.—Kingston Whig.

Lt.-Col. Johnston, Officer Commanding the 93rd Battalion, is home from Barriefield Camp to-day, transferring the stores of the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons to Major McCulloch, the second in command of the Dragoons. Col. Johnston returns to Barriefield this evening.

With the exception of two or three men in the hospital who are too ill to be moved, all the members of the 93rd Battalion are concentrated at Barriefield.

Pte. Albert Nicholls, who enlisted here in the fall of 1914 with a second contingent battalion, has been wounded again, official news having been received by his father, Mr. A. Nicholls, 571 Bethune Street. Pte. Nicholls is officially reported admitted to No. 3 General Hospital, Boulogne, on June 26, suffering from shell concussion. This is the second time Pte. Nicholls name has appeared on the casualty list.

Mrs. Boorman, 243 McDonnel street, is in receipt of a cablegram from her son, —Bandsman H. Barnard Boorman, saying he arrived safely in England. He is with the 94th Battery C. E. F.

CHALLENGED THREE TIMES THEN FIRED AT GROUND

Bullet Recochetted and Broke in Two Both Parts Entering the Body of Gunner Russell Elliott—Verdict in Investigation Exonerates Sentry Who Fired Fatal Shot

WEST GIVEN LIBERTY

PTE. ROY GADOUA
With the 93rd Battalion, Barriefield Camp.

Special to The Examiner:

KINGSTON, Ont., July 8.—In the case of the shooting of Gunner Elliott, of Peterborough, by Gunner West at the Dry Dock Barracks, Kingston, on Thursday night, the Coroner's jury last night brought in the following verdict: "We, the jury empannelled to enquire into the death of Russell Elliott, agree unanimously that the deceased came to his death as the result of being accidentally shot by Sentry West in the discharge of his duty."

Lieut.-Colonel Gardiner, A.D.M.S., who performed the post-mortem, stated that he found the bullet in two parts in the body of Elliott. One part was in the arm and the other part in the abdomen, which proved that the bullet had first struck some hard substance, then struck the body of Elliott in a broken condition. Captain McManus, infantry instructor at Barriefield Camp, gave expert evidence that the bullet had first struck some hard substance like the ground, then ricochetted and struck the deceased gunner. This was in keeping with the evidence in the case, which proved that after challenging Elliott three times, West fired low, the bullet striking the ground, breaking and rebounding, struck Elliott, causing his death. The coroner discharged West, and it is hardly thought the civil authorities will pursue the case further. The finding of the Military Board of Enquiry has not yet been presented to Colonel Hemming.

Major Gardiner produced a dying declaration from Elliott, in which the latter stated that he had been challenged by the sentry.

"The guard was at the end of his beat at that time, about thirty feet away, and asked me to come up with the pass. I told him to come to where I was," said Elliott. "I would not go and he shot at me. The guard stated that he would teach me to fool with the guard, and that it served me right. After being halted, I held out my pass, and told him to come and get it."

Gunner Joseph West, who did the shooting, comes from Toronto, where his mother is living, and is but 19 years old. He was present at the inquest, under military guard, but was not called to give evidence. T. J. Rigney appeared on his behalf. He bore up well throughout the taking of the evidence, but collapsed when the verdict of the jury was about to be read by the Coroner.

THE SITUATION IN IRELAND IS STILL UNCERTAIN

However T. P. O'Connor Feels Confident That the Settlement is Safe From all Enemies and Will Pass into Law.

REFERS TO EXECUTIONS

(Copyright, 1916, Central News, By T. P. O'Connor.)

LONDON, July 8.—The great advance of the British and French troops, submerges for the moment, all other topics and if it were not that at one time the Home Rule settlement seemed fraught with such tremendous possibilities it would not be mentioned to-day. However, with this possibility of the disappearnce of the constitutional movement in Ireland, and the break up of the Ministry here, it is impossible to silence the voice of Ireland even by the thunder of guns.

The period since last week has been full of uncertainty and more than once it looked as if the Lloyd George settlement would go down before the irreconciliability of English and Irish extremists. It was confidentially prepcried, especially by Irish factionists, that the Tory enemies of the settlement might best be tranquil because the Ulster convention would kill it without giving them the trouble.

Defeat Seemed Certain.

Seven bishops and more than one hundred priests, as well as outraged patriotism in the counties of Tyrone and Fermanagh, were regarded as forces so overwhelming, that Redmond's defeat seemed certain. These calculations have left out of account the splendid good sense of the Ulster Nationalists, who unite Ulster rigidity of principle with Ulster good sense, and also forgot the immense influence of Devlin's courage and eloquence. The reaction in favour of the Irish party was soon proved by het meeting of the directory of the League in Dublin. It was the largest ever held.

John Redmond recived an enthusiastic reception and there was unbroken chorus in favour of the settlement

CANADIAN SHIP BUILDING.

A wide-awake western ship-building syndicate is arranging for the lease of the Grand Trunk Pacific plant at Prince Rupert to be used for building freighters to be operated by the company. It is proposed to build the ships of steel, and four of 5,000 tons each, are in the syndicate's programme of construction. Premier Borden may be right or wrong in asserting that "Canada cannot build ships in fifty years"; but the probability is that he is wrong. This is shown by the fact that capital, always shy of doubtful schemes, thinks Canada can build ships, and thinks in the best way, by doing it. We have the Prince Rupert example and we have ship-building under way at Halifax and at the Canadian Vickers-Maxim yards at Montreal. Good strong, practical business men are willing to trust their money in Canadian shipping. We can build ships though at the beginning we may not do so as economically as can be done in the old country. We can be helped by way of government bonus, which will be well worth while, for we shall have ample returns in a big ship-building industry of our own, meaning a big development of our resources, of material and skill as well as in the development of our commerce and agriculture by providing the great lack—shipping — to market the products of our forests, fields and factories. Canada will never get out of leading strings in the largest way unless she breaks them; and marks out and follows her own way in industrial and commercial development.

HOLDING OUR OWN.

Canada is splendidly holding her own on the fighting line, both in results and reputation. We don't find Canadians in France and Flanders surrendering one foot of vantage ground to the Huns as our government is doing in the matter of nickel—indirectly, but effectively, supplying Canadian nickel to the Germans. It is easily possible that Canadian nickel that has found its way to Germany has been instrumental in killing Canadians.

While we have our Canadian soldiers holding their own, we have the government, by its supineness in regard to controlling nickel exports, helping kill them in the process. It is awful when we look upon it in this way, that we have the neglect of our government paralysing the arms of our soldiers. The attitude of our government is negation of our duty to not only hold our own, but hold what we have. We have a virtual monopoly of nickel supply, and we should have the fullest benefit of this natural advantage—not an ounce of nickel ore should be allowed to go out of Canada in an unrefined state. By this condition Canadian industry, Canadian skill and Canadian labour would get the full advantge. We should have control of the distribution of our nickel and would not be allowing it to find its way, as it has done, into German hands, to be used against us. We are told that the Imperial Government is satisfied with the "understanding" that exists to prevent Canadian nickel reaching Germany; but in this matter we do not care a fig for the Imperial Government. We are the judges; we are the persons chiefly interested, and we, the people of Canada, are not content with any "understanding" with Huns or philo-Huns, whose solemn signature to treaties is only a "scrap of paper." We prefer to conserve our own nickel, from the mine to the market. We don't want our own nickel to be instrumental in killing to death our own soldiers. We don't want gruesome reminders of the Syrenic metaphor:

So the shrunk eagle stretched upon the plain.
No more through rolling clouds to soar again,
Viewed his own feather on the fatal dart
And winged the shaft that quivered in his heart.

WEEDS AND WASTE.

It is probable that few think enough about weeds to appreciate the loss and waste they cause. The loss to the farmers of the country from weeds is almost incalculable—as much perhaps as if every twentieth farm were not cultivated at all. The definition of a weed is a trifling variant of the definition of dirt—matter in the wrong place.

The loss from weeds is caused in various ways. They rob the soil of moisture and plant food, which should go to nourish useful plants, which they crowd out of their place. Weeds lower the value and productiveness of every crop in proportion to the extent they are allowed to flourish. Unlike useful crops they thrive without cultivation or encouragement and are a powerful enemy to adequate crop yield.

The waste and loss from weeds not only falls upon useful crops, but increases municipal expenditure. Not alone in the expense of the usual sloppy and ineffective way in which they are removed, when they are removed, from city streets, but by destroying the work, proper, of maintaining streets in good condition.

One of the first principles of good streets is good drainage. Weeds growing in gutters block the watercourses and prevent the off-flow of surface water and thus the surface, as well as the foundation of streets, is injured.

They thus destroy the work for which the money of ratepayers is expended, and we lose the benefits, which we should get from smooth and comfortably usable driving surfaces. Streets are established and maintained solely for traffic purposes, and anything that prevents the full public enjoyment of the best streets is a wrong and injury to the ratepayers.

This consideration is apart from the incidental benefits of streets, which can be made beautiful and a delight to the eye of the public. Masses of weeds, sometimes waist high, on the sides of our street, along walks, are deformities, offences to the eye and to the sense of taste; and a lusty reproach to those having charge of the care of streets. City streets, overgrown at the sides with weeds are as much a reproach to the city authorities as weed-infected gardens and farms are to the cultivators. They are a sign that proper street care is neglected, and that the money spent to maintain our streets is largely wasted.

This takes us to consideration of the two chief causes of weeds on our street sides. One cause is neglect of the civic authorities, and this cause is helped by the fact that the driving surfaces of nearly all our streets is too wide—too difficult and costly to mainfain in a good, clean condition.

Of course, for sanitary and other reasons it is necessary to have streets of the standard width of 66 feet, giving abundant open space between the lines of dwellings on each side; but there is no earthly necessity for having the driving surface the whole width of the street allowance.

The driving surface of most of our residence streets is from 30 to 40 feet, of which little more than half is actually devoted to traffic, the remainder on each side being reserved for mud-making and weed-growths.

The experience of progressive cities is that from 22 to 20 feet is an abundantly sufficient width for driving surface on residence streets. Narrow traffic surfaces on streets—sufficient for traffic, which is the sole consideration—are evidently cheaper to maintain, and more likely to be maintained, in good condition.

As is the case in Peterborough generally, our residence streets have a line of gravel or metal in the middle, exactly after the manner of a country highway; and the rest of the surface on each side is mud and—weeds—pure waste of space and waste of money, for no matter how much we spend these conditions remain; we do not have good streets, and therefore the money spent is wasted, because it does not realize what it is expended for—a good, smooth, clean, comfortable driving surface.

If we reduced the space between curbs to 28 or 32 feet and gravelled or metalled it from walk to walk, so that every foot of it could be used for wheel traffic, there would be no place for mud and weeds. The streets would be tidy and clean. We could have proper gutters and there would be no passy and sloughs and weed preserves on the sides of the streets.

As things are now, many of our streets are a disgrace of untidiness and a destruction of the beauty of adjacent lawns and boulevards, and a heart-scald to tax-paying citizens.

The complement of complaints of street mud and weeds, is suggesting a remedy.

The evil existing, the remedy is to remove it. Open the gutters so that the waste can get away, and we remove the mud; dig up the weeds and they will be removed.

These things are, however, only surface remedies. Prevention is always better than cure and less costly. The prevention of mud and weeds at street ides consists primarily in reducing traffic surfaces to a width that can be well built and cheaply maintained.

Years ago the Examiner suggested that when sidewalks were being laid there should be built at the same time curbing to enclose boulevards. The work could then be cheaply done and paid for at the same time and in the same way as the walks, and the ratepayers would not feel the burden.

It is hardly a question that it would be cheaper, all things considered, to narrow the traffic surfaces of our residence streets by lines of curbing. This would permit of the whole street surface being metalled or gravelled, and the cost of proper construction and maintenance would be lessened.

Probably no separate account is kept of the cost of cleaning and scraping the too-wide streets and cutting weeds. But if it were known it would doubtless be enough to pay the interest on the cost of narrowing the streets by lines of curbs. Besides, we should have better streets, and, in this respect, something for our money which we do not get now.

Narrowed traffic surfaces could be more cheaply built and maintained. We should not have some of our residence streets filled with mud-holes, compelling motors and other vehicles to "haw" and "gee" to avoid mud craters, as ox teams have to do to avoid stumps on the country roadways of a new settlement.

When we think over the whole situation we shall see that weeds—and the causes of them—and waste, are cause and consequence.

And when we think a little more we shall see that at the bottom of it all is lack of system, lack of alert supervision, and lack of aldermanic interest—working without plan—working in the dark.

THE RELATION OF MUNICIPAL COUNCILS TO LOCAL INDUSTRIES

As we are still in the throes of the mighty struggle against the monster of Prussian militarism, it would seem almost out of place to even discuss preparedness for peace, yet the war, on no uncertain terms will cease and when that time comes the Dominion should be in a position to forge ahead and it is the duty of those of use who are not privileged to be on the firing line to "do our bit" in laying the foundations for the new conditions (both material and social) that must be met on cessation of hostilities, for it would be indeed a lasting disgrace to us of Canada was not in a position to give congenial employment to every man who comes home from the wars, whole and wounded.

The big industry of Canada to-day—the making of munitions — at the most cannot last much longer. This means that when peace does come many factories will be idle and thousands of men and women thrown out of employment. This, together with the returned soldiers may make a huge army of out-of-works. The burden of caring for this army will be thrown on the communities as we might make sure that those who have made the vast sums of money in the munition business will not take up the responsibility. The question comes then: What are the local authorities going to do about it? How can they meet the situation? It is very evident that if the problem is not met in some practical way, chaos and poverty will be the consequences, which in turn will have a very direct effect on public progress. We have spoken of vast sums of money being made from munitions. This is well illustrated in the great increase in bank deposits—one bank alone carrying over one hundred million dollars increase—and we frankly state that these vast sums of money should be kept in the country to develop its normal industries which have suffered considerably because of the war, directly and indirectly. By normal industries we mean the utilizing by means of manufacture of the vast mineral and forest resources of the Dominion, instead of exporting our raw materials as we have been doing in the past largely because of the lack of capital. This capital is now in the country and should be used to keep our factories running. We believe that by intelligent co-operation this can be done and no one can do it so well as the municipal authorities because of their practical knowledge of local conditions.

If we were asked to make suggestions, one would be that each municipal council cause an inventory to be made of the local factories, and the report sent in to the convention of the Union of Canadian Municipalities which will be held in August. The convention in turn to elect a special committee whose busines will be to get into touch with the Federal Department of Trade and Commerce with the objeit of securing the results of its recent investigations which were carried on with the idea of finding out the opportunities for Canadian manufactures in different parts of the world. By this means each municipality would get a line on its factories, their oportunities both at home and abroad, and how best each factory could be used. It need hardly be said that Canada's success as a manufacturing country depends to a large extent on her finding profitable outside markets; and there are many.

To our mind the full working of the factories is essential to the prosperity of the neighbourhood, and though the councils have already multitudinous duties the additional one of seeking the best opportunities for the individual prosperity of the citizens must be taken up at this time if they would seek the suffrages of the people tomorrow. It is true that Boards of Trade abound in the country, some of them good, but the majority are little better than publicity associations. At the same time there is no reason why they should not work with the local councils, but it is the elected representatives of the people who must take the initiative.—Canadian Municipal Journal.

KING OF RAT CATCHERS.

Has Contract to Kill All Rodents in English Camps.

Wm. Dalton, of Southwark, who is known as the king of rat-catchers, has been given the job of killing the rats in all the army camps in England.

"This year," says the king, "I am fighting almost single-handed, and the menace is really serious. In less than six months I have caught over 12,000 rats, and cries for help are coming from all quarters.

"The Government has come to realize the necessity for killing the rats. At one camp I have already visited we caught 1,065 rats and over 70 of them weighed more than a pound and a half each."

Annual Outing of Knox Presbyterians

The annual excursion of the Knox Presbyterian church took place yesterday to Bewdley on Rice Lake and about 250 of Knox excursionists took in the long sail down the river and up the lake to Bewdley. The weather was ideal for an excursion and the affair was one of the most successful yet. A good programme of sports was run off, which caused a good afternoon's fun. The sail home up the Otonabee was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

TERMS OF THE IRISH SETTLEMENT

LLOYD GEORGE PROPOSALS FOR SATISFYING IRELAND—LANSDOWNE AND LONG WON OVER.

LONDON, JULY 7.—It is understood that the Cabinet has substantially adopted Lloyd George's proposals for the settlement of the Irish Home Rule question., Lord Lansdowne and Walter Long, who hesitated to accept the suggested arrangement, have now come into line on the ground of Imperial necessity.

The complete details of Lloyd George's scheme are published this morning. The following are the principal features:—

IRISH COMMONS.

First—An Irish House of Commons will be constructed by the transference to the Irish Parliament of seventy-eight members now sitting in the English Commons for the twenty-six Home Rule counties. (The total Irish representation in the Imperial House of Commons is 103, of which twenty-five members sit for the six Ulster counties provisionally excluded from Home Rule.)

Second—Of the seventy-eight members to be transferred to the Irish House, seventy-six are Nationalists or Independents, while two are Unionists, namely, Sir Edward Carson and J. H. McCampbell, Attorney-General for Ireland. These two members represent Trinity College, Dublin. They have both consented to sit in the Home Rule Parliament, and on this fact some hopes are based for future amity.

RETAIN SEATS IN LONDON.

Third—Members of the Irish Commons will retain their seats in the English House and will often be seen there, as the Irish body is not expected to have much business to transact at first.

Fourth—Considerable representation of the Unionist interests in the south and west of Ireland will be provided through the nomination of their representatives to the Irish Senate. It is proposed that the Senate sit and act with the Irish Commons during the temporary settlement, thus safeguarding the interests of the Unionists.

UNTIL ONE YEAR AFTER WAR.

Fifth—The temporary settlement is to continue until one year after the termination of the war. At that time the whole arrangement will come under the review of the great Imperial conference, which is to be held to adjust the government of the Empire.

Sixth—The framework of Irish finance in the Home Rule Act will not be altered, but some increases will be made in the sum to be transferred to Irish revenues from the Imperial Treasury.

Seventh—A new Lord-Lieutenant will shortly be appointed as a preliminary to the adoption of the new arrangement.

Germany Fears Allied Economic Offensive Also

BUT WILL NOT ATTEMPT ANY MORE SUBMARINE MURDERS.

Berlin, July 7.—With the military events at all fronts hastening toward a climax, all the signs indicate that simultaneously the allies' great general economic offensive against the Central Powers has begun. Specifically, a fresh fight to a finish has started through a sharpened British blockade, reinforced by enormous political pressure against nearby neutrals.

Thus the Tageblatt says: "It means a sharpened war against the civil population after the prospects of victory over our soldiers had disappeared. It is possible that we shall in many ways feel this effects of a sharpened blockade, though how far the law of the sea is subject to Britain's tender mercies to which all the signatures of the London Declaration are invited to bow down, will work out in practice, is another matter.

"England may attempt to declare everything contraband that floats on the high seas towards Germany's neighboring shores. It may undertake to make a categorization of the population of Holland, Sweden and other countries still sharper, to incorporate a blockade of neutrals as the latest discovery of British civilization, into international law, and to make of Holland a second Greece. We can quietly wait and see what economic and political consequences such a policy will have now and in the future. It may bring us moral advantages that may outweigh the harm that still can result to us."

TO STOP ALL EXPORTS.

But it is not much the Paris conference and the abrogation of the London Declaration as private reports pouring in from Holland and Scandinavian countries and Switzerland and Roumania, which have brought home to the Germans the fact that the economic and particularly the food war has entered a new stage.

Trustworthy confidential reports indicate that the British government has already begun negotiations with the representatives of nearby neutral states with the object of bringing about a cessation of all exports on the part of these neutrals to Germany. England is reported to be offering compensation by agreeing to buy for its own account and that of its allies the neutral surplus harvests and in general all goods that would normally be exported to Germany.

An Amsterdam report says that rejoinders are held in prospect in case the neutrals do not accept these conditions. There is a persistent report, too, that Italy is being urged by the Allies to abrogate her commercial treaties with Germany. This indicates efforts to make this economic offensive general.

Momentarily Switzerland is the most interesting theatre of the economic war.

That Germany will not look on quietly while these convenient open neutral back doors and side doors are being slammed and bolted by the Allies is a truism. The only doubt is what counter measures Germany will try against England.

It can be stated with reasonable certainty that there is no possibility of a submarine revival in the immediate future, despite the very live and well-organized subterranean agitation that continues. After the noisy but meaningless political quarrels and party controversies of the last few weeks and the attacks of no deep significance on the Chancellor, the parties and factions are on the eve of a love feast, and there is a strong tendency for everybody to get behind the Chancellor during the coming critical months of the war.

The Chancellor being now stronger than ever before the hope has not been entirely given up in official quarters here that the American government will yet take effective action against what is regarded as England's increasing violation of International Law and The policy is at least being taken into account in high political places that President Wilson may again seize the opportunity to play the role of the champion of the rights of the small neutrals.

Germany's counter-measure against the sharpened blockade for the present ,therefore, may be expected to take the form of economic counter-pressure, probably through threatened embargoes on coal, iron and other raw materials, and manufactured goods needed by the neutrals.

The effectiveness of these new defensive tactics is being watched with the liveliest interest in the case of Switzerland, Germany's next move depending on the success or the failure of the present Swiss negotiations with the French government.

It seems certain that Germany which has been sending coal and iron to Switzerland unconditionally and other goods on a trade basis, will now insist that Switzerland carry out her share of the bargain by reciprocally reducing goods of equal value, desired Germany, despite the French economic pressure.

Of equal interest is the fight for Holland's surplus food. The increasing pressure of England is already seen here in Holland's embargo on fish and potatoes. It is said here and believed that England has unofficially sounded Holland regarding a complete interdiction of all food exports to Germany, demanding that Holland's surplus food be exported exclusively to England and her allies.

Holland is also to bind herself not to send goods to Switzerland or Luxemburg, without the express consent of England, while goods for Switzerland seem to go via France. How far Holland will give in to these alleged English demands is the subject of interested speculation here.

The World's Most Powerful Low Priced Car 31½ H.P.

ANNOUNCING THE NEW SERIES

$890 75 B Overland $890

f.o.b. Toronto f.o.b. Toronto

This newest Overland is the world's most powerful low-priced car.

It has a 31½ horsepower en bloc motor that is a perfect marvel for speed, power and endurance.

By increasing the bore of the motor from 3⅛ to 3⅜" we are able to offer a power plant which at 1950 R.P.M. develops full 31½ horsepower.

Tests under every condition in all parts of the Dominion demonstrate that it easily develops better than fifty miles per hour on the road.

Speed of course varies under different conditions, but in practically every instance it has been getting fifty miles an hour and with ease.

We have scores of telegrams showing that twenty to twenty-five miles per gallon of gasoline is not unusual.

The performance of this car is almost beyond belief.

Take any other low-priced car on the market. Pit it against this new Overland. Compare them for sheer speed, for abundance of power, for riding comfort and economy, and you'll find this car will back anything else clean off the boards.

That's a strong statement, but a fact nevertheless.

Try it yourself and see.

Here are more important facts.

It has four-inch tires which are more than generous for a car of this size.

Not only has it a large and roomy body, but it has an attractive, up-to-date streamline body.

It has the latest and most improved system of ignition.

It has the cantilever springs—the easiest riding springs in the world.

What's more, it's complete. Not a thing to buy. You get the finest Auto-Lite electric starting and lighting system, magnetic speedometer, one-man top, demountable rims and practically every accessory found on the highest priced cars.

From a driving standpoint, the new car is ideal. It's light, easy to handle and anyone can drive it.

Take one look and be convinced.

And mark these words—the car is destined to be regarded and referred to as one of the really great achievements of the great automobile industry.

Yet it only goes to prove how big production can cut cost and save you money.

First come, first served. Place your order now.

Fine Water Trip To Lindsay

On Monday, the commodious steamer "Stoney Lake" will leave George Street Wharf at 7.30 in the morning for an all-day trip to Lindsay. A special train has been arranged to bring excursionists back to Peterborough early the same evening at 6.30.

Talk about a breezy trip! This is a chance that no one should miss who has felt the effects of this week's hot wave. The sail is up through half a dozen of the scenic lakes of the Kawartha district, and the bracing air and refreshing influence of the sail cannot fail to produce a fine tonic effect. Good meals can be obtained on board the steamer for those who do not care to be loaded with picnic baskets. See street cards for further particulars and arrange to go Monday and be happy.

Victrola For 52nd Battery

A committee of ladies consisting of Mrs. Arthur Stevenson, Mrs. A. Coulthard, Mrs. P. Campbell and Mrs. J. A. Aylmer will have a booth in Central Park on July 12th, for the purpose of raising funds to purchase a Victrola for the 52nd Battery which is made up of so many local lads. The Battery has gone to camp without any music whatever and the boys have expressed a desire for some kind of a musical instrument whereby to beguile evening hours around the "camp-fires."

Friends and relatives of the 52nd lads who can help this excellent cause in any way are requested to 'phone Mrs. W. R. Morris, 1317. Any help in the form of time or donations of pie, cake etc. will be gratefully received.

How The Fire Situation Was Handled During The Riots in Dublin, Ireland

Fire Chief Howard of This City Is in Receipt of an Interesting Article Written by Fire Chief Purcell of the Dublin Fire Department—Experience Was Unique In the History of Fire Brigades—Men Were Shot at Repeatedly—Saving a Hospital Full of Inmates.

THE MONETARY LOSS

A recent copy of "Fire and Water Enginering," received by Fire Chief Howard of this city contains a concise and interesting account of the manner in which the fire department of Dublin, Ireland, handled the situation during the riots that occurred some weeks ago. Fire Chief Purcell of the Dublin Fire Department is a consistent attendant at the FireChiefs convention which is held annually in various centres of the United States. Chief Howard has attended a number of these conventions, and incidentally has met Chief Purcell of the Dublin Fire Department.

Chief Purcell's item reads as follows:

In the conflagration in the city of Dublin, Ireland, during the recent disturbances there the Dublin fire department, of which Chief Thomas P. Purcell is chief officer, had an experience which he feels certain is unique in the history of fire brigades. The illustrations herewith were courteously furnished by Chief Purcell and the description of the great fire and the work of the department is from a communication from the chief to the Editor of "Fire and Water Engineering. The brigade did valiant work in stopping the fires as long as it was humanly possible to do so. Then when the military rings closed in, fighting from house to house to the affected centres and these districts became real battle grounds, swept by rifle fire, shot and shell, the chief had to keep his men under cover and for a portion of two days and nights they could only see the flames of the burning district. Four firemen were injured by the collapse of buildings while working. All communication by wire, rail and road with the outer world was cut off. Sniping and volley firing from rifles and machine guns was kept up night and day and all fire stations were damaged by bullets in many places. An estimate by Chief Purcell placed the approximate value of the buildings destroyed by the fires on the east and west sides of the Sackville street area at $5,500,000, and a very rough approxication of the loss in stock is given at $6,750,000, but he stated that the total property loss may never be accurately ascertained.

Refused to Meet Losses.

Insurance companies refused to meet losses and the Government promised to compensate to some extent. The disturbances lasted acutely for eight days and nights and during that time there was a succession of fires. The total number of buildings involved was 179, and the total area burned on the east side of the Sackville street district was 27,000 square yards and included two whole blocks and parts of two others.. On the west side of Sackville street the area destroyed was 84,000 square yards in extent and included the general post-office. Outside of these two principal areas there were fires in Harcourt street, on Usher's quay and around the corner in Bridge street. Another fire area outside the Sackville street district was one including the ancient Linen Hall Barracks, recently the seat of the Civic Exhibition. This place was twice on fire. It is stated that on the fourth day it was ignited by a wooden structure, erected at the time of the Civic Exhibition, being set on fire. This building contained large stores of oils and chemicals. The first fires in connection with the disturbances occurred on Monday. When the firemen received the first call at 3:38 p.m., it was from the ordnance department at Island Bridge and stated there was a fire in the Magazine in Phoenix Park. A detachment was sent from the Thomas street station with a motor engine. One section of the Magazine, containing large quantities of small arms and ammunition, was more or less destroyed, but the remainder was saved. In the meantime firemen with another motor engine were held up by rifles at a barricade and had to turn back. The first fire call for a fire in Sackville street was about 10 p.m., the fire being in a shoe company's shop and it was extinguished. Later that night there was another fire in Sackville street, and next day there were three fires. While working at a fire at the Lawrence men up on fire escapes and bullets struck their ladders. The engines were shot at from the direction of Westmoreland street and they were struck by bullets which pierced the mudguards and tires." Chief Purcell was again obliged to call the men off to take cover while the engines and hose were left in the street and the men were rushed in batches in motors, ambulances to their stations. Fires were then seen in every direction from the west, and later a warehouse and other buildings which were burning threatened the destruction of the Pro-Cathedral. Chief Purcell then called for four volunteers from among the brigade and four men instantly came forward and succeeded in checking and stopping the fire, insuring the safety of the remainder of the north side of Earl street, including the Cathedral. At 8 p.m., Saturday, the chief had a call from the Jervis street hospital that the fires were spreading closely in that direction and that if the fire could not be stopped arrangements would have to be made to remove the patients. To the credit of the firemen they one and all said they would save the hospital, and under a rain of bullets, the engines and other apparatus were recovered from O'Connell bridge and the firemen started their big fight against the flames. The chief then called for the assistance of available men and apparatus from Power's distillery and Guinness' brewery and both sections responded. The firemen worked all Saturday night and stopped the fire at the hospital and where it was possible to fight it in this section. In other directions, since the department had been prevented from working since Saturday afternoon, fires had multiplied and increased so that the department's work now consisted in cutting off sections and preventing their further spread, in which it succeeded and by Sunday morning had the fire completely under control.

QUICKSANDS DRAW TWO TO DEATH

FATHER AND DAUGHTER SINK, WHILE FOUR OTHERS OF FAMILY STAND BY POWERLESS TO HELP.

Savanah, Ga., July 8.—R. H. Barrow and his daughter, Jennie Sue, 13 years old, were caught in the quicksands and drowned in Pearson's Pond, near Spartanburg, S.C., while Mrs. Barrow and her three little sons stood near the edge of the water, unable to render any assistance.

The girl went into the pond to wade and was caught in the quicksands, which gripped her feet and slowly drew her down. The father went to her assistance and he too was caught in the sands. The child quickly disappeared.

Mr. Barrow, imbedded above the knees, was drowned standing up with the top of his head showing above the surface.

HAYING OPERATIONS IN PETERBORO COUNTY

Haying has commenced in Peterborough County. The fine weather of the past week has facilitated haying operations. A few loads have been disposed of in the city. By the end of next week haying will be in full swing. This year's hay crop promises to be superior to that of last year. It is much heavier and of better quality. With favourable weather the crop should be pretty well under cover within the next ten days. A wet spell at this time would do much to lower the quality of the crop.

FIGHTING FOR FRANCE.

Paris Temps Honours French-Canadians in Khaki.

Paris, July 8. —The Temps, after enumerating the names of French-Canadians who have fallen gloriously in the war, says:

"For a Canadian promise and performance are the same thing. It is a joy to find in the khaki uniform, beside our brothers in arms under the French and British flags, henceforth for ever united, the descendants of French families who have come from Quebec to Ypres to take part in the danger and the honour of the land whence their families and their language sprang."

City Carter Swears Civic Materials And Time Used Privately

Interesting Evidence Produced at the Civic Probe Now Being Held in Montreal—Materials Said to Have Been Used for the Private Purposes of The Aldermen

MONTREAL, July 8—Thousands of loads of earth and stone, belonging to the city were carted, at the city's expense, in some cases as much as three-quarters of a mile, to construct the private wharf at Bordeaux, belonging to Mr. Gordien Menard, senior, father of Alderman Gordien Menard, the representative of Ahuntsic-Bordeaux ward in the City Council, and the alderman's brother Pierre, who were the owners of the lots on which the wharves were built; such was the testimony given frankly and without hesitation at the civic probe now being held into the Bordeaux sewer affair by Mr. Justice Panneton this morning, when Jean Baptiste Parent, a city carter, told what he knew of the doings at Bordeaux.

The witness testified too, that when he himself spoke of the way the city's material were being used for the private purposes of the alderman and his family, he was told that he would be suspended for talking too much, and once Alderman Menard, himself, he declared, told him that such talk as he was using would hurt him in his election.

The witness also told how city workmen had been working on the wharf itself, receiving pay from the city, in addition to the men employed by the city who had carted the material to the wharves. He also told how a new stoneboat, just built by the city's employees for the city's use had been transported to the wharf, and used there. While the city's materials, stone and earth, were being carried from the sewers in course of construction to Bordeau to fill in the wharf, witness said there was an insufficiency of material to fill in the sewers after the work was completed. He also testified that a good deal of liquor was consumed on the job.

The evidence of Parent, so far the star witness in the investigation, was listened to intently by a crowded court room, and what he said was the subject of general conversation around the Court House when the enquete adjourned for luncheon at 12.30 o'clock.

Two other witnesses were examined this morning. Alderman Menard was put back in the witness box by Mr. Aime Geoffrion, K.C., counsel for the city, and asked to give additional details concerning the transfer of his lot facing the river, and on which part the wharf was afterwards built, to his brother, Pierre. He explained the interviews he had had with his brother on the subject. The price agreed upon was $6,000, but there was to be no cash payment until fifteen months after the sale. Interest, however, was paid to him, the alderman said, at his private house on the 19th February, 1915. It was not paid by cheque; it was paid by cash.

The alderman was requested to produce his bank books at the next sitting.

EXPLAINING THE PURCHASE.

Pierre Menard, thirty-five years of age, a postman earning only $3 a day, was closely questioned by Mr. Geoffrion, how it was that he, receiving such a small salary, came to purchase the lot from his brother, the alderman, for $6,000. He explained that the deed was signed on the 6th of May, 1915. He had two children, he said, and as his wife was dead, he lived with his children at the home of his father and mother. As they were getting old and would not live for ever, he thought that he would like to prepare a home for himself, and perhaps sometime get married again. He knew that his brother the alderman, had the lot, so he asked him if he was willing to dispose of it. He told him that if he would make the conditions easy, he might buy it from him. The alderman made the conditions easy, agreeing that the first payment should not become due until fifteen months after the date of the agreement. The interest was 6 per cent. Witness differed from his brother, the alderman, in his testimony as to where the agreement was signed.

Witness said he was a postman and Mr. Geoffrion said: "Now I am going to ask you a personal question. What is your salary?"

The witness replied: "$3 a day."

Witness explained his banking arrangements, and was asked to produce the bank books. The money that was paid by him to his brother as interest on the lot was paid in cash out of his pocket. He said that he paid his father $25 a month for his board.

J. B. Parent's Evidence.

Jean Baptiste Parent, junior, was next called. He said that he was a labourer and stone cutter, and that he had worked for the city as a carter during the time the sewers were being constructed in Bordeaux. He said that part of the time he was in the city's employ he received thirty-five cents an hour, and the balance of the time he received thirty-five and a half cents an hour. He explained the streets and places where the sewers were being constructed, and said that at the same time the Menards were building their private wharf at Bordeaux.

"Did you transport any material to the wharf?" asked Mr. Geoffrion.

"I did," replied the witness, and he then told how the earth and stone from the sewers had been filled into his cart by city workmen, and had been carted away by him to the Menard wharf and dumped there.

"Who gave you the order?" demanded Mr. Geoffrion.

"I was acting under instructions from Mr. Antoine Deslauriers," replied the witness. Antoine Deslauriers is a city foreman, whom Alderman Menard in the witness box yesterday said he had recommended to the City Hall.

Witness told how he had carted earth from Pasteur street to De Salaberry street, and then after that had carted it again to the Menard wharf.

"How much was carted away?" asked Mr. Geoffrion.

"Thousands and thousands of loads," replied the witness. He added that the work had been going on for several months. While some city workmen filled the carts, other city workmen carted the material to the wharves.

The city employees also transported stone from Pasteur street to St. Riel street, and then some days later they took up the stone again, and transported it to the wharf. When the sewers were finished stone and earth were lacking to fill up the trenches. The distance of the scrting was in some cases ten to twelve acres. To his knowledge 200 cartloads were taken from Bordage street to the wharf.

Stone Boat Used.

Witness also told how a stone boat belonging to the city had been used on the Menard wharf. It was a new stone boat, he said, which had just been completed by city workmen for city work. But it went to the Menard wharf. The men received their money in envelopes just the same as they had done when they were on other jobs for the city. Among these city workmen working on the Menard wharf, witness mentioned the names of Clemet Jarry, Ovila Legault, Urbain Gagnon and Ovila Menard.

"Are you in the service of the city yet?" asked Mr. Geoffrion.

"No," replied the witness. "I was suspended because I said that the stone and earth we were carting belonged to the Corportion."

"Who replaced you?" was the next question.

"I was replaced by a man named McDonald.

Witness then declared that Alderman Menard called him to his house, and told him, "There is no reason why you should talk of this matter. It will harm me in my election."

In reply to another question, witness said the workmen engaged in the construction of the Menard wharf were provided with liquor. He did not say who provided it.

The case is proceeding.

Doctors Find Iron and Phosphorous Prolongs Life of Nervous People 25 Years

Ionized Iron and Phosphorus is a new discovery in nerve tonic.

Doctors are surprised after many years of experience to find that they were unable to find that the real cause of nervous weak run down people was due directly to lack of phosphorus for the nervous system and iron for the blood circulation. The moment that phosphorous is given you can notice the nerves beginning to tighten and you begin to get control of your nerves once again. Without phosphorus the system becomes weakened, your stomach is unable to digest the little food that you eat, your liver becomes torpid, the kidneys start to pain you, the blood becomes clogged with impurities, the color of your face is muddy, then your hands, head and legs begin to shake through loss of control of your nerves. One is taking medicine for kidney trouble, another is taking laxative every night, others taking nauseous spring tonics, some can't sleep for twitching nerves and some give up all hopes thinking they are too old and there is no hope for them. You have almost ruined your system and vitality by taking all these medicines for something that never ailed you until you got here, so prove to blame now but yourself if you do not start at once by going to your druggists and get a few cents worth of Ionized Phosphorus with iron and take one or two tablets after each good meal. Give yourself a good ice cold bath every morning, rubbing yourself well; eat plenty of good wholesome vegetables, fruit and drink plenty of water every time you think of it. Here is good advice which millionaires are paying specialists thousands of dollars for to look well, rest well sleep well, work well, digest well look well. As we are here only for a short stay so why not be healthy, strong vigorous and enjoy our short, sweet life. People can talk as they like about all the wonders, life and death, stories about medicines that have cured them, but when you come right down to scientific proofs, hard facts, there has been nothing in medical science to compare with just ordinary Bonfred Phosphorus with iron to restore wrecked systems, put vigorous life in old people, color in your cheeks, clear thinking, strong nerves and strength like a giant.

Bonfred Phosphorus with iron does not contain an ounce of arsenic strychnine or any poison which has been found so harmful in almost every tonic. It is easy to take, does not upset the stomach and is taken up by the system immediately making you feel better at once. It is dispensed in this city at either of R. C. Webber's stores at 50c a box.

FRECKLE-FACE

Sun and Wind Bring Out Ugly Spots. How to Remove Easily.

Here's a chance, Miss Freckle-face, to try a remedy for freckles with the guarantee of a reliable dealer that it will not cost you a penny unless it removes the freckles; while if it does give you a clear complexion the expense is trifling.

Simply get an ounce of othine — double strength—from any druggist and a few applications should show you how easy it is to rid yourself of the homely freckles and get a beautiful complexion. Rarely is more than one ounce needed for the worst case.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength othine as this is the prescription sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

THE PETERBOROUGH RED CROSS SOCIETY COLUMN

The following notice was received by Miss Laura L. Davidson, Secretary of the Local Society.

"To all workers for the Red Cross Society, "please do not make any more surgical pads, compresses, wipes, or roller bandages until further notice, as our Commissioner Overseas and our Chairman of Executive, who have just visited France and England, think we have enough of these for the present.

Please go on making socks, shirts, pyjamas, dressing gowns, house-wives, Kit-bags, etc."

This notice was confirmed by the following communication from Mrs. Plumtree, corresponding Secretary of the C.R.C.S.

Notice to Ontario and British Columbia branches of the Canadian Red Cross.

A cable has been received from Col. Marshall, Chairman of the Executive, and Colonel Hodgetts, Chief Commissioner Overseas of the Canadian Red Cross Society, who have recently returned from a tour of inspection of the Society's work in France and England, advising that the making and shipment of surgical pads, compresses, and wipes and roller bandages be suspended until further notice. This advice is based upon a knowledge of the large amount of supplies now in hand and of their adequacy to fill the need, and also of the very large demand for surgical gauze and cotton in bulk rather than in prepared dressings.

The Executive therefore lay these recommendations before its local Branches and Auxiliaries, asking them to give up work of this character until further notice. Socks, pyjamas, shirts, dressing gowns, kit bags, comfort bags, housewives, hospital shirts, sheets, towels and pillow cases may be safely made as they can be stored on either side of the Atlantic as is most convenient and will not deteriorate by keeping, and all are in demand.

We rely upon the Branches receiving this notice to make this known publicly as widely as possible through the press. In giving information to the press we would ask particularly that it should be stated that this is an official notice issued by the Executive of the Red Cross Society on the advice of their Overseas Commissioner and their Chairman, now in England.

The workroom of the Society is therefore closed until further notice, but Mrs. Rush and Miss Barnett will be in attendance every Wednesday afternoon from 2 to 5 o'clock to give out wool.

It is earnestly requested that everyone who possibly can, will help by knitting socks for the Society, as the number turned in the last two months has been far below the average.

So many fail to understand the pressing need for socks by the Red Cross Society and say "we want to knit for the boys in the trenches".

We do not desire that they should go without socks, or anything which can add to their comfort in the slightest degree, but we also desire to put forward a very earnest plea for the thousands of convalescent soldiers who are suffering by reason of having already done "their bit" in the trenches, and for the thousands of prisoners in German camps, also for the large number of exchanged prisoners of whom we learn not only from the newspapers, but personally from London England, that they are arriving in pitiful condition and will require to be inmates of convalescent hospitals for a long time. So we plead that while caring for the fighting, that those who have fought be not overlooked.

We also ask the Auxiliaries and all the Societies which have been sending in such splendid and wellmade garments, etc., to keep up their supplies as much as possible during the summer, as these are still required. The Executive has appreciated to the full both the quality and quantity of the garments sent in by all these societies and it has been a source of great gratification that all the Societies which have come in supplies regularly month after month, have responded so willingly to the high standard set and maintained for the local society by its capable and enthusiastic supervisor, Miss Marion Rush It would have been impossible to have found one to have assumed the heavy responsibility, or one who could have performed the duties pertaining to such a position in a more satisfactory manner, than Miss Rush has done. The Executive and members generally appreciate her work greatly.

The Society has been fortunate in its office-bearers and though it may be invidious to mention some, where all have given earnest consideration to the best interests of the Society, still no member of the Executive will grudge a tribute of praise being paid to its Secretary, Miss Laura L. Davidson.

Miss Davidson has occupied that position since the Society was formed, and it is only those behind the scenes who can really appreciate the manner and extent of her work.

This column was not called into existence for the purpose of bestowing sundry "pats on the back" to individuals, it has a more serious purpose than that, but we think it fitting that occasionally notice should be taken of certain gifts which seem "to point the way to others."

Mr. Mathieson, the caretaker of the Public Library, has ever since the Red Cross Society started its workroom cleaned and looked after the room and also helped in other ways. The Library Board decided on the remuneration to be paid by the Society to Mr. Mathieson for the extra work, and it was a very pleasing little incident at the Executive meeting last Monday when it was stated that Mr. Mathieson who on account of poor health was unable to continue, wished the Society to accept his remuneration as a gift towards its work.

The other matter we desire to mention, is this:—

In the book kept by those in charge of the wool and in which the amount of wool given out, and the number of socks, returned is recorded, we have the names of four sisters the Misses Hanna of Hunter street.

These young girls are amongst the most faithful and diligent of our knitters turning in an average of a pair of socks a week. Doing their bit for their Empire, quietly and faithfully, never thinking anyone was noting their coming and going. We feel there are many other girls in Peterborough who could knit for the men who fought and suffered for them in order that their happiness and their homes might be preserved. If they will go to the teacher's room at the Library next Wednesday those in charge will be delighted to give them wool.

Supplies can still be sent by the Societies to the basement for weekly packing.

Mrs. T. F. Matthews, one of the Vice-Presidents and Miss Emma Morrow, the Treasurer are gifting a knitting machine to the Society.

The demonstration by Mrs. Nattrass and the socks made by her, were so satisfactory that in view of the great number required it was felt that such a machine would be most useful to the Society and it gave great pleasure when these two interested members announced their intention of giving it.

We desire to make a very special appeal for our Prisoners of War Fund this week.

Most of our readers will have seen in the newspapers that Germany is reducing the rations of the prisoners to half of what they formerly received, and that was scanty and often uneatable. This threat has aroused great indignation in Britain, and there were many who wished the German prisoners interned there, treated in like manner. We hope that the wise counsels of Lord Charles Beresford and others will prevail and that Britain will not be guilty of like inhumanity. The Germans would be glad of any excuse to starve our men and we must not afford them such by starving theirs.

It has been officially confirmed and Lord Robert Cecil stated in the British House of Commons that unfortunately it was too true that many of the British prisoners in Germany were on the verge of starvation and were only being kept alive by the parcels of food sent to them.

It almost breaks our hearts to realise that the boys we encouraged to go and fight in this titanic struggle for freedom and justice are in want of food in the strange land of their captivity.

Not one of us have gone without a meal because of this war as yet, we may have sacrificed some luxury may have given up something we would like to have had, we may even have relinquished a holiday, but not a single person has suffered in the true sense of the word, by anything we have given up as yet, apart from those who have given of dear ones whom they sent forth to battle for the right.

Will you help the Society to send an increased amount this month to keep life in our Canadian boys, far from home and friends, lonely and longing for a sight of the home faces. Miss Morrow, c|o Toronto Loan and Savings Co., the treasurer will be glad to get any special donations for this fund. $2.50 pays for two parcels. Five acknowledgements from boys in German camps were received last week by the Society. There, many of them must stay until Germany's power of recuperation is destroyed and this cannot be accomplished as long as the German people retain even a vestige of faith in any one of their reigning sovereigns, about whom as a nucleus a naval and military power might again gather.

BEANS ARE VERY SCARCE

The Market Has Witnessed a Succession of Advances—Other Lines Show Strength

The following comment on the market situation as regards food stuffs appeared in the Canadian Grocer:

A feature of the market about which everybody seems to be concerned is the very strong situation of white beans. There has been an advance in these this week which is chiefly based upon the fact that the old crop of beans is not likely to last out until the new crop comes. As the trade knows, beans have been a very scarce commodity ever since the last crop. Farmers never bothered to harvest them but preferred to devote their time to other lines which perhaps sold more profitably. For months beans have been very scarce and the market has seen a succession of advances with never a decline. Despite the fact that Japanese beans released the tension a little by supplying Western Canada, Ontario beans were nevertheless quite insufficient for the demand and grocers had to pay considerably more this year than ever before. Instead of coming some time early in October it will probably not arrive until November, and the period between the end of the old crop and the beginning of the new, late as the latter will be, will be a period of tightness and additional strength, so far as prices are concerned. There will, it is thought, be an actual stringency in beans, and the prices will be materially advanced between this and four months hence. For the present, wholesalers and retailers alike, are much concerned with the problem, and an advance to the trade was registered this week.

CURRANT MARKET.

There have been further advances in currants, amounting to about two cents. These have been on the part of wholesalers who are now buying at the advanced prices, although for some weeks they have been selling at the price at which they were actually buying. The currant market, extraordinarily strong last year, is again gaining firmness, partially due to the Greek position among the nations, and partially to a wretched crop in Greece, and it is not unlikely that we shall have as fall and winter draw near a repetition of last year's market trend.

Canned goods are advancing steadily. Most vegetables, tomatoes, peas, corn and wax, green and string beans are all slightly ahead this week. These advances are by the wholesalers and are largely the outcome of desire on the part of the wholesalers to protect themselves because little business appears to be pressing just at present. However the feeling is as has been reflected in these columns from time to time, that canned vegetables are in for a period of prolonged strength, due to the labor market, the demand for exports, the poor weather, which has very vitally affected them all, and particularly tomatoes, and the high price of tins.

Advances have also been registered this week on such lines as imported sardines and also on Canadian sardines. Poor quality Norwegians are considerably higher per case at the opening price this year than last, and are actually higher now than first class goods were. This is largely the effect of the international situation. Britain is buying as much as she can of Norwegian goods to prevent the same reaching Germany, irrespective of any particular demand in Britain for them at the present time, which is one more example of the effect upon foodstuffs of the policy of blockade.

Soldier Eloped With Local Girl

PAIR ARRESTED AT MORRISTOWN N.Y.—DESERTER WANTED TO SEE PARENTS.

Port Hope, July 8.—Elmer C. Hicks of Homer, N.Y., some time ago forsook his razors and shears, closed his barber shop in the American town, went to Kingston, and enlisted in the 156th Battalion to learn the gentle art of war, in order to fight the legions of the Kaiser. Several visits to the city, however, changed his mind about going to the front, and instead he enlisted the sympathies of Iva, the bright and winsome 18-year-old daughter of Reginald Hawkins, and together the pair fled to the United States, via Brockville.

It may have been an easy matter to effect an escape from the ranks of the 156th; it may not have needed much coaxing to induce the young girl to accompany him; but Hicks found out that it was easier for him to get out of his native country than it was to get back into it, for the police authorities at Morristown, N.Y., took him into custody charged with an offence under the Mann white slavery act, and now both young people face serious consequences as a result of their escapade.

Trades and Labour Notes

(By the Official Scribe)

Sustained interest in matters pertaining to local labour conditions was shown by the good attendance of delegates at the fortnightly session of the Trades Council this week. Charles Hammacott, president, was in the chair.

PENSION DISCUSSION.

It was brought to the notice of the Council that the pensions accorded soldiers by a grateful Government were unworthy of a democratic country, in that an officer received so very much more than one of the rank and file. A private, unable to work owing to many wounds, had possibly a wife and family to keep, and deserved as much consideration as an officer who qualified for that position, probably owing to the possession of private means. In the Imperial service the better pension was given the man who had worked his way up, but under present conditions all volunteer for the big job. The discussion ended by the Secretary being asked to write the Pensions Board, suggesting more equal compensation to our wounded heroes.

OFFICERS' REPORTS.

The secretary of the Labour Hall Trustees presented his half-yearly report, which showed the finances to be in a healthy condition.

Next meeting, July 18th. Be on hand. Business of importance.

LEAD BY WOMEN ROBBERS SHOOT 4

BAND BLOWS UP BANK SAFE, CUTS THE TELEPHONE WIRES AND ESCAPES WITH MONEY.

St. Mary's Kansas, July 8.—Four persons were shot, one probably fatally; the St. Mary's State Bank vault was wrecked, and robbers escaped with $2400 here.

Three men in an automobile driven by a woman, made the raid. They came to St. Mary's, from Topeka.

After unloading the men the woman turned the automobile around and stood guard over the main street of the town.

R. J. Best, the City Marshall, was shot through the lungs, and William Ehrbacher, Mrs. James Howard and Clary Howard, her son, also fell under the fusilade from the robbers. Mrs. Howard received two severe wounds in the hip. Her son and Ehrbacher received slight flesh wounds. All the robbers escaped. They cut the telephone wires leading to Topeka.

To Ward Off Summer Complexion Ills

To keep the face smooth, white and beautiful all summer, there's nothing quite so good as ordinary mercolized wax. Discolored or freckled skin, so common at this season, is gently absorbed by the wax and replaced by the newer, fresher skin beneath. The face exhibits no trace of the wax, which is applied at bedtime and washed off mornings. Greasy creams, powders and rouges, on the other hand, are apt to appear more conspicuous than usual these days of excessive perspiration. Just get an ounce of mercolized wax at any druggists and use like cold cream. This will help any skin at once and in a week or so the complexion will look remarkably young and healthy.

Sun, winds and flying dust often cause squinting and other contortions which make wrinkles. You can quickly get rid of every line, however caused, by using a harmless wash lotion made by dissolving 1 oz. powdered saxolite in ½ pt. witch hazel.

Reveal Identity of Man Accused of Morgan Leak

LONG SHIELDED BY NETWORK OF MYSTERIOUS SECOND AND THIRD PARTIES THROUGH WHOM SECRETS PASSED.

NEW YORK, July 8.—The identity of the confidential employee in the banking offices of J. P. Morgan and Co. whose pilfering of war contract secrets has led to a sensational investigation, was revealed to District Attorney Swann in the examination, under oath, of O. B. Phillips and his associates in the offices of Seymour and Seymour, and of their counsel, Wm. B. Roulstone.

That employee, who has enjoyed the highest reputation, but whose operations were so well covered by secrecy that detectives were unable to find him, will be summoned to the District Attorney's office when Mr. Swann will determine upon appropriate action.

Until Thursday afternoon he was shielded by a network of mysterious second and third parties through which the stolen information had been passed. Detectives learned that cable messages from the French and British governments to the Morgan firm calling for munitions and mentioning specifications, quantities and maximum prices, had been stolen as soon as received by the bankers, and that exact copies of them had found their way into the offices of Seymour and Seymour.

Phillips, Morton B. Sultzer, Wm. Hills, Jr., and Gascherie Dewitt, having desk room there, were found to have been disposing of that information to manufacturers of munitions and particularly to those contractors with whom the Morgan firm was dealing. The stolen information revealed to the contractors the maximum prices the Allies would pay for munitions and therefore was of great value.

HOW NAME WAS REVEALED.

All efforts failed to learn how the men in the Seymour offices how they came into possession of the Morgan cables. The information came yesterday in an unexpected manner. Mr. Roulstone, formerly secretary for Judge Samuel Seabury, of the Court of Appeals and a member of the law firm of Clark, Prentice, McClure and Roulstone, No. 61 roadway, included among his clients one Carlos E. Moore, of the Export and Import Company, with offices on the twenty-ninth floor of the Equitable Building. That company is not described in the directories and is said to be a recent organization.

Mr. Roulstone said that Mr. Moore suddenly called upon him to take charge of Phillips' interests in the John Doe hearing before Chief Magistrate McAdoo, which was one of the efforts being made to learn who was selling the information from the Morgan offices. Mr. Moore agreed to pay Mr. Roulstone for defending or representing Phillips. All this was in the sworn testimony before the District Attorney yesterday.

With very little information to aid him, Mr. Roulstone asked certain questions of Phillips before Chief Magistrate McAdoo that resulted in disquieting replies.

"I saw at once that something was wrong," said Mr. Roulstone. "I had not been fully informed of my client's true connection with the case. I called him to my office and demanded an explanation. He informed me he was under oath to Mr. Moore not to reveal the facts which I demanded. I went to Mr. Moore and informed him that I would not sacrifice my professional reputation at any cost and that he would have to tell the truth otherwise I would go to the District Attorney with the facts I had had, and that undoubtedly serious consequences would follow.

SAY THEY MADE NO MONEY

"Mr. Moore then informed me that he had been receiving copies of private cables to the Morgan firm from a confidential employee in the Morgan banking house and that he, Mr. Moore, had tried to utilize Phillips, and the latter's associates in the Seymour offices in disposing of that information to the profit of all. As a matter of fact, none of them made one penny out of the stolen cable messages."

Mr. Roulstone then called upon Mr. Moore and Phillips and his associates to make a full and true statement of the entire matter under oath to the District Attorney. For some reason Mr. Moore was not at the District Attorney's office yesterday when Mr. Roulstone went there with Phillips, Sultzer, Hills and De Witt, but it was said he would be there to-day. They were accompanied by Francis L. Wellman, counsel for Wm. J. Burns, who has been doing the detective work for the Morgan firm, and Martin Egan, a representative of J. P. Morgan and Co.

Mr. Roulstone asked that Phillips and his three companions be placed under oath, which was done, and they were questioned at length by Mr. Swann. The result was that testimony contradictory to that given at the John Doe hearing was obtained and the name of the Morgan employee was revealed.

That employee was not arrested last night, but it was said the District Attorney had made arrangements whereby he was certain the employe would be in the District Attorney's office to-day.

At the same time, Carlos E. Moore, who lives at the Gramatan Inn, Bronxville, has arranged to see the District Attorney.

BEWARE OF FAKE BAKING POWDER TESTS

("THE SPICE MILL" (N.Y.), SEPTEMBER, 1913.)

Unscrupulous manufacturers of baking powder, in order to sell their product, sometimes resort to the old game of what is known as "the glass test." In reality it is no test at all, but, in cases where the prospective buyer does not understand that the so-called "test" is a fake, pure and simple, the salesman is sometimes able to make him believe it shows conclusively that the so-called baking powder he is selling, and which of course contains egg albumen, is superior to other brands which do not contain this ingredient.

Bulletin No. 21, issued by Dairy and Food Bureau of the State of Utah, reads as follows:

"The sale in the State of Utah of baking powders containing minute qualities of dried egg (albumen) is declared illegal. The albumen in these baking powders does not actually increase the leavening power of the powder, but by a series of unfair and deceptive tests such powders are made to appear to the innocent consumer to possess three or four times their actual leavening power."

GERMANS UNCOVERED TO THE SOMME RIVER

LONDON, July 8.—"Only German soldiers in open field formation now stand between the French and the River Somme," said Major. Gen. F. B. Maurice, referring to the part of the river which flows northward to the east of the sector along which the French have made their greatest gains. "The last of the enemy's defensive works in that sector have been captured by our allies."

In giving a summary of the results attained by the allied offensive on the Western front, Major Gen. Maurice who is Director of Military Operations of the Imperial General Staff, continued:

"Much undeserved obloquy has been heaped upon the British Army by English, French, and American people because we apparently did nothing to assist the French in the desperate fighting on the Verdun front. But all this time we were doing the part requested by General Joffre.

"According to this plan, we conserved our troops, accumulated supplies, and waited the word for the grand offensive in which we were to play our part with the Russians and Italians, as well as the French. Naturally during these anxious weeks we could give out no exciting news, because our deliberate preparations were not good copy. For certain tactical and moral reasons, which need not be dilated on, it was necessary that the French should not lose the east bank of the Meuse, and General Joffre informed us that he could hold the positions which command that part of the river until the end of June, so we knew we were going to strike at the beginning of July.

"The blow planned by the allied General Staffs included offensives by the Russians and Italians which, I do not need to tell you, already have begun. We are not disappointed with our own advance, which we expected to be slow, and we are enormously pleased with the wonderful progress made by the French, who, with comparatively light losses, are sweeping forward to the Somme.

"It is quite evident the Germans were surprised by the strength of the French offensive. They evidently believed our allies would be kept too busy before Verdun to participate seriously in the western offensive which they knew was coming. Consequently before our front, piling up reinforcements there while comparatively neglecting the southern sector dominated by the French. The Germans, anticipating our move brought up great forces, much of which consisted of independent units called mosqueton battalions, armed with only light machine guns. It was these battalions which inflicted the heaviest losses on us.

"Our enemy is brave and resourceful, and put up a desparate defense, especially in the region from Gommecourt to Fricourt, where he evidently expected our main attack. In this region the fighting is especially severe. The chalk formation gave the Germans a splendid chance to make the best use of their minds, who constructed dugouts and other defensive works which our heaviest shells could not destroy. From these works mousqueton battalions put up a most determined resistance.

Physical features made the capture of Fricourt peculiarly difficult and our severe losses there were not unexpected. Montauban was one of the strongest positions occupied by the Germans but our advance there was brilliant and rapid, without the losses suffered between Gommecourt and Fricourt.

"On the whole, we are well satisfied with our advance. We will continue our artillery preparation as we have no intention of butting our heads against a stone wall. The human factor must be considered and this factor presents some unexpected problems on the German side, since after all the enemy has something to say about the progress of any offensive. We are meeting strenuous opposition. Our progress most certainly will be deliberate. Many places like Fricourt will be taken only after overpowing desperate opposition.

"That our gallant allies should advance faster with smaller losses than we is not only the fortune of war, but may be called poetic justice, since they lost so heavily during the long weeks while we were getting ready to take our share in the great offensive. However, it must be clear now, even to laymen, that the blame heaped on us for not going to the aid of French before Verdun was quite undeserved, as we are doing exactly what General Joffre requested, and when he gave the word we sprang to the attack, in which we have suffered grievously, but which leads to no regret beyond sorrow for the fallen; for it is now our turn to stand the brunt of battle.

"South of the Somme the Germans were completely surprised and our allies will get through to the river without much loss. In that region you may look for immediate developments, as the fighting there is now in open field formation, the last of the enemy's works having been captured. A glance at the war map will show you that our allies are clear across the network of trenches.

"Further north you will note that while our line is now beyond the first series of German defenses, we are in immediate contact with strongly fortified places.

"We are well content to do our share in the great general allied offensive, which already has proven that the initiative, so long in their hands, is now lost by the armies of the Crown Powers."

ROCKFELLER'S GOLD BIRTHDAY

Fire Insurance To Be Really Safe Must Be Solid

The Security of Fire Insurance Depends on Company Soundness

War conditions have brought home to many of those carrying large amounts of fire insurance in this country the importance of the security of their insurance as well as the quantity of it. They are awakening to the fact that while a cheap rate for their fire insurance is apparently saving them money, there is really no saving at all but a total waste of the money unless the companies carrying their risks are in a sound financial position and able to meet their present and prospective obligations. If the companies carrying the risk are not sound, then their insurance is not sound, and no matter how low the rate may be, it is too high. Indeed, unsound insurance is not insurance at all, and the policy holders are paying for something they are not getting. Risk owners are beginning to realise the elementary truth in increasing numbers, and they are beginning to look more into the financial standing of the companies carrying their insurance.

The reputable agency firms, too, are taking more pains to inform their clients on this point. They are exercising more care than ever with regard to the standing of the companies in which they place their business, realizing that they are regarded, and rightly, as occupying a position of trust in the matter. Recent legal decisions have emphasised the responsibility which rests upon the agents to see that their customers' interests are properly protected.

Those insurance firms which have exercised little care as to the soundness and reliability of the companies in which they place their customers' insurance are being more and more avoided by the insuring public, who are beginning to understand that there is something besides the rate to be considered in securing fire insurance protection for their property.—The Bulletin.

J. E. R. Munro, Captain,
Adjutant 23rd Overseas Battalion, C.E.F.

Mr. and Mrs. Isador Darrah, 590 Chamberlain Street, has received the following letter from their son, Pte. D. H. Darrah:

B.E.F., France,
June 12th, 1916.

Dear Father and Mother,—It is only now, and with God's Holy will, that I am capable of writing you these few lines and letting you know I am still alive, and hope these few lines will find you all the same.

By the time you receive this letter you will likely see by the papers that the whole of the 8th Canadian Infantry Brigade was wiped out. It is true mother, and the sight I never want to witness it again. The bombardment was enough to drive anyone crazy, and after keeping it up for two days and one night they came over, and as the bombardment put every man and gun out of action, with exception of guns and men. All they had to do was to stop arms and walk over. That they did until they got five or six hundred yards back of the front line, and there they met what men that were left, and then the fighting began, although all our machine guns were put out of action; we had only our rifles to right with against their machine guns. We held them for over two hours and a half until the reinforcements reached us, and they reached us none too soon. The Germans were only fifty yards away when we saw them coming through the woods. Then it was a race for our lives to see which would get there first, and as our men won the race, the Germans were falling in bunches, not saying anything about ourselves. After a severe fight we had to retire, and before we had retired two hundred yards we met more reinforcements, and we turned back with them, but could not move the heathens, but held our own for a while and then had to retire again.

We met more reinforcements, and these being a larger number of them, we again turned back with them, and after three counter attacks managed to drive them back, and we regained all lost ground, but let me tell you that the woods and fields were covered with dead and wounded bodies on both sides.

George Butcher and I stuck to each other and fought side by side. I lost him once when we were at them with our bayonets, but after a short time were together again until poor George dropped by my side, but how I came through I know not, unless it was the Lord's Holy will that I should do so. The sight was terrible.

I am sorry to say I am the only one left in the 1st Batt. C.M.R., and in the 8th Brigade M.G. Co., that can claim the old town as home; in fact, I don't think there are—men left all together.

I think Pte. Brady came through all right, but it was one of the heaviest Canadian casualty lists that ever were issued. The first and second battle of Y. and the last one at St. O. are considered child's play to this one; at least that's what they said at one of the English papers. I do not know myself, for I wasn't in the other battles.

Now dear parents, as I have told you all for this time, I will close, hoping all is well at home as this leaves me well.—From your son

Dave.

Give my best to all my friends and tell them to write. My address is,
No. 112011 Pte. D. H. Darrah,
M.G.S., 1st Batt C.M.R.,
8th Can. Inf. Brigade,
3rd Canadian Division,
B.E.F., France.

OTTAWA, July 7.—It is officially announced from the Press Censor's office that the following Canadian troops have arrived safely in England: 11th C.M.R., 42th C.M.R., 94th Battalion, 101st Battalion, 104th Battalion, No. 4 A.S.C. Divisional Train, A.S.C. Ambulance Workshop, R.C.R. draft (Halifax), and 87th Howitzer Battery draft (Quebec). Total number on board, 5,000.

No. 12 Field Ambulance (Winnipeg) and No. 13 Field Ambulance (Victoria), total 800, have also arrived safely.

"BIG DITCH" DOOMED OPINION IN BRITAIN

Experts Say this Admission by U. S. Can Not be Long Delayed.

MONTREAL, July 8.—The Financial Times stated that it has received private information from London to the effect that engineering circles of Great Britain are convinced that the Panama Canal is doomed. An admission of this by the United States Government cannot be delayed many months, it is stated.

"We are informed," says the newspaper, "that American engineers have been in Great Britain for the last two months endeavoring to secure the British engineering data on the alternative plan known as the Nicaragua route.

"It will be remembered that a strong body of engineers fought the Panama project in favour of Nicaragua.

"When your wife gets angry won't she speak to you?" "She won't do anything else."

Summer Care of Milk

When Milk is delivered it should be put into the Refrigerator at once, or, lacking a Refrigerator, into a cool place. A very brief exposure to Summer Heat tends to render Milk unfit for use. If you are using—

Pure Pasteurized Milk from The Peterborough Creamery

YOU ARE PROTECTED FROM MILK IMPURITIES

All Sediment and Dangerous Impurities are Removed. You are protected against contamination from infected cows, as well as from all other dangers liable to arise from Raw, Unpasteurized and Unclarified Milk.

No Milk is So Clean that it can not be Improved by Clarification.

The Clarifying and Pasteurizing of milk, properly executed, is an efficient and practical means for protecting the consuming public at all seasons of the year, but more especially in heated terms.

Milk keeps much longer when it is clarified and pasteurized.

Cleanliness and Clarification

The important compounds of milk, so essential to the growing child in stimulating growth, bone and muscular structure, are safeguarded from pollution by clarifying and pasteurizing, which also improves the milk for infant feeding as well as adult use.

IT IS NOT SO

Some objection is raised to the pasteurizing of milk because some think the heating of the milk destroys the healthful lactic acid so beneficial in all good milk. THIS IS NOT SO. It has been proven over and over again, that pasteurizing milk at a temperature of 140 degrees F., improves the value of the milk. The important proteids of milk are not changed by the heating at this temperature; but on the contrary, remain entirely normal and unchanged.

When a very high temperature is used, near the boiling point, some destructive changes are known to occur in milk; but they do not occur in correct pasteurizing at 140 degrees F., which is the temperature used in the pasteurizing process at the Peterborough Creamery.

Outbreak of Infantile Paralysis in New York

NEW YORK, July 6.—Infantile paralysis epidemic growing steadily worse and deaths daily are up in scores. An emergency call for nurses, additional physicians and volunteer sanitation workers was issued today. Churches have been asked to close all Sunday Schools and discontinue all picnics to avoid all gatherings of children. Washington experts say bacteria infected milk is most likely the cause of this epidemic.
